
MOVEMENTAL · ONBOARDED LEADER RESEARCH

Kate Coleman

Movement leader research dossier — profile, content catalog, digital presence, fragmentation story, and onboarding materials.

Generated June 09, 2026 · 16 sections · Slug: kate-coleman

Contents

1. 1. At a Glance — Summary
2. 2. Author Profile — Identity
3. 3. Biography
4. 4. Theological Profile
5. 5. Vocational Profile
6. 6. Voice & Editorial Identity
7. 7. Bibliography
8. 8. Frameworks
9. 9. Articles & Blog Posts
10. 10. Audio & Podcast
11. 11. Video Content
12. 12. Organizations & Affiliations
13. 13. The Fragmentation Story
14. 14. A Letter — Reflected Understanding
15. 15. Welcome Letter
16. 16. Reflected-Understanding · Kate-Coleman

At a Glance — Summary

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/summary.md

Kate Coleman — Digital Reality Profile

Slug: kate-coleman

Display name: Rev Dr Kate Coleman

Identity confidence: High

Identity resolution

This is the UK-based Christian leadership author and Baptist minister Rev Dr Kate Coleman — founding director of Next Leadership (nextleadership.co.uk), author of 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership and Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership, the first Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the UK and the first Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain (2006–2007). Email on file: kate.coleman@nextleadership.co.uk. She is distinct from "Kate Markin Coleman" (a US-based executive coach at the University of Chicago Leadership Initiative) and from other people named Kate Coleman. Confirmed across nextleadership.co.uk, CBE International, the Baptist Union of Great Britain, Premier Christianity, Church Times, and the Evangelical Alliance.

Bio synthesis

Born in Ghana before moving to England, Kate Coleman came to Christian faith while studying biochemistry and pharmacology at Southampton University. She was called into leadership soon after, first serving as a church elder in a congregation that initially opposed women leaders — an experience she has described as a "baptism of fire." Her first pastorate was at Chalk Farm Baptist Church in London, where she gained accreditation as the first Black woman accredited Baptist minister in the UK. In 2000 she moved to Birmingham and planted The Regeneration Centre, an innovative local church plant.

She became the first Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain (2006–2007), serving under the presidential theme "Stay Focused," and the first Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council (2012–2014). She has preached at the opening services of both Labour and Conservative Party conferences, and has worked with the United Nations on leadership development curriculum for women leaders. She was named among the 20 most influential Black Christian women leaders in the UK (2008) and one of the top 25 Women Racial Justice Champions by Churches Together in Britain & Ireland (2021).

She has more than 35 years of leadership experience across the church, charity, voluntary, and business sectors. She is a Certified Stakeholder Centered Coach and a former Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA), with executive education from Oxford's Saïd Business School.

Current role

Founding Director of Next Leadership (nextleadership.co.uk) — a leadership development organization equipping leaders in the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors. She works as a strategic advisor, mentor, and coach to leaders and organizations at local, national, and international levels.

Books / major works

- 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership: Overcome Self-Defeating Behaviour in Work and Ministry — originally self-published (2010, Next Leadership Publishing, ISBN 9780956557209); revised edition published by Zondervan (2020, ISBN 9780310119975), with a foreword by Elaine Storkey. Sold via Amazon UK / US, Barnes & Noble, Christianbook, Waterstones, Church House Bookshop (Hymns Ancient & Modern), and on Everand/Audible as audiobook.
- Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership — Inspired Wisdom from the Extraordinary, Ordinary People of the Bible — Next Leadership Publishing, November 2024 (ISBN 9781955142601). Endorsed by Christine Caine (Founder, A21 & Propel Women), Alan Hirsch (Founder, Movement Leaders Collective), Danielle Strickland (Founder, Boundless Communications), Oneya Okuwobi, and Ben Lindsay (Founder & CEO, Power the Fight). Sold in print, ebook, and audiobook via Amazon UK / US, Apple, Google Play, Spotify, Chirp, Barnes & Noble, and Waterstones.

Signature frameworks

- The seven self-defeating behaviours of 7 Deadly Sins: limiting self-perceptions, failure to draw the line (boundaries), inadequate personal vision, an unhealthy work-life rhythm, the "disease to please," colluding instead of confronting, and neglecting the inner circle / family matters.
- Metamorphic leadership (from Metamorph): godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission, read through biblical figures such as Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well.
- The four questions she uses in talks and coaching: "Why me? Why here? Why this? Why now?"

Digital presence

- Primary website: <https://www.nextleadership.co.uk> (organizational hub; also nextleadership.org)
- Linktree: linktr.ee/katecoleman
- LinkedIn: linkedin.com/in/kate-coleman-38294414/
- Facebook: facebook.com/KateColemanOfficial

- Program landing pages on the Next Leadership site: 7ds (the 7 Deadly Sins program) and /metamorph (the Metamorph book + Ellevation program).

