Jeremy Chambers

Jeremy "Jemo" Chambers is an American church planter, spiritual director, and missional practitioner whose distinctive calling is to refuse the dichotomy between intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors — to hold contemplative formation and missionary sentness as a single rhythm rather than two sequential stages. Working almost always as a writing-and-teaching dyad with his wife Monica Paredes Chambers, he occupies a rare seam in the contemporary missional church: the intersection of the Renovaré contemplative tradition (the Foster, Willard, and Hudson lineage) and the Hirsch-Frost, Forge, and 100 Movements missional-movement stream. After undergraduate study at Johnson University and two master's degrees from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Jeremy and Monica founded the Arise RVA Church Network in Richmond, Virginia in 2013, growing a network of microchurches before relocating to Denver in late 2019 to help launch the Denver expression of The Pando Collective alongside Rowland Smith. He now serves as Training Director of Forge America, the U.S. arm of Alan Hirsch's globally networked missional training movement, making him a curricular steward for the next generation of Forge-formed practitioners. His body of work — the two co-authored books Kingdom Contours (2020; revised 2024–25) and The Art of Missional Spirituality (2023), a sustained essay archive across the V3 Movement, Renovaré, and Missio Alliance, and a 2024 podcast circuit — consistently presents missional life as a way of being rather than a strategy to execute. His significance lies in carrying a genuinely integrative thesis into a movement tradition that has often treated spiritual formation as supportive rather than constitutive of mission.

Calling

Chambers' load-bearing conviction is that spirituality "doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city." He operationalizes this as rhythm — daily practices that fold formation and sentness together — rather than as program or campaign.

Body of work

- Books: The Art of Missional Spirituality: 31 Sacred Practices for Jesus-Followers (2023) and Kingdom Contours (2020 original; revised edition 2024–25), both co-authored with Monica Paredes Chambers and published in the 100 Movements Publishing orbit, with forewords from Alan Hirsch, Debra Hirsch, and Michael Frost.

- Frameworks: the Six Foundational Paradigms of Kingdom Contours; the 31 Sacred Practices; the Calling-vs-Assignment diagnostic; the adopted Cycle of Grace (Hudson/Haas); and the coined term "Grativangelism."
- Essays and audio: an essay archive at the V3 Movement (2018–2021), Renovaré (2022–2023), and Missio Alliance (2025), plus a 2024 book-launch podcast circuit.

Significance

Chambers is a practitioner-theologian who pairs microchurch planting with contemplative discipline, resists method absolutism ("microchurch is a form, not the form"), names distraction rather than opposition as the dominant spiritual threat, and models a marriage-as-writing-dyad rare in the missional publishing space.

Author Profile — Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/profile/identity.md

Identity

Jeremy Chambers — known informally as "Jemo" (the source of his personal domain, jemochambers.com) — is an American church planter, spiritual director, and missional trainer based in Denver, Colorado. He was born around 1986 (the year is inferred from his account of praying about a move to Denver since age thirteen in 1999) and relocated to Denver from Richmond, Virginia in late 2019 or early 2020. He is married to Monica Paredes Chambers, born in Costa Rica, who is his co-author and ministry partner; the two operate as a writing-and-teaching dyad, and the majority of his published work is signed jointly with her.

Roles

His primary roles are church planter, urban missionary, spiritual director, author, and trainer/coach. His primary organizational affiliations are Forge America (Training Director), The Pando Collective (Denver network leader), and the Arise RVA Church Network (founder, 2013). He is also a contributing author with the V3 Movement and a contributor to Renovaré.

Disambiguation

There are several public figures named Jeremy Chambers. This profile concerns only the American missional practitioner: Forge America Training Director, co-author of The Art of Missional Spirituality, and leader within the Arise and Pando microchurch networks. He should not be confused with Capt. Jeremy Chambers of the U.S. Army, an indie musician of the same name with a Bandcamp release, an education-doctorate holder teaching in Japan, or the Australian jockey who is the subject of the Jeremy Chambers Wikipedia article. Reliable disambiguating modifiers include "Jemo Chambers," "Forge America," "Pando Collective," "Arise RVA," and "missional spirituality."

Coined term

Chambers coined "Grativangelism" (gratitude + evangelism) in a 2018 V3 Movement essay — a practice-frame in which gratitude expressed publicly toward neighbors and strangers functions as an evangelistic posture.

