Executive Summary

Meghan Larissa Good is a Mennonite pastor, theologian, author, and award-winning preacher whose work centers on a single animating project: recovering a better Christian story by reading all of Scripture — and the whole life of faith — through the lens of Jesus. Across sixteen-plus years of pastoral ministry (Albany Mennonite Church in Oregon, then more than a decade as Lead Pastor of Trinity Mennonite Church in Glendale, Arizona), two books with Herald Press, a Doctor of Ministry from Portland Seminary, and a faculty role at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary, she has built one of the most theologically serious and pastorally warm voices in the progressive/post-evangelical reconstruction space.

Her distinctive contribution is a Christocentric hermeneutic — the "Jesus lens" or "Jesus glasses" through which she teaches readers to interpret Scripture — paired with a constructive ecclesial vision. Her first book, The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2018, foreword by Gregory Boyd), translated her DMin work on the dialogic shape of Christian authority into an accessible lay guide and won Outreach Magazine's 2019 Resource of the Year in Theology/Biblical Studies. Her second, Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story (Herald Press, 2023, foreword by Dennis R. Edwards), moved from how to read to what kind of church to become, calling for a Spirit-led, grassroots "new reformation" rooted in cross-shaped power and centered-set belonging. The endorsement roster for Divine Gravity — Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, David Gushee — punches far above the weight of a small denominational press, with Gushee naming her "a rising star of the next generation."

She is also an unusually credentialed preacher: in 2018 she became the first-ever recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching, and her voice — literary, narrative-driven, honest about doubt, and quietly funny — sits squarely in the Buechner tradition. She has preached at MennoCon (MC USA's national convention) in 2019 and 2021, lectured on Christ-centered hermeneutics for the Anabaptism-at-500 project, and teaches narrative-preaching workshops.

In May 2025, Good did something that reframes her entire trajectory: she resigned her twelve-year pastorate at Trinity Mennonite to take a movement-level role as Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective (the Jesus-centered network associated with Greg Boyd), where she also chairs the international Theology Circle. She is now, by her own design, a movement builder rather than a single-congregation pastor — and she is producing daily Jesus-centered devotional content on her "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel (54+ Luke episodes in the first months of 2026 alone).

That combination — a movement thesis literally titled Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement, a career inflection into network-building, a daily content engine, and exceptional theological IP — meets a strikingly underdeveloped owned-platform layer (Digital Presence Score 2.7/5). Her channels operate as disconnected islands: the YouTube engine isn't surfaced on her website, follower counts are small/unknown, there's no online course, no centralized hub, and sixteen years of award-caliber preaching sit almost entirely un-archived. The monetization opportunity is modest but real — estimated $15K-$48K/year — and the strategic opportunity is unusually well-timed: she is reorganizing her public life around movement work at the exact moment an owned platform would matter most.

Top 5 Opportunities

1. Centralize the disconnected content ecosystem: Her YouTube engine (54+ episodes), website/newsletter, two books, speaking calendar, and Jesus Collective work operate as separate islands. A hub that cross-links every channel — especially YouTube → books → newsletter — is the highest-leverage, lowest-cost intervention. (HIGH priority, LOW effort)
 2. A course from The Bible Unwrapped: The book already ships with a free study guide that is effectively the skeleton of an 8–10 module course; reviewers repeatedly call it the best book they've read on reading Scripture. (HIGH priority, MEDIUM effort)
 3. Unlock the sermon archive: Sixteen-plus years of narrative preaching by the inaugural Buechner Award winner is almost entirely inaccessible. Requesting and thematically organizing 15–20 sermons is the single largest untapped content reservoir. (HIGH priority, MEDIUM effort)
 4. "Reading Jesus" companion infrastructure: The daily YouTube series already has momentum. Companion study guides (as email lead magnets), consistent description templates linking to books and newsletter, and an audio-only podcast extraction extend reach without new production. (HIGH priority, LOW effort)
 5. A narrative-preaching workshop course: Her Buechner credential is an unused platform asset. A "Narrative Preaching in the Buechner Tradition" course, marketed to seminary preaching programs and pastor networks, reaches a high-value professional audience her current channels can't. (MEDIUM priority, MEDIUM effort)

Movemental Recommendation

Fit Score: 7.1/10

Recommendation: Onboard — high content quality, timed to a career inflection

Good scores a 9 on content quality and growth potential and an 8 on audience alignment and platform need; she is held back only by content volume (6) and digital maturity (3). She is not a high-traffic name today — her audience is micro-to-growing — but her work is genuinely exceptional, her thematic alignment with Movemental is near-perfect (her second book is literally about sparking a movement), and her network (Greg Boyd, Brian McLaren, the Jesus Collective, the Anabaptist world) is strong and warm. Critically, she left a twelve-year pastorate in May 2025 specifically to do movement-level work and is actively producing daily content. This is the window: an owned, connected platform built now would compound with a trajectory she has already chosen.