Content landscape

- Programs / courses: the 7DS program (book + video study co-created with Cham Kaur-Mann, "Breakthrough" one-day events, peer-led book clubs, and a "My Deadly Sins" online self-assessment); Ellevation, an immersive learning experience for women built around Metamorph.
- Podcast appearances (guest): The Profile on Premier Plus, hosted by Andy Peck — "Leadership Special Kate Coleman: 'Transforming into leaders for tomorrow'" (Nov 2024, also on YouTube); TheoDisc Podcast — "Kate Coleman - Transform your Leadership"; The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast (InterVarsity) — "Kate Coleman: 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership"; Recovering God Podcast — "Women in Leadership with Kate Coleman."
- Articles: featured in CBE International's resource collection ("7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership," Dec 2019); interviews and profiles in Premier Christianity, Church Times, Woman Alive (February Book Club feature on Metamorph), and the Evangelical Alliance's idea magazine ("60 seconds with... Kate Coleman").

Gaps

- No personal author website — her name resolves to the organizational Next Leadership site, not a Kate Coleman hub; discovery runs through the company, not the person.
- No newsletter under her own name.
- No hosted podcast — she appears only as a guest; her audio is scattered across other people's shows on Premier Plus, Podbean, Apple Podcasts, and InterVarsity feeds.
- No personal YouTube channel — video lives on third-party channels (Premier Plus) and behind the 7DS/Metamorph program pages.
- No unified archive that links the books, programs, podcast appearances, and articles together; assets sit on separate retail platforms and partner publications with no layer above them.
- Embodied teaching largely uncaptured — decades of coaching, mentoring, and the curation behind the Breakthrough events and Ellevation cohort exist mostly in the room.

Author Profile — Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/profile/identity.md

Identity

Roles

- Founding Director, Next Leadership — leadership development organization serving the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors.
- First Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the United Kingdom.
- First Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain (2006–2007), serving under the presidential theme "Stay Focused."
- First Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council (2012–2014).
- Church planter — founded and led The Regeneration Centre, Birmingham (from 2000).
- Former pastor of Chalk Farm Baptist Church, London.

Traditions

- Baptist (Baptist Union of Great Britain).
- British evangelical leadership.
- Women-in-leadership and biblical-equality stream (CBE International).

Known for

- Naming the seven self-defeating behaviours that limit women leaders, through 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership.
- "Metamorphic leadership" — transformation read through the ordinary, extraordinary people of the Bible.
- Strategic advising, mentoring, and coaching of leaders across four sectors over thirty-five-plus years.
- A string of historic "firsts" as a Black woman in British Baptist and evangelical leadership.

Credentials

- Certified Stakeholder Centered Coach.
- Former Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA).
- Executive education, Saïd Business School, University of Oxford.
- Background in biochemistry and pharmacology, University of Southampton.

Recognition

- Named among the 20 most influential Black Christian women leaders in the UK (2008).
- One of the top 25 Women Racial Justice Champions, Churches Together in Britain & Ireland (2021).

Contact / presence

- Primary site: <https://www.nextleadership.co.uk>
- Linktree: <https://linktr.ee/katecoleman>
- LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/kate-coleman-38294414/>
- Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/KateColemanOfficial>

Biography

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/profile/biography.md

Biography

Rev Dr Kate Coleman is a British Baptist minister, author, and leadership development specialist who has spent more than thirty-five years equipping leaders across the church, charity, voluntary, and business sectors. Born in Ghana before moving to England, she came to Christian faith while studying biochemistry and pharmacology at Southampton University, and was drawn into leadership soon afterward — first as a church elder in a congregation that initially opposed women leaders, an experience she has described as a "baptism of fire." She became the first Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the United Kingdom, the first Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain (2006–2007), and the first Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council (2012–2014).

Her first pastorate was at Chalk Farm Baptist Church in London, where she gained her ministerial accreditation. In 2000 she moved to Birmingham and planted The Regeneration Centre, an innovative local church plant. She has preached at the opening services of both Labour and Conservative Party conferences and has worked with the United Nations on leadership development curriculum for women leaders.

Coleman is the author of 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership: Overcome Self-Defeating Behaviour in Work and Ministry — first self-published and later issued in a revised edition by Zondervan — and Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership, her reading of leadership through biblical figures such as Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well. She was named among the 20 most influential Black Christian women leaders in the UK (2008) and one of the top 25 Women Racial Justice Champions by Churches Together in Britain & Ireland (2021).

Today she is the founding director of Next Leadership, a leadership development organization equipping leaders in the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors, where she works as a strategic advisor, mentor, and coach to leaders and organizations at local, national, and international levels. She is a Certified Stakeholder Centered Coach and a former Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA), with executive education from Oxford's Saïd Business School.

Theological Profile

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/profile/theology.md

Theology & Leadership Emphases

Transformation as the heart of leadership

Coleman's central conviction is that leadership change is inseparable from personal transformation. The title Metamorph names it directly: leaders are not merely trained but transformed — a metamorphosis of life that issues in a transformation of leadership. She frames this transformation along three lines: godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission.

Scripture read through ordinary, extraordinary people

Her theological method is biographical and narrative. In Metamorph she reads leadership formation through the lives of biblical figures — Moses, Esther, the Woman at the Well — treating them as "extraordinary, ordinary people" whose stories disclose how God forms leaders through real, unfinished lives rather than ideal ones.