Biography

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/profile/biography.md

Biography

Jeremy "Jemo" Chambers is an American church planter, urban missionary, spiritual director, author, and trainer whose vocational life sits at the seam between contemplative spiritual formation and missional-movement practice. Born around 1986, he has said he began praying about a future move to Denver at age thirteen — a vocational specificity that anticipated nearly two decades of geographic and ministerial trajectory. He earned a B.A. in Ministry Leadership from Johnson University and two master's degrees from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School (an M.A. in Intercultural Studies and a second master's in Christian Studies). In 2013, after a church-planting residency, Jeremy and his Costa-Rican-born wife Monica Paredes Chambers founded the Arise RVA Church Network in Richmond, Virginia — a network of gospel-centered microchurches that grew to roughly seven communities and affiliated with the V3 Movement under the Baptist General Association of Virginia. In late 2019 the family relocated to Denver, Colorado to help Rowland Smith launch the Denver expression of The Pando Collective, a Front Range network that connects, resources, and launches missional micro-expressions of the church. He has since become Training Director of Forge America, the U.S. arm of Alan Hirsch's globally networked missional training movement. Almost all of Chambers' published work is co-authored with Monica, who is herself a spiritual director, co-planter, and graphic designer; together they have written two books in the 100 Movements Publishing orbit and contributed essays and podcast appearances across the V3 Movement, Renovaré, and Missio Alliance. Their shared thesis is that spiritual formation and neighborhood mission belong together as one rhythm — a conviction that runs through every layer of their work.

Education

- B.A., Ministry Leadership — Johnson University
- M.A., Intercultural Studies — Trinity Evangelical Divinity School
- M.A., Christian Studies — Trinity Evangelical Divinity School (Renovaré's profile of Monica lists this second degree as "Church History"; the discrepancy is unresolved in public sources)

Ministry trajectory

- 2013: Founded Arise RVA Church Network in Richmond, VA (V3 / BGAV affiliated).
- 2013-2019: Grew Arise RVA into a network of microchurches.
- Late 2019 / 2020: Relocated to Denver, CO; helped launch the Denver expression of The Pando Collective with Rowland Smith.

- 2024-present: Training Director of Forge America; co-leader of Pando Denver.

Family

Jeremy is married to Monica Paredes Chambers, born in Costa Rica, who studied graphic design and serves as a co-author, co-planter, and spiritual director. The couple's published work is signed and written jointly. Children are not publicly documented.

Certifications

Five Capitals coach; Forge coach; Coach Approach Ministries; Auxano-certified Vision Strategist and Process Consultant; International Conference of Police Chaplains registered chaplain.

Theological Profile

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/profile/theology.md

Theology

Jeremy Chambers' theological center is missional spirituality — the conviction that intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors are not two stages but a single rhythm. His load-bearing claim, repeated across his books, essays, and interviews, is that spirituality "doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city." Formed evangelically at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School and shaped contemplatively in the Renovaré orbit (the Foster-Willard-Hudson lineage), he writes almost always as a dyad with his wife Monica Paredes Chambers, holding together two streams the wider missional church has often kept apart: classical spiritual formation and the Hirsch-Frost movemental tradition. His theology is Christocentric and Trinitarian at its root, kingdom-oriented in its horizon, incarnational in its missiology, and microchurch-ecclesial in its form — but its distinctive signature is the refusal of any dichotomy that would make contemplation preliminary to mission or mission a distraction from contemplation. Formation, for Chambers, is what makes mission sustainable; mission is where formation becomes real.

Christology and Trinity

Chambers names "Christocentric and Trinitarian — centering on Jesus as Lord" as the first of his six foundational paradigms in Kingdom Contours. Jesus is both the content of the gospel ("bring Jesus to people who would never walk into a church building") and the pattern of mission — the incarnation as the template for how disciples enter neighborhoods and cultures. Working with God rather than for God is a recurring Trinitarian theme: "We have to figure out a way to work with God, be connected with Him, and follow His lead," rather than relying on "our own strengths and abilities to work for God."

Missional Spirituality and Formation

The integration of mission and contemplation is the heart of his contribution. In The Art of Missional Spirituality he operationalizes it as thirty-one daily practices — Praying the Hours, silence, solitude, hospitality, walking prayer, "Secret Acts of Kindness" — arranged as a calendar-month rhythm. Humans, on this view, are formed by rhythmic practices over time rather than by discrete decisions or programs. He draws openly on the spiritual-disciplines tradition (Foster, Willard, Hudson, Renovaré) and treats the Lord's Prayer and Psalm 23 as "transforming prayers" for ordinary discipleship. His diagnosis of the contemporary spiritual threat is unusual: not heresy and not cultural opposition, but distraction — "the single most damaging danger to the inner life with Jesus."