Recommended sequencing: Pair with the progressive/Anabaptist + Jesus-Collective cluster (Greg Boyd adjacency). Lead with content centralization and the Bible Unwrapped course; use the "Reading Jesus" engine as the audience flywheel.

Research Gaps & Open Questions

- 1. Social follower counts: Handles confirmed (IG @meghanlarissagood, X @meghan_larissa, FB /meghanlarissagood) but counts are behind auth walls — unknown, not zero.
- 2. "Reading Jesus" YouTube metrics: Channel confirmed and active (54+ episodes in 2026) but subscriber/view counts not captured.
- 3. Trinity Mennonite sermon archive: 16+ years of preaching likely recorded; no public online archive found.
- 4. Ordination/credential status within MC USA: implied but not explicitly documented.
- 5. Exact pastoral dates: Albany Mennonite (~2008–2013) and Trinity Mennonite (~2013–May 2025) are approximate; title shifted across the tenure.
- 6. Family/personal life: No public information.
- 7. Jesus Collective Theology Circle roster: ~13 members across 6 countries; not publicly listed.
- 8. Birth date/birthplace: Not public.

Digital Reality Profile: Meghan Larissa Good

Research Date: January 4, 2026

Confidence Level: Medium-High (Identity confirmed, digital presence discovery limited)

Executive Summary

Meghan Larissa Good is an author, theologian, and pastor with over sixteen years of pastoral experience, currently serving as Faculty of Record for Teaching Leadership in the Doctor of Ministry program at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary. She holds degrees from Gordon College, Duke Divinity School, and Portland Seminary (where she received the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching). Good has published two books: "The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today" (focusing on biblical hermeneutics) and "Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story" (focusing on movement-oriented Christian narrative recovery).

Good's digital presence includes a personal website (meghanlarissagood.com), academic affiliation with Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary, and published books. Her work focuses on biblical hermeneutics, contemporary preaching, recovering a better Christian story, and teaching leadership. The content ecosystem shows strong thematic consistency around making Scripture accessible, contemporary interpretation, and movement-oriented narrative recovery, though opportunities exist for greater content interconnection and digital amplification of embodied work (particularly sixteen+ years of pastoral experience).

Key Findings:

- Published author with 2 books on biblical hermeneutics and Christian narrative
- Over sixteen years of pastoral experience (substantial embodied work)
- Academic involvement at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary
- Strong thematic consistency across work (hermeneutics, narrative, preaching, leadership)
- Limited comprehensive discovery of digital presence (requires direct website access)
- Potential for significant content repurposing (sermons, teaching, speaking)

Primary Opportunities:

- Content repurposing (sixteen+ years of sermons → articles, teaching → courses)
- Content series development (hermeneutics series, narrative series, preaching series)
- Content interconnection and ecosystem building
- Digital amplification of pastoral work and teaching
- Unified content platform for discoverability

Movemental Fit: High - Strong alignment with Movemental's target audience and platform capabilities. Opportunities for content repurposing, series development, network effects, and digital amplification of substantial embodied work.

Gap Analysis

Embodied Work vs. Digital Expression

Embodied Work Indicators:

- Over sixteen years of pastoral experience (substantial sermon/teaching content)
- Academic teaching (course materials, lectures)
- Public speaking (conference appearances)
- Published books (2 books)
- Established reputation (award recipient, faculty position)

Digital Expression Analysis:

- Books: Available digitally (to be verified format)
- Academic work: To be verified (course materials, publications)
- Pastoral work: To be verified (sermons, teaching online - likely substantial content not yet identified)
- Speaking: To be verified (recordings, transcripts)

Primary Gaps:

- Sermons: Sixteen+ years of pastoral work - substantial sermon content may not be digitally available
- Teaching: Academic teaching materials may not be fully accessible online
- Speaking: Conference and speaking engagements may not be recorded/published
- Articles: Insights from teaching/preaching may not be captured in articles
- Content Interconnection: Books may not be cross-referenced with other content