Naming the self-defeating

A distinctive theological-pastoral emphasis is her willingness to name what holds leaders back. The "seven deadly sins" framing turns inward: limiting self-perceptions, failure to set boundaries, inadequate personal vision, an unhealthy work-life rhythm, the "disease to please," colluding instead of confronting, and neglecting family and inner circle. These are treated not as moral failings to be shamed but as patterns to be surfaced, owned, and transformed.

Women, calling, and the Spirit

Coleman holds a clear biblical-equality conviction: where the Spirit is given room, women rise to lead. Her own historic "firsts" — first Black woman accredited Baptist minister, first Black woman President of the Baptist Union, first Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council — are read by her not as personal achievement but as evidence of what the Spirit does when calling is honoured rather than constrained. Her association with CBE International situates her in the biblical-equality tradition.

Formation over performance

Throughout, the emphasis falls on inner formation as the engine of durable, public leadership. Rhythm, boundaries, self-perception, and relationships are treated as theological matters — the soul-work without which leadership becomes self-defeating. The recurring diagnostic "Why me? Why here? Why this? Why now?" is a tool for re-anchoring leaders in calling rather than in role or achievement.

Vocational Profile

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/profile/calling-profile.md

Calling Profile

Kate Coleman's vocational arc has been a sustained call to form leaders — and especially to clear the obstacles, internal and structural, that keep gifted people from leading well. The call surfaced early and against resistance. She came to faith as a science student at Southampton, was drawn into leadership soon after, and took her first significant role as an elder in a church that did not initially welcome women in leadership. She has named that season a "baptism of fire," and it set the question she has carried ever since: what is it that holds leaders back, and what would it take to set them free?

That question moved from the pew to the pulpit to the page. Her first pastorate at Chalk Farm Baptist Church in London made her the first Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the UK — not a goal she set out to claim, but a threshold she crossed because the call would not let her stop short of it. In 2000 she planted The Regeneration Centre in Birmingham, learning the costly, on-the-ground work of building a church from nothing. The "firsts" accumulated: President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain, Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council, preacher at the opening of national party conferences, contributor to United Nations leadership curriculum for women. In each, the through-line is the same — she went first so that others could follow.

The founding of Next Leadership gathered the calling into a vocation she could give the rest of her life to. There, the pastoral instinct became a discipline: strategic advising, mentoring, and coaching for leaders across the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors. 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership was the calling written down — the seven self-defeating behaviours named so plainly the book outgrew its self-published run and was taken up by Zondervan. Metamorph extended it from diagnosis to transformation, reading godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission through the ordinary, extraordinary people of Scripture.

Her calling now is curatorial as much as instructional. After thirty-five years she holds an enormous store of judgment — who is ready for which room, why a particular leader keeps stalling, how a transformation actually sequences — and the task of this season is to translate that embodied wisdom into forms others can reach. The four questions she returns to in talks and coaching — "Why me? Why here? Why this? Why now?" — are as much her own ongoing examination as a tool she hands to others. The vocation is not finished; it is being handed on.

Voice & Editorial Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/profile/voice-analysis.md

Voice Analysis

Field	Value
Tone	warm, candid, encouraging, pastoral, quietly authoritative
Register	practitioner / pastoral — a coach and minister speaking to leaders as peers

Kate Coleman's voice combines the directness of an executive coach with the warmth of a pastor. She names hard things plainly — self-defeating behaviours, the cost of people-pleasing, the limits leaders place on themselves — but always toward transformation rather than rebuke. She speaks from Scripture and from decades in the room, moving easily between biblical narrative and the lived realities of leading across sectors. Her questions do as much work as her statements: she reorients leaders by asking rather than telling.

Recurring phrases:

- "Why me? Why here? Why this? Why now?"
- "self-defeating behaviour"
- "the disease to please"
- "transforming your life and leadership"
- "godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission"
- "extraordinary, ordinary people of the Bible"
- "Stay focused"

Favorite metaphors:

- Metamorphosis / transformation — leadership as a metamorphic change of the whole person, not just acquired skill.
- The seven deadly sins — naming self-defeating leadership patterns through the inherited language of "sins" turned inward and diagnostic.
- Baptism of fire — formation forged through resistance and trial.
- Drawing the line — boundaries as a leadership discipline.
- The inner circle — the protected core of family and key relationships a leader must not neglect.

Bibliography

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/content/books.md

Books

7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership: Overcome Self-Defeating Behaviour in Work and Ministry

Field	Value
Published	2020
Publisher	Zondervan (revised edition); originally self-published 2010 via Next Leadership Publishing
ISBN	9780310119975 (Zondervan, 2020); 9780956557209 (original, 2010)
Foreword	Elaine Storkey
URL	https://www.amazon.com/Deadly-Sins-Women-Leadership-Self-Defeating/dp/0310119979

Description: Coleman's foundational work names seven self-defeating behaviours that hold women — and leaders generally — back: limiting self-perceptions, failure to draw the line (boundaries), inadequate personal vision, an unhealthy work-life rhythm, the "disease to please," colluding instead of confronting, and neglecting the inner circle and family. First self-published in 2010 and later revised and released by Zondervan in 2020 with a foreword by Elaine Storkey, it pairs careful research with narrative and practical mentoring toward transformation rather than shame.

Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership — Inspired Wisdom from the Extraordinary, Ordinary People of the Bible

Field	Value
Published	2024
Publisher	100 Movements Publishing / Next Leadership Publishing
ISBN	9781955142601
URL	https://www.amazon.com/Metamorph-Transforming-Leadership-Inspired-Extraordinary/dp/1955142602

Description: Released in November 2024, Metamorph moves from diagnosis to transformation, reading leadership formation through biblical figures such as Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well — "extraordinary, ordinary people of the Bible." Coleman frames metamorphic leadership along three lines: godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission. The book carries endorsements from Christine Caine (A21 / Propel Women), Alan Hirsch (Movement Leaders Collective), Danielle Strickland (Boundless Communications), Oneya Okuwobi, and Ben Lindsay (Power the Fight).

Frameworks

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/content/frameworks.md

Frameworks

The Seven Self-Defeating Behaviours

Field	Value
Introduced	2010 (7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership)
Components	Limiting self-perceptions; failure to draw the line (boundaries); inadequate personal vision; an unhealthy work-life rhythm; the "disease to please"; colluding instead of confronting; neglecting the inner circle / family
Source	7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership

A diagnostic naming the seven internal patterns that most often hold leaders back, surfaced so they can be owned and transformed rather than hidden.

Metamorphic Leadership

Field	Value
Introduced	2024 (Metamorph)
Components	Godly self-discovery; healthy relationships; Spirit-led mission — read through biblical figures such as Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well
Source	Metamorph

A model of leadership as whole-person transformation, formed through Scripture's ordinary, extraordinary people rather than acquired as technique.

The Four Questions

Field	Value
Introduced	— (used in talks and coaching)
Components	"Why me?" · "Why here?" · "Why this?" · "Why now?"
Source	The Profile — Premier Plus

A re-orienting diagnostic Coleman uses to anchor leaders back in calling and context rather than in role or achievement.

Articles & Blog Posts

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/content/articles.md

Articles

Title	Outlet	Date	URL
When the Spirit is left to move, women rise up to lead	Premier Christianity	—	https://www.premierchristianity.com/interviews/kate-coleman-when-the-spirit-is-left-to-move-women-rise-up-to-lead/16536.article
Interview: Kate Coleman, founder and co-director, Next Leadership	Church Times	2013-03-28	https://www.churchtimes.co.uk/articles/2013/28-march/features/interviews/interview-kate-coleman-founder-and-co-director-next-leadership
February Book Club: Metamorph — Transforming Your Life and Leadership	Woman Alive	—	https://www.womanalive.co.uk/february-book-club-metamorph-transforming-your-life-and-leadership-by-kate-coleman/18862.article
60 seconds with... Kate Coleman	Evangelical Alliance (idea)	—	https://www.eauk.org/idea/60-seconds-with-kate-coleman.cfm
7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership	CBE International	2019-12	https://www.cbeinternational.org/person/kate-coleman/
Kate Coleman (profile)	Baptist Union of Great Britain	—	https://www.baptist.org.uk/Articles/547636/Kate_Coleman.aspx
Book Review: Kate Coleman's new book, Metamorph	MODEM	2025-04-08	https://www.modemuk.org/2025/04/08/book-review-kate-colemans-new-book-metamorph/

Audio & Podcast

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/content/audio.md

Audio

Episode Title	Podcast	Date	URL
Leadership Special — Kate Coleman: "Transforming into leaders for tomorrow"	The Profile (Premier Plus), hosted by Andy Peck	2024-11	https://www.premier.plus/the-profile/podcasts/episodes/leadership-special-kate-coleman-transforming-into-leaders-for-tomorrow
Kate Coleman — Transform your Leadership	TheoDisc Podcast	—	https://theodisc.podbean.com/e/kate-coleman-transform-your-leadership/
Kate Coleman: 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership	The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast (InterVarsity)	—	https://podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/kate-coleman-7-deadly-sins-of-women-in-leadership/id1355442756
Women in Leadership with Kate Coleman	Recovering God Podcast	—	—

Video Content

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/content/videos.md

Videos

Title	Channel	Date	URL
Leadership Special — Kate Coleman: "Transforming into leaders for tomorrow"	The Profile / Premier (YouTube)	2024-11	https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iBkcEzvdNFU

Organizations & Affiliations

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/network/organizations.md

Organizations & Network

Founded / leads

- Next Leadership (<https://www.nextleadership.co.uk>) — leadership development organization Coleman founded and directs, serving the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors.
- The Regeneration Centre, Birmingham — innovative local church plant she founded and led from 2000.

Held office / pastored

- Baptist Union of Great Britain — first Black woman President (2006–2007), under the theme "Stay Focused."
- Evangelical Alliance — first Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council (2012–2014).
- Chalk Farm Baptist Church, London — first pastorate; site of her ministerial accreditation.

Affiliations & partners

- CBE International (Christians for Biblical Equality) — featured in their resource collection; situates her in the biblical-equality tradition.
- Churches Together in Britain & Ireland — named a top-25 Women Racial Justice Champion (2021).
- United Nations — leadership development curriculum work for women leaders.
- Royal Society of Arts — former Fellow (FRSA).
- Saïd Business School, University of Oxford — executive education.
- University of Southampton — studied biochemistry and pharmacology.