Missiology and Kingdom

Chambers is incarnational and anti-attractional in his missiology, coaching churches to shift "from attractional, event-based models toward dispersed, community-focused approaches." He frames mission as movement rather than program — DNA that multiplies organically — extending Hirsch's mDNA into the six paradigms of Kingdom Contours. He tends to speak of the "Kingdom of Heaven" and "kingdom movements," and his horizon is frontier and global (participation in disciple-making and microchurch networks across thirty-five-plus countries). Evangelism is reframed warmly: his coinage "grativangelism" casts public gratitude toward neighbors and strangers as an evangelistic posture, and service is to be offered without needing credit — "Goodness can be beautiful in its own right."

Ecclesiology

His ecclesiology is microchurch and network-of-microchurches — the form he judges most adaptive for movement ("nimble, very adaptable... we watched these flourish and multiply"). Yet he is notably anti-absolutist: microchurch is a form, not the form, and he explicitly distances himself from those who treat it as "the only way." Practicing affiliation runs through the Baptist General Association of Virginia via Arise RVA and the V3 Movement, within a broadly non-denominational, networked style.

Leadership and Sustainable Mission

Leadership for Chambers is distributed, coaching-based, and APEST-aligned, embodied in his trainer-of-trainers role as Forge America's Training Director. A maturing emphasis is sustainable mission: he distinguishes durable calling from temporary assignment, adopts the Cycle of Grace (Hudson/Haas) as a compassion-fatigue diagnostic, and counsels practitioners to "put on your oxygen mask before helping someone else." This pastoral attention to longevity — guarding against self-inflicted compassion fatigue and over-attachment to assignments — distinguishes him within both the missional and contemplative streams he bridges.

Voice & Editorial Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/profile/voice-analysis.md

Voice Analysis

Jeremy Chambers writes and speaks as a practitioner-pastor, almost always in a co-authorial "we" voice shared with Monica Paredes Chambers. His prose moves inductively — opening with a concrete scene (a peace lily, a pandemic-era walk, a Costa Rican village, the Dead Sea), turning to Scripture, then to a numbered framework or rhythm, and closing with a practice the reader can try. He is theologically literate without being academic, citing mentors (Foster, Hudson, Boa, Hirsch, Frost, Woodward, Sanders) without over-quoting them. His single most distinctive stylistic fingerprint is botanical and ecological metaphor — the aspen colony (Pando), the peace lily, harvest, cross-pollination, flourishing, and multiplying.

Attribute	Description
Tone	Warm, pastoral, invitational, grounded; gentle rather than polemical; reflective and contemplative while remaining practical
Register	Practitioner-devotional; theologically literate but accessible; first-person-plural ("we") co-authorial voice; inductive scene-to-Scripture-to-practice cadence

Recurring phrases: "missional spirituality", "sacred practices", "micro-expressions of the church", "kingdom movements", "rhythm", "Cycle of Grace", "calling vs. assignment", "naturally supernatural", "cross-pollinate", "sustainable mission"

Favorite metaphors:

- Pando / the aspen colony — a single organism multiplying through interconnected roots
- The peace lily — wilting as a signal, drooping before it withers, as an image of attentiveness
- Harvest and laborers — "the Lord of the Harvest has already sent forth many laborers"
- Cross-pollination — ideas and practices spreading between communities
- Rhythm — the contemplative and missional poles held together in a single recurring beat

Load-bearing rhetorical move

Chambers' signature move is to refuse the dichotomy between intimacy with God and mission to neighbor: "Spirituality that doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city." He avoids framing formation and mission as sequential, compartmentalized, or hierarchical. He also avoids method absolutism — explicitly distancing himself from those who treat microchurch as "the only way" — and avoids credit-seeking framings of service: "Goodness can be beautiful in its own right. I can serve someone and never have to receive credit."