Opportunities for Digital Amplification

Content Repurposing Opportunities:

- Sermons → Articles (hermeneutics themes, narrative themes, preaching themes)
- Teaching → Courses (Teaching Leadership, hermeneutics, narrative)
- Conference talks → Articles/videos
- Books → Series (hermeneutics series, narrative series)

Content Expansion Opportunities:

- Biblical hermeneutics series (from "The Bible Unwrapped")
- Christian narrative series (from "Divine Gravity")
- Contemporary preaching series
- Leadership development series

Connection Opportunities:

- Connect books to sermons
- Connect sermons to articles
- Connect teaching to courses
- Connect all content forms

Movemental OpportunitiesWhat Movemental Would Change*Content Organization:

- Unified platform for all content (books, articles, sermons, teaching, courses)
- Intentional content interconnection
- Series development
- Theme expansion

Discoverability:

- Improved SEO and search visibility
- Network effects for content discovery
- Better content organization

Content Development:

Disambiguation

Meghan Larissa Good (this subject) is a Mennonite pastor, theologian, and author — entirely distinct from any entertainment-industry figure. The primary collision risk is:

1. Meghan Larissa Good (pastor/author/theologian) — THIS IS OUR SUBJECT.

Anabaptist/Mennonite tradition; two books with Herald Press; AMBS faculty; former lead pastor Trinity Mennonite Church, Glendale, AZ; known for Jesus-centered hermeneutics. Full name always "Meghan Larissa Good."

2. Meagan Good (actress) — American actress, no relation. Spelled differently ("Meagan" vs. "Meghan"); no theological, academic, or pastoral connection whatsoever. Search engines conflate results when only "Meghan Good" is used without the middle name. Always use the full "Meghan Larissa Good" plus at least one disambiguating term (Mennonite, AMBS, Herald Press, Divine Gravity, DMin) to filter correctly.

Reliable disambiguation modifiers: "Meghan Larissa Good," "Mennonite," "AMBS," "The Bible Unwrapped," "Divine Gravity," "Herald Press," "Anabaptist," "Jesus Collective," "DMin Portland Seminary," "Christocentric hermeneutics."

- The dissertation argues that Christian authority functions dialogically — through dynamic interchange among Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, and community — rather than as a single static source. The Bible Unwrapped (2018) was produced as the accompanying lay resource.
- The Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching: First recipient (2018) — a distinction that directly shaped her public identity as an award-winning preacher.

Narrative Biography

Meghan Larissa Good is a pastor, theologian, author, and award-winning preacher who has spent more than sixteen years in local church ministry while simultaneously developing a significant national and international teaching platform in Anabaptist/Mennonite Christianity. Her core conviction — that "God looks like Jesus, and that changes everything" — anchors every dimension of her work: her preaching, her two books with Herald Press, her faculty role at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary (AMBS), her leadership of Jesus Collective's theology circle, and her growing movement work to help individuals and churches recover what she calls "a better Christian story." By the time she resigned her pastoral charge in May 2025 to pursue broader network-building, she had become one of the most prominent voices in Mennonite-Anabaptist biblical theology in North America.

Formation: Gordon College and Duke Divinity (2002–2009)

Good earned a B.A. in Biblical and Theological Studies and Philosophy from Gordon College in Wenham, Massachusetts (2006). Gordon, an evangelical liberal arts college, gave her a rigorous grounding in both Scripture and philosophical reasoning — a pairing that would become characteristic of her later writing, which moves fluidly between biblical exegesis and theological argument without surrendering accessibility.

From Gordon, Good went to Duke Divinity School in Durham, North Carolina, where she earned her M.Div. in 2009. Duke's divinity school is shaped by figures such as Stanley Hauerwas and the moral theology tradition; its culture of demanding theological seriousness would sharpen Good's intellectual instincts. After completing her MDiv, she worked at Duke University's Center for Reconciliation — an ecumenical initiative focused on building communities that embody reconciliation across lines of race, ethnicity, and conflict — and spent time teaching and preaching in Uganda. This formative post-graduate period oriented her toward the global church and the concrete political and social dimensions of the Christian gospel, themes that would resurface in her later theology of reconciliation.