Missional-network adjacency (via Metamorph endorsements)

- Alan Hirsch — Movement Leaders Collective.
- Christine Caine — A21 / Propel Women.
- Danielle Strickland — Boundless Communications.
- Ben Lindsay — Power the Fight.
- Oneya Okuwobi.

Program collaborators

- Cham Kaur-Mann — co-creator of the 7DS book-and-video study.

Publishing & media partners

- Zondervan — publisher of the revised 7 Deadly Sins.
- 100 Movements Publishing / Next Leadership Publishing — Metamorph.
- Premier (Premier Christianity, Premier Plus), Church Times, Woman Alive, Evangelical Alliance (idea), MODEM, InterVarsity — interviews, reviews, and podcast appearances.

The Fragmentation Story

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/fragmentation-story.md

Kate Coleman — Fragmentation Story

The Story

Rev Dr Kate Coleman has spent more than 35 years building a body of work on Christian leadership — two books, two signature programs, decades of coaching and mentoring, a string of historic "firsts," and a steady presence on other people's stages and microphones. Yet there is no single place a practitioner can go to find Kate Coleman's work. Her name resolves to Next Leadership, the organization she founded and directs, not to a hub of her own. The books sit on retail platforms. The programs sit on company landing pages. The talks sit inside conferences. The interviews sit on partner publications and guest podcast feeds. The largest body of material — the judgment she has accumulated coaching leaders across church, charity, business, and government — sits in the room and in her head. All of it exists; none of it is gathered.

Informational Fragmentation

- 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership — self-published first (2010, Next Leadership Publishing) and later revised under Zondervan (2020), with a foreword by Elaine Storkey. Sold on Amazon UK (<https://www.amazon.co.uk/dp/0956557201>) and Amazon US (<https://www.amazon.com/dp/0310119979>), Barnes & Noble (<https://www.barnesandnoble.com/w/7-deadly-sins-of-women-in-leadership-kate-coleman/1137257277>), Christianbook (<https://www.christianbook.com/leadership-overcome-defeating-behavior-ministry-revised/kate-coleman/9780310119982/pd/107089EB>), Church House Bookshop (<https://chbookshop.hymnsam.co.uk/books/9780310119975/7-deadly-sins-of-women-in-leadership>), Waterstones, and as audiobook on Audible/Everand (<https://www.everand.com/audiobook/631956070/>).
- Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership — Next Leadership Publishing, November 2024 (<https://www.amazon.co.uk/dp/1955142602>). Spread across Amazon UK/US, Apple, Google Play, Spotify, Chirp, Barnes & Noble, and Waterstones in print, ebook, and audiobook.
- 7DS program — book + video study (co-created with Cham Kaur-Mann), "Breakthrough" one-day events, book clubs, and a "My Deadly Sins" self-assessment, all living on one company landing page: <https://www.nextleadership.co.uk/7ds>
- Metamorph / Ellevation program — the immersive women's learning experience built around the book: <https://www.nextleadership.co.uk/metamorph>

- Podcast appearances (guest only): The Profile on Premier Plus — "Leadership Special Kate Coleman: 'Transforming into leaders for tomorrow'" (<https://www.premier.plus/the-profile/podcasts/episodes/leadership-special-kate-coleman-transforming-into-leaders-for-tomorrow>); YouTube <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iBkcEzvdNFU>; TheoDisc Podcast — "Kate Coleman – Transform your Leadership" (<https://theodisc.podbean.com/e/kate-coleman-transform-your-leadership/>); The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast / InterVarsity (<https://podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/kate-coleman-7-deadly-sins-of-women-in-leadership/id1355442756>); Recovering God Podcast — "Women in Leadership with Kate Coleman."
- Articles / profiles: CBE International resource entry (<https://www.cbeinternational.org/person/kate-coleman/>); Premier Christianity interview (<https://www.premierchristianity.com/interviews/kate-coleman-when-the-spirit-is-left-to-move-women-rise-up-to-lead/16536.article>); Church Times interview (<https://www.churchtimes.co.uk/articles/2013/28-march/features/interviews/interview-kate-coleman-founder-and-co-director-next-leadership>); Woman Alive Book Club feature (<https://www.womanalive.co.uk/february-book-club-metamorph-transforming-your-life-and-leadership-by-kate-coleman/18862.article>); Evangelical Alliance idea (<https://www.eauk.org/idea/60-seconds-with-kate-coleman.cfm>); Baptist Union profile (https://www.baptist.org.uk/Articles/547636/Kate_Coleman.aspx).
- Social / link surfaces: Linktree (linktr.ee/katecoleman), LinkedIn (linkedin.com/in/kate-coleman-38294414/), Facebook (facebook.com/KateColemanOfficial).
- Primary site: <https://www.nextleadership.co.uk> (organizational, not personal).