Representative quotes

- "Spirituality that doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city." (The Art of Missional Spirituality, back cover)
- "Distraction may be the single most damaging danger to the inner life with Jesus." ("A Few Solutions for Compassion Fatigue," Missio Alliance, 2025)
- "Compassion fatigue can often be self inflicted when someone overexposes themselves to the deluge of crisis and catastrophe." (Missio Alliance, 2025)
- "We often rely on ourselves, our own strengths and abilities to work for God. We have to figure out a way to work with God, be connected with Him, and follow His lead." (Shifting Culture Podcast, Ep. 197)

Books

All of Jeremy Chambers' books are co-authored with his wife, Monica Paredes Chambers.

The Art of Missional Spirituality: 31 Sacred Practices for Jesus-Followers

Field	Value
Authors	Jeremy Chambers & Monica Paredes Chambers
Foreword	Alan & Debra Hirsch
Publisher	100 Movements Publishing
Published	2023
ISBN-13	978-1-955142-44-1

Description: Thirty-one daily practices — one per day for a month — that fuse classical contemplative disciplines (Praying the Hours, silence, solitude, immersion in Ecclesiastes) with missional-contemplative hybrids (secret acts of kindness, neighborhood blessing, hospitality, walking prayer), so that intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors stop being separate items and become one integrated rhythm of life. This is Chambers' magnum opus to date and his most accessible entry point.

Kingdom Contours: Foundations, Paradigms, and Tools for Equipping Jesus Movements (Revised Edition)

Field	Value
Authors	Jeremy Chambers & Monica Paredes Chambers
Foreword	Alan Hirsch & Michael Frost
Publisher	100 Movements Publishing
Published	2024
ISBN-13	978-1-955142-70-0

Description: A planter-facing toolkit that restates and extends Alan Hirsch's mDNA into six foundational paradigms — Christocentric and Trinitarian, Discipleship, Incarnational Living, Movement Wisdom, Organic Systems, and Deep Community — and closes with a "Baby Steps: How to Start a Micro-Church" appendix. The revised edition reissues and refines the 2020 original under the 100 Movements Publishing imprint.

Kingdom Contours: Empowering Everyday People With the Tools to Shape Kingdom Movements (1st ed.)

Field	Value
Authors	Jeremy Chambers & Monica Paredes Chambers
Foreword	Alan Hirsch
Publisher	Missional Challenge Publishing
Published	2020
ISBN-13	978-1-952721-00-7

Description: The original edition of the six-paradigm microchurch-planting toolkit, published before the 100 Movements Publishing reissue. It introduces the framework that the 2024-25 revised edition later extends.

Frameworks

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/content/frameworks.md

Frameworks

Jeremy Chambers' frameworks are co-developed with Monica Paredes Chambers and sit at the seam of contemplative formation and missional movement. Each is grounded in his published books and documented teaching; borrowed frameworks are labeled as such.

Six Foundational Paradigms (Kingdom Contours)

Field	Value
Introduced	2020 (Kingdom Contours, 1st ed.); refined 2024–25 (Revised Edition)
Components	(1) Christocentric and Trinitarian; (2) Discipleship — being and making Jesus followers; (3) Incarnational Living — a missional strategic mindset; (4) Movement Wisdom — being movemental; (5) Organic Systems — structuring for multiplication; (6) Deep Community — taking on risks by faith
Adoption	Curricular spine of Arise RVA, Arise Church Denver, and Pando Collective microchurch coaching; paired with a "Baby Steps: How to Start a Micro-Church" appendix
Source	100 Movements — Kingdom Contours

Six planter-facing paradigms that extend and reframe Alan Hirsch's mDNA into an equipping toolkit, foregrounding Deep Community as the relational substrate the other five depend on.

The Art of Missional Spirituality — 31 Sacred Practices

Field	Value
Introduced	2023 (The Art of Missional Spirituality: 31 Sacred Practices for Jesus-Followers)
Components	Thirty-one daily practices — one per day for a month — fusing classical disciplines (Praying the Hours, silence, solitude, immersion in Ecclesiastes) with missional-contemplative hybrids ("Secret Acts of Kindness," neighborhood blessing, hospitality, walking prayer)
Structure	Calendar-month progression; the recurring image is "rhythm" holding the contemplative and missional poles together
Source	jemochambers.com — The Art of Missional Spirituality

A month-long, calendar-structured rule of life whose core thesis is the integration of mission and contemplation — "spirituality that doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city."

Calling vs. Assignment

Field	Value
Introduced	2025 ("A Few Solutions for Compassion Fatigue," Missio Alliance)
Components	(1) Calling — "overall trajectory oriented by God"; (2) Assignment — "temporary action highlighted by the Holy Spirit"; companion discernment tool is Alan Hirsch's APEST assessment
Use	Pastoral diagnostic for missional practitioners experiencing burnout from over-attachment to a specific assignment at the expense of their broader calling
Source	Missio Alliance — A Few Solutions for Compassion Fatigue

A two-term distinction that guards missional longevity by separating the durable trajectory God orients (calling) from the temporary tasks the Spirit highlights (assignment).

Microchurch as a Form (not the form)

Field	Value
Introduced	Operative across Arise RVA (2013–) and Pando Collective coaching; articulated in Kingdom Contours and 2024 interviews
Components	Network-of-microchurches as the most adaptive ecclesial form for movement — "nimble, very adaptable" — coupled with explicit anti-absolutism ("it's not the only way")
Posture	Coaches a shift from attractional, event-based models toward dispersed, community-focused micro-expressions of the church, without treating microchurch as the only valid form
Source	The Pando Collective — What We Do; Pivotal People (2024)

Microchurch is held as the most adaptive ecclesial form for movement while explicitly resisting method absolutism — a distinctive posture within microchurch advocacy.

Forge / Pando Apprenticeship and Training

Field	Value
Introduced	Forge America training pipeline (Training Director role, 2024–) and Pando Denver coaching (2020–)
Components	Trainer-of-trainers apprenticeship — equipping leaders to network, resource, and launch missional micro-expressions; modules include Who is Forge America?, Introduction to Mission, and Mobilizing Everyday Disciples (team-credited)
Lineage	Builds on Rowland Smith's Pando model and Hirsch's Forge formula; APEST-aligned, coaching-based, distributed leadership
Source	Forge America — Our People ; The Pando Collective

An apprenticeship-based, trainer-of-trainers framework that forms everyday disciples and planters to launch and resource missional micro-expressions across a region.

Cycle of Grace (adopted — Hudson / Haas)

Field	Value
Introduced	Not original to Chambers; used as his core compassion-fatigue diagnostic
Components	Acceptance → Sustenance → Significance → Fruitfulness; the reversed cycle (Fruitfulness → Significance → Acceptance) is the anti-pattern that depletes ministers
Use	Taught in his 2025 Missio Alliance essay and referenced in "Finishing Well" (Renovaré, 2022) as a guard for sustainable mission
Source	Missio Alliance — A Few Solutions for Compassion Fatigue

A borrowed four-stage diagnostic (Trevor Hudson / Jerry Haas) that Chambers uses to name how ministers deplete themselves by reversing grace's order — chasing fruitfulness before resting in acceptance.

Organizations & Affiliations

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/network/organizations.md

Organizations

Jeremy Chambers' organizational life spans three connected worlds: missional-movement training, microchurch networks, and the contemplative-formation tradition. His affiliations are documented below.

Forge America is the U.S. arm of Alan Hirsch's globally networked missional training movement, and Chambers serves as its Training Director — a national role current as of 2024–26 that gives him curricular stewardship over Forge's training pipeline and positions him as a coach and consultant to denominational and church leaders. (forgeamerica.com)

The Pando Collective is a Front Range network, headquartered in Colorado Springs, that exists to connect, resource, and launch missional micro-expressions of the church across Colorado Springs, Denver, and the surrounding region. Chambers leads the Denver expression, which he helped launch beginning in 2020 in partnership with Pando founder Rowland Smith — the connection that came through Forge. (thepandocollective.com)

The Arise RVA Church Network (also referenced as the Arise Network) is the network of gospel-centered microchurch communities that Jeremy and Monica Chambers founded in Richmond, Virginia in 2013. It grew to roughly seven communities, affiliated with the V3 Movement under the Baptist General Association of Virginia, and is the seedbed of the couple's microchurch practice. (ariserva.com, bgav.org)

The V3 Church Planting Movement is the Baptist General Association of Virginia's church-planting ministry, led nationally by JR Woodward. Chambers is an affiliated planter and a longtime contributing author to its blog (2018–2021). (thev3movement.org)

Renovaré is the spiritual-formation network in the Richard Foster / Dallas Willard tradition. Chambers has been a contributor of articles and a podcast guest since 2022, reflecting the contemplative pole of his integrative thesis. (renovare.org)

100 Movements Publishing is the Hirsch-founded publishing arm of the Movement Leaders Collective and the publisher of both of Chambers' current books (The Art of Missional Spirituality and the revised Kingdom Contours). (100mpublishing.com)

He also holds a denominational affiliation with the Baptist General Association of Virginia via Arise RVA and V3, and has contributed an essay to Missio Alliance (2025). No board memberships or formal educational appointments beyond his TEDS alumnus status are documented.