Relational Fragmentation

- Her relationships are held inside the institutions that introduced them, not in any structure of her own: the Baptist Union of Great Britain (where she was the first Black woman President, 2006–2007); the Evangelical Alliance Council (first Black woman Chair, 2012–2014); the United Nations leadership-curriculum work; Churches Together in Britain & Ireland; and the congregations she pastored — Chalk Farm Baptist Church and The Regeneration Centre, Birmingham.
- Program rosters and cohort lists for 7DS Breakthrough events, the book clubs, and the Ellevation cohort sit in Next Leadership's own systems and registration tools, separate from any contact she controls personally.
- Her coaching and mentoring relationships — the leaders across public, private, voluntary, and church sectors she has advised for decades — live in her own files, calendar, and memory.
- The missional-network adjacency is already visible in her Metamorph endorsers: Alan Hirsch (Movement Leaders Collective) and Christine Caine (A21 / Propel Women), with Danielle Strickland and Ben Lindsay (Power the Fight). That is one endorsement degree connecting her into the wider missional network — a connection currently recorded only on a book's back cover.

Embodied / In-Their-Head layer

- The judgment calls behind the 7DS program — why these seven behaviours, how the Breakthrough day is sequenced, what makes the book-club guides land — exist as curation decisions she made, not as written rationale.
- The case studies behind 35 years of coaching leaders across sectors, and the pastoral wisdom of planting and leading The Regeneration Centre, were lived before they were ever written about.
- The "Why me? Why here? Why this? Why now?" diagnostic she uses to reorient leaders exists mostly as a conversation she has had a thousand times.
- The connective relational tissue — who in her network should meet whom, which leader is ready for which room — lives only in her head, her phone, and her notebooks.

Synthesis

Kate Coleman's fragmentation pattern is organization-masking-the-person. Almost everything she has made is real, public, and high quality — but it is filed under Next Leadership, scattered across retail platforms, or buried inside other people's podcasts and conferences. There is no Kate Coleman hub; there is no newsletter, no hosted podcast, no personal YouTube, no archive linking book to program to interview to talk. A reader who hears her on The Profile cannot easily get from that episode to Metamorph, to the 7DS self-assessment, to the Ellevation cohort. And the deepest layer — decades of coaching judgment and the curation behind her programs — has barely been captured at all. The work exists; the layer that lets people find their way from any one piece to every other piece does not.

A Letter — Reflected Understanding

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/reflected-understanding/kate-coleman.md

A Letter to Kate Coleman

Calling

You have spent more than thirty-five years on a single question: what is it that holds leaders back, and what would it take to set them free? It surfaced early and against resistance. You came to faith as a science student at Southampton, were drawn into leadership soon after, and took your first real role as an elder in a church that did not at first welcome women in leadership — a season you have called a "baptism of fire." That fire set the work of your life. You have carried the question from the pew to the pulpit to the page, and you have answered it not with theory but with formation: naming the patterns that defeat leaders, and walking with people through the change.

The calling has repeatedly put you first across a threshold so that others could follow. First Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the UK. First Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain. First Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council. You planted The Regeneration Centre in Birmingham and learned the costly work of building a church from nothing. You preached at the opening of national party conferences and helped shape leadership curriculum for the United Nations. None of these were trophies you set out to collect; each was a place the calling would not let you stop short of.

In 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership you wrote the calling down — the seven self-defeating behaviours named so plainly the book outgrew its self-published run and was taken up by Zondervan. In Metamorph you carried it from diagnosis to transformation, reading godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission through Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well. And in the coaching chair, conference after conference, you have returned to four questions — why me, why here, why this, why now — that re-anchor a leader in calling rather than role. Your vocation now is as much curatorial as instructional: you hold a vast store of judgment about who is ready for which room, and the task of this season is to hand it on.

Existing Content (before the platform we're building)

You have built a real and durable body of work, and almost all of it is public — but it is scattered, and it is filed under the organization rather than under you.

Two books carry the core. 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership sits on Amazon UK and US, Barnes & Noble, Christianbook, the Church House Bookshop, Blackwell's, and on Audible and Everand as an audiobook. Metamorph is spread across Amazon, Apple, Google Play, Spotify, Chirp, Barnes & Noble, and Waterstones, in print, ebook, and audio.

Around the books sit two signature programs, each on its own company landing page: the 7DS book-and-video study you co-created with Cham Kaur-Mann, with its Breakthrough one-day events, peer-led book clubs, and the "My Deadly Sins" self-assessment; and Ellevation, the immersive learning experience for women built on Metamorph.

Your recorded voice lives inside other people's shows. You talked through Metamorph and the four questions with Andy Peck on The Profile (Premier Plus, also on YouTube), went deeper on the TheoDisc Podcast, and walked through the seven behaviours again on The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast and the Recovering God Podcast. Your interviews and profiles sit on partner publications — Premier Christianity, Church Times, Woman Alive, the Evangelical Alliance's idea, CBE International, the Baptist Union — with no thread tying them together.

The relational layer is fragmented the same way. The people you have led are held inside the institutions that introduced them: the Baptist Union, the Evangelical Alliance Council you chaired, Churches Together in Britain & Ireland, the UN curriculum work. The cohort lists for Breakthrough and Ellevation live in Next Leadership's own systems. The leaders you coach across business, charity, church, and government live in your phone and your memory. You already sit one endorsement degree from the wider missional network — Alan Hirsch and Christine Caine both put their names on Metamorph — a connection currently recorded only on a book's back cover.