Audience & Reach

Audience Analysis: Jeremy Chambers

Status: Complete

Last updated: 2026-06-03

Overview

Jeremy "Jemo" Chambers reaches practitioners at the intersection of contemplative formation (Renovaré lineage) and missional microchurch work (Forge / 100 Movements / Hirsch-Frost stream). He teaches and writes almost always as a dyad with Monica Paredes Chambers.

Primary Audience Segments

Forge / Missional Training Cohort

- Aspiring and current Forge America trainees
- Microchurch planters seeking integrative formation + sentness
- Denver Front Range Pando Collective participants

Microchurch and V3 Network Leaders

- Arise RVA alumni and BGAV/V3-affiliated planters
- Leaders resisting method absolutism ("microchurch is a form, not the form")

Contemplative Formation Readers

- Renovaré audience; readers of The Art of Missional Spirituality
- Practitioners seeking daily rhythms that fold prayer and neighborhood mission together

Book Launch / Podcast Circuit (2024)

- Podcast listeners from Renovaré, Everyday Disciple, Pivotal People, Dandelion Resourcing, Shifting Culture

Content Preferences

- Rhythm-based practices over programmatic strategy
 - Integration of intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors
 - Practitioner memoir and essay form; accessible theology
 - Co-authored voice (Jeremy + Monica)

Jeremy Chambers: The Fragmentation Story

Status: Complete (abbreviated)

Last updated: 2026-06-03

The Story

Jeremy "Jemo" Chambers built his public corpus across three geographies and two ecclesial experiments — Arise RVA in Richmond (2013–2019), then Pando Denver with Rowland Smith (2020+), while ascending to Training Director of Forge America. His books with Monica live on 100 Movements Publishing and Amazon. His essays live on V3, Renovaré, and Missio Alliance. His 2024 book launch scattered across five podcasts in four months.

The integrative thesis — missional spirituality as a single rhythm, not two sequential stages — is consistent. The storage is not. A reader who discovers The Art of Missional Spirituality on Amazon does not automatically find the V3 essay archive, the Forge training pathway, the Pando Denver network, or the Renovaré contributor page. There is no confirmed personal newsletter bridging these surfaces.

Chambers' fragmentation is typical of a Forge-era practitioner-author: deep institutional embed (Forge, Pando, 100 Movements, Renovaré), two co-authored books, a strong essay tail — but no owned hub that catalogs the whole body of work for a leader arriving cold.

A Letter — Reflected Understanding

`docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/reflected-understanding/jeremy-chambers.md`

Jeremy Chambers: Reflected Understanding

A concise reflection spoken back so the language could be endorsed — familiar, but with edges that deepen. (Leader-safe: audience-sizing and commerce analysis are kept in staff notes, not here.)

Calling

You're called to refuse the dichotomy — to hold intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors as one rhythm rather than two stages. Not contemplation first and mission later, not mission for God set beside time with God as separate items on a list, but a single integrated way of life. Your own words carry the whole conviction: a spirituality that "doesn't draw you away from your neighbors but propels you into the lives of others and the needs of your city." That's the seam you stand in — between the Renovaré contemplative tradition you were formed by (Foster, Willard, Hudson) and the Hirsch-Frost, Forge, and 100 Movements missional stream you now help steward. Most voices live on one side of that seam. You live on the seam itself, and you've been building tools to help others stand there too: the six paradigms of Kingdom Contours, the thirty-one daily practices of The Art of Missional Spirituality, the calling-versus-assignment distinction that guards a missionary's longevity.

There's a pastoral steadiness in how you carry this. You name distraction, not opposition, as the dominant threat to the inner life. You resist method absolutism — microchurch is a form, not the form — even within your own ecosystem. You teach people to put on their own oxygen mask before helping others, and you model service that needs no credit: "Goodness can be beautiful in its own right." And you do almost all of it as a dyad with Monica — a marriage-as-writing-partnership that is itself a quiet argument for the integrated life you teach. The language you already use — rhythm, missional spirituality, micro-expressions, cross-pollinate, sustainable mission — is the right language. It's practitioner-pastoral, formed by Scripture and by years of actually planting, and it names a way of being rather than a strategy to execute.

Existing Content (before the platform we're building)

Where it lives. Your content lives in books — Kingdom Contours (2020; revised 2024–25) and The Art of Missional Spirituality (2023), both co-authored with Monica, both in the 100 Movements Publishing orbit, with forewords from Alan Hirsch, Debra Hirsch, and Michael Frost. It lives in a sustained essay archive at the V3 Movement (2018–2021), Renovaré (2022–2023), and Missio Alliance (2025). It lives in a 2024 podcast circuit built around the book launch (Pivotal People, Dandelion, Renovaré's Life With God, Everyday Disciple, Shifting Culture). And it lives in organizational and training contexts — Forge America, where you serve as Training Director; The Pando Collective, where you co-lead the Denver expression; and Arise RVA, the microchurch network you founded. Your personal site (jemochambers.com) anchors you and the books; the rest is spread across those other domains.

Credibility. It's strong and well-attested. Your books carry forewords and endorsements from the central voices of two traditions at once — Hirsch, Debra Hirsch, and Frost on the missional side; Richard Foster, Carolyn Arends, and Renovaré on the contemplative side — alongside Forge (Rowland Smith, Terry Ishee), V3 (JR Woodward), and Tampa Underground (Brian Sanders). Your Training Director role gives you genuine curricular stewardship over Forge's national pipeline. The authority is real; the issue isn't credibility — it's visibility, connection, and reuse.

How it lives online now. As silos. The books sit on retailer and publisher pages; the essays sit on three different organizational blogs; the podcast appearances sit on five different hosts' feeds; the training material sits inside Forge's platform and is team-credited rather than connected to your name. There's no single place where "everything Jeremy has said about missional spirituality" or "the six paradigms" is gathered, structured, and easy to find. So the work doesn't move in the sense of circulating, compounding, and pointing back to itself — it stays where it was first put.

The NOTs this addresses. Your content is largely not gathered under one surface you control; not structured and repurposed so talks become articles and book themes become courses; not interconnected, so the books, essays, podcasts, and training visibly reference each other; not optimized for discoverability, so a searcher for "missional spirituality," "microchurch," or "sustainable mission" lands on your material first; and not translated, despite Monica's Costa Rica heritage and your shared Latin America work. A unified, connected home is built to speak to each of these — gathering, structuring, repurposing, interconnecting, and amplifying what you already do — so your integrated way can actually circulate.

Constraints

The constraints you live under are emblematic of movement leaders, not personal failure. You're directing training for Forge nationally, co-leading a Pando network in Denver, pastoring and coaching microchurches, writing, and traveling a speaking and podcast circuit — much of it as a two-person team with Monica, which deepens the work but doesn't multiply the hours. Time for content strategy, for turning talks into articles, for building and maintaining a unified digital home, is scarce precisely because the work is in the room — with planters, neighbors, and the practices themselves. Your own teaching on compassion fatigue and the Cycle of Grace makes this sharper: you of all people know the cost of reversing grace's order and chasing fruitfulness before rest. A platform that reduces the lift — that helps gather, structure, repurpose, connect, and amplify what already exists — honors those constraints rather than adding to them, and lets your message reach more people without asking you to become a different kind of leader.

This document is a reflected understanding for Jeremy Chambers, intended to be right to the point, true, and valuable. It is preliminary until reviewed and endorsed.

Welcome Letter

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/jeremy-chambers/welcome-letter.md

Jeremy

You and Monica have built one of the most genuinely integrative bodies of work in the missional church — the rare corpus that refuses to choose between intimacy with God and engagement with neighbors and instead holds them as a single rhythm. It began in Richmond in 2013, when you founded the Arise RVA Church Network and grew it into a web of microchurch communities affiliated with the V3 Movement under the Baptist General Association of Virginia. It carried west in late 2019, when you moved to Denver to help Rowland Smith launch the Denver expression of The Pando Collective. It now runs through your role as Training Director of Forge America, where you steward the formation of the next generation of practitioners. Along the way you and Monica wrote two books in the 100 Movements Publishing orbit — Kingdom Contours, the six-paradigm planting toolkit that extends Hirsch's mDNA, and The Art of Missional Spirituality, your thirty-one daily practices that fuse contemplative discipline with neighborhood mission. You coined "Grativangelism." You named the difference between calling and assignment. You have taught that distraction, not opposition, is the gravest danger to the inner life. That is a remarkable inventory for a practitioner who still plants and still coaches.