And the largest pool of value you hold is the one least likely to be written down: why those seven behaviours and not eight, how the Breakthrough day is sequenced so it lands, the case studies behind thirty-five years of coaching, the wisdom of planting and leading The Regeneration Centre. That material has barely left the room.

Constraints

A few realities shape the season ahead, and they are yours to set.

Your name resolves to Next Leadership, not to a hub of your own — there is no personal author site, no newsletter under your name, no hosted podcast, no personal video channel, and no archive linking book to program to interview to talk. That is the gap to close, but closing it should not contradict who you are: being founding director of Next Leadership is the reason this work matters now, not an obstacle to it.

The deepest material is embodied, and surfacing it must happen at your pace. The aim is to capture judgment and case wisdom on your terms — through assisted interviews, dictation, and capture you control — never to manufacture a voice that is not yours. Every draft remains yours to edit, refuse, or rewrite. The authorship stays with you; the work is to gather and connect what you have already built so the practitioners it was written for can finally reach it.

Welcome Letter

`docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/welcome-letter.md`

Kate

You have built one of the most durable bodies of work on leadership formation in the British church, across thirty-five years and four sectors at once. Two books carry the core of it: 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership, which named the seven self-defeating behaviours so plainly it outgrew its self-published run and was taken up by Zondervan, and Metamorph: Transforming Your Life and Leadership, your reading of Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well. Around the books sit programs, talks, and decades of coaching. You were the first Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the UK, the first Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain, and today you are the founding director of Next Leadership.

All of it is somewhere. None of it is in one place. 7 Deadly Sins is sold on Amazon UK and US, Barnes & Noble, Christianbook, the Church House Bookshop, and on Audible. Metamorph is scattered across Amazon, Apple, Google Play, Spotify, and Waterstones. The programs live on separate company pages: the 7DS book-and-video study, its Breakthrough day, the book clubs, the "My Deadly Sins" self-assessment on one URL, and Ellevation on another. Your recorded voice sits inside other people's shows. You talked through Metamorph and the four questions — why me, why here, why this, why now — with Andy Peck on The Profile, went deeper on TheoDisc Podcast, and walked through the seven behaviours again on The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast and Recovering God Podcast. The relational layer is fragmented the same way. The people you have led are held inside the institutions that introduced them — the Baptist Union, the Evangelical Alliance Council you once chaired, Churches Together in Britain & Ireland, the United Nations curriculum work. The cohort lists for Breakthrough and Ellevation live in Next Leadership's own systems. The leaders you coach across business, charity, church, and government live in your phone and memory. You already sit one endorsement degree from the wider missional network: Alan Hirsch of the Movement Leaders Collective and Christine Caine of Propel Women both put their names on Metamorph. What is missing is the layer above all of this — the one that lets a reader move from any single piece to every other, and lets people stay connected to you after the conference that introduced them has ended.

The largest pool of value you hold is also the one most likely to go unwritten. It is the material that has never left the room. The judgment behind the 7DS framework — why those seven behaviours and not eight, how the Breakthrough day is sequenced so it lands — exists as decisions you made, never written down. The case studies behind thirty-five years of coaching across four sectors were lived, not published. The wisdom of planting and leading The Regeneration Centre in Birmingham sits in memory. The "why me, why here, why this, why now" diagnostic is a conversation you have had a thousand times in coffee shops, on calls, and in coaching chairs. Knowing who in your network should meet whom, and which leader is ready for which room, lives only in your head. The artifacts are not the whole of your work. The room is.

This is where Movemental's AI does work that was not previously possible. The inventory you have just read was compiled by AI sitting with your public corpus for the span of what would have taken a human researcher weeks. The same approach now turns toward what is not yet public: AI-assisted interview transcripts, extraction from your Breakthrough notes, conversation capture, dictation that becomes a draft, a draft that becomes an essay. The tools are finally good enough that the material in your head can be surfaced at your pace rather than at a publisher's. The AI does not replace your voice. Every draft is yours to edit, refuse, or rewrite. It does the inventorying and builds the connective tissue. The authorship stays yours.

This is what the dashboard is built to do, and what we will do with you. First, aggregate: pull the books, the 7DS and Ellevation programs, the guest episodes, the talks, the self-assessment, and the embodied material as it surfaces into one place under your name. Second, interconnect: trace the real chain through your corpus, so Metamorph points at the Ellevation cohort, which points at The Profile episode where you teach the four questions, which points back at the 7 Deadly Sins assessment a reader can take in five minutes. Third, repurpose: the 7DS video study becomes a public sequence rather than a gated program; the "My Deadly Sins" assessment gets a discovery pathway around it; the Breakthrough events become an archive instead of one-day moments that vanish; Metamorph gets a syllabus-shaped public surface drawn from the biblical figures you teach. Fourth, amplify: search visibility, the references that arrive once everything is findable in one place, and the network effect of being discoverable as Kate Coleman rather than as a company. The work this season is not authorship. It is translation of what you have already authored into a form practitioners can actually reach.