And almost none of it lives in one place that belongs to you. The Art of Missional Spirituality sits on Amazon, on the 100 Movements page, and on Goodreads. The revised Kingdom Contours sits on its own Amazon listing; the 2020 original sits on Everand under a different imprint and a different subtitle. Your essays scatter across the V3 Movement blog, where eleven posts ran between 2018 and 2021, across two Renovaré articles, and across a single Missio Alliance piece from 2025 — eleven years of writing with no shared surface a reader can walk through. Your podcast footprint is real and uncollected: the Renovaré Life With God conversation on the Lord's Prayer, Everyday Disciple with Caesar Kalinowski, Dandelion Resourcing with Alex Absalom, Pivotal People, and Shifting Culture Episode 197 — all of them on other people's feeds. You host no podcast of your own. There is an Instagram handle at @jemochambers and a personal site that gathers the books, but no newsletter, no Substack, no place that turns a reader into someone you can reach again. The reach is genuine; the rails belong to other people. The relational layer is held the same way, and it is the layer your whole thesis depends on. The Arise communities you reproduced in Richmond, and the Denver micro-expressions you have helped launch through Pando, are connected to those networks, not to you. The Forge practitioners you train nationally are formed through Forge's pipeline and its Teachable courses, credited to the team rather than to your name. The endorsers and co-laborers who orbit your work — Rowland Smith, Terry Ishee, JR Woodward, Brian Sanders, Carolyn Arends, the Hirsches, Michael Frost — are one conversation away, but there is no surface where the people you have formed can find their way back to you once a cohort ends or a conference closes.

The largest pool of value, and the one most at risk of going unwritten, sits in your head and in your marriage. The judgment behind the thirty-one practices — why Praying the Hours, why secret acts of kindness, why immersion in Ecclesiastes — exists in fuller form than any book has captured. The Cycle of Grace as you actually teach it, the lived mechanics of calling versus assignment, the pastoral wisdom of refusing microchurch absolutism, the dyad method by which you and Monica write together — these are the things practitioners most need and the things least likely to make it onto a page on their own. The Forge training you deliver in rooms and on calls is taught a hundred times before it is ever written down once.

This is where Movemental's AI does work that was not previously possible. The inventory just walked through — the two books across two imprints, the eleven V3 essays, the two Renovaré articles, the five podcast appearances, the Forge and Pando relationships — was compiled by AI sitting with your public corpus for the time it would have taken a researcher weeks. The same approach now turns toward what is not yet public: AI-assisted capture of the reasoning behind the thirty-one practices, interview transcription of the calling-versus-assignment teaching, dictation that becomes draft and draft that becomes essay, the Forge training surfaced at your pace rather than a publisher's. The AI does the inventorying and the connective tissue. It does not replace your voice, and every draft is yours to edit, refuse, or rewrite. Authorship stays yours.

This is what the dashboard is built to do, and what we will do with you. First, aggregate: both books, the eleven essays, the five podcast appearances, and the embodied teaching as it gets surfaced, pulled into one hub. Second, interconnect: The Art of Missional Spirituality points at the Praying the Hours article points at the Renovaré conversation points at the Cycle of Grace teaching, so a reader who arrives for one practice leaves with the whole rhythm. Third, repurpose: the thirty-one practices become a guided thirty-one-day pathway under your name; Kingdom Contours becomes a microchurch-starter track with its "Baby Steps" appendix as the on-ramp. Fourth, amplify: search reach and the references that arrive once your work is findable in one place. The work this season is not authorship. It is translation of what you have already authored into a form practitioners can actually reach.

A year from now, jemochambers.com looks different. A missional-spirituality hub gathers both books, the V3 archive, the Renovaré pieces, and a thirty-one-day practice pathway a reader can begin the morning they arrive. A newsletter exists that did not before, and the Forge practitioners you train can stay connected after the cohort ends. A church planter in a city you have never visited finds the peace-lily essay on a Tuesday, starts the practice pathway that afternoon, and writes you on Friday — and this time the message comes to you.

This is your next season. The work ahead is not more content; you and Monica have built more than almost anyone in your tradition. It is making the integrated rhythm you already authored reach the practitioners it was written for, on a surface that is yours. You have taught that mission and contemplation are one. Let the place your work lives finally hold them together too.

— Movemental