A year from now, nextleadership.co.uk looks different. There is a women-in-leadership hub that gathers 7 Deadly Sins, the assessment, the Breakthrough archive, your guest appearances, and a way into the next Ellevation cohort. There is an archive of talks that were never archived under your name, and a Metamorph sequence with the book sitting inside it. Your interviews from Premier Christianity and Woman Alive are cross-listed with pointers between them. There is a newsletter that did not exist before. On a particular morning, a young woman leading a church plant in Accra — who has never heard of the Baptist Union of Great Britain — finds your seven behaviours through a single search, takes the assessment, and starts working through the first one that afternoon.

This is your next season. The work ahead is making what you have already built reach the practitioners it was written for. Being founding director of Next Leadership does not contradict that; it is the reason it has to happen now. You are still equipping leaders across the public, private, voluntary, and church sectors who cannot yet find your work in one place. Right now they cannot.

Reflected-Understanding · Kate-Coleman

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/kate-coleman/reflected-understanding/kate-coleman.md

A Letter to Kate Coleman

Calling

You have spent more than thirty-five years on a single question: what is it that holds leaders back, and what would it take to set them free? It surfaced early and against resistance. You came to faith as a science student at Southampton, were drawn into leadership soon after, and took your first real role as an elder in a church that did not at first welcome women in leadership — a season you have called a "baptism of fire." That fire set the work of your life. You have carried the question from the pew to the pulpit to the page, and you have answered it not with theory but with formation: naming the patterns that defeat leaders, and walking with people through the change.

The calling has repeatedly put you first across a threshold so that others could follow. First Black woman accredited as a Baptist minister in the UK. First Black woman President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain. First Black woman Chair of the Evangelical Alliance Council. You planted The Regeneration Centre in Birmingham and learned the costly work of building a church from nothing. You preached at the opening of national party conferences and helped shape leadership curriculum for the United Nations. None of these were trophies you set out to collect; each was a place the calling would not let you stop short of.

In 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership you wrote the calling down — the seven self-defeating behaviours named so plainly the book outgrew its self-published run and was taken up by Zondervan. In Metamorph you carried it from diagnosis to transformation, reading godly self-discovery, healthy relationships, and Spirit-led mission through Moses, Esther, and the Woman at the Well. And in the coaching chair, conference after conference, you have returned to four questions — why me, why here, why this, why now — that re-anchor a leader in calling rather than role. Your vocation now is as much curatorial as instructional: you hold a vast store of judgment about who is ready for which room, and the task of this season is to hand it on.

Existing Content (before the platform we're building)

You have built a real and durable body of work, and almost all of it is public — but it is scattered, and it is filed under the organization rather than under you.

Two books carry the core. 7 Deadly Sins of Women in Leadership sits on Amazon UK and US, Barnes & Noble, Christianbook, the Church House Bookshop, Blackwell's, and on Audible and Everand as an audiobook. Metamorph is spread across Amazon, Apple, Google Play, Spotify, Chirp, Barnes & Noble, and Waterstones, in print, ebook, and audio.

Around the books sit two signature programs, each on its own company landing page: the 7DS book-and-video study you co-created with Cham Kaur-Mann, with its Breakthrough one-day events, peer-led book clubs, and the "My Deadly Sins" self-assessment; and Ellevation, the immersive learning experience for women built on Metamorph.

Your recorded voice lives inside other people's shows. You talked through Metamorph and the four questions with Andy Peck on The Profile (Premier Plus, also on YouTube), went deeper on the TheoDisc Podcast, and walked through the seven behaviours again on The Women Scholars and Professionals Podcast and the Recovering God Podcast. Your interviews and profiles sit on partner publications — Premier Christianity, Church Times, Woman Alive, the Evangelical Alliance's idea, CBE International, the Baptist Union — with no thread tying them together.

The relational layer is fragmented the same way. The people you have led are held inside the institutions that introduced them: the Baptist Union, the Evangelical Alliance Council you chaired, Churches Together in Britain & Ireland, the UN curriculum work. The cohort lists for Breakthrough and Ellevation live in Next Leadership's own systems. The leaders you coach across business, charity, church, and government live in your phone and your memory. You already sit one endorsement degree from the wider missional network — Alan Hirsch and Christine Caine both put their names on Metamorph — a connection currently recorded only on a book's back cover.

And the largest pool of value you hold is the one least likely to be written down: why those seven behaviours and not eight, how the Breakthrough day is sequenced so it lands, the case studies behind thirty-five years of coaching, the wisdom of planting and leading The Regeneration Centre. That material has barely left the room.

Constraints

A few realities shape the season ahead, and they are yours to set.

Your name resolves to Next Leadership, not to a hub of your own — there is no personal author site, no newsletter under your name, no hosted podcast, no personal video channel, and no archive linking book to program to interview to talk. That is the gap to close, but closing it should not contradict who you are: being founding director of Next Leadership is the reason this work matters now, not an obstacle to it.

The deepest material is embodied, and surfacing it must happen at your pace. The aim is to capture judgment and case wisdom on your terms — through assisted interviews, dictation, and capture you control — never to manufacture a voice that is not yours. Every draft remains yours to edit, refuse, or rewrite. The authorship stays with you; the work is to gather and connect what you have already built so the practitioners it was written for can finally reach it.