Pastoral Career: Oregon (c. 2008-c. 2013)

Good's pastoral ministry began at Albany Mennonite Church in Albany, Oregon, where she served as lead pastor. In October 2010, she was invited to be the featured speaker for Hesston College's annual Anabaptist Vision and Discipleship Series, speaking on the theme "The Inside-Out Kingdom" — an early indication that her ministry gifts were already drawing wider denominational attention. By this point she had established herself as a Mennonite pastor committed to Jesus-centered spirituality and the life of the local congregation. Her precise start and end dates at Albany Mennonite are not publicly confirmed (UNKNOWN — needs research), but available sources place her there from approximately 2008 to approximately 2013.

Pastoral Career: Arizona (c. 2013-2025)

Good relocated to the Phoenix/Glendale, Arizona area and joined Trinity Mennonite Church in Glendale as teaching pastor, later serving as lead pastor. The church appears in sources under both "Glendale" and "Phoenix" addresses, consistent with the Glendale suburb's proximity to Phoenix. Trinity Mennonite is a congregation within Mennonite Church USA. Good's titles in different published sources vary between "teaching pastor" and "lead pastor" during this period, suggesting a possible title evolution; the Anabaptist World resignation article (2025) identifies her title at departure as "lead pastor."

During her time at Trinity Mennonite, Good developed her preaching voice, completed her DMin, published two books, and became a significant presence in Mennonite Church USA. She gave the Friday morning worship address at MennoCon19 (Kansas City, July 2019), preaching from John 20:19-23 in a sermon titled "He Breathed on Them" — drawing on the pneumatological imagery of the ruach of God to challenge churches running "on empty" with a call to receive fresh divine breath for mission. Two years later, at MennoCon21 (July 2021), she gave the keynote address "Do Peacemakers Need Jesus?", arguing before approximately 1,044 attendees that reconciliation without a center of gravity in Jesus loses its very ground: "Reconciliation work that gives up on proclaiming Jesus loses its very ground." She also contributed regularly to Anabaptist World and preached at Mennonite conventions across North America.

Good resigned from Trinity Mennonite Church effective May 2, 2025, citing a sense of call to broader network work. She stated: "I don't know yet exactly what this might look like, but I have a number of ideas that seem worth exploring, and I believe that stepping down from my current pastoral role is one of the necessary steps to create time and space for this larger sense of calling." — Anabaptist World

Academic Work: Portland Seminary DMin (2014-2018)

While serving at Trinity Mennonite, Good pursued doctoral work at Portland Seminary at George Fox University in Portland, Oregon, completing her Doctor of Ministry in 2018. Her dissertation, Between Breaths: The Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority, argued that biblical authority is not a static property of a single source but functions dialogically — through living conversation among Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, and community. She challenged the Protestant tendency to anchor authority in Scripture alone, proposing instead a relational and contextual understanding more consonant with Anabaptist practice. Her committee included Dottie Escobedo-Frank, Jamie Noling-Auth, and Nijay Gupta. The Bible Unwrapped was produced as the accompanying lay resource designed to make the dissertation's insights accessible to congregations.

Upon completion of the DMin, Portland Seminary named Good the inaugural recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching — an award that crystallized her reputation as not only a theologian but an exceptional preacher in the literary-narrative tradition of Frederick Buechner himself.

Academic Affiliations: AMBS and Jesus Collective

Good serves as Faculty of Record for Teaching Leadership in AMBS's Doctor of Ministry in Leadership program in Elkhart, Indiana. In this role, she connects regularly with DMin students over Zoom to help them develop personalized learning plans and integrate academic knowledge into their ministry contexts. She also served on the AMBS Board of Directors (confirmed as of 2019). Earlier in her AMBS involvement, she delivered the commencement address at AMBS's 73rd graduation ceremony (May 4, 2019), speaking to 20 graduates on the theme of "ministry of celebration" and urging them not to bear the burden of "saving the world": "The broken world is not out there waiting for you to go and save it. It has been saved and it will be saved by Jesus Christ." — AMBS

Good has also served as Theology Chair (later Resource Development Manager) of Jesus Collective, a North American organization amplifying and resourcing a movement toward more hopeful, Jesus-centered Christianity. She participated in Jesus Collective's North American tour as a keynote speaker. As of 2025, she holds the title Resource Development Manager, indicating her transition to a more operationally central role in the organization as her pastoral and movement work converge.

Authorship

Good has published two books through Herald Press (the Mennonite/MennoMedia publisher) and contributed to a third:

The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2018) grew directly from her DMin work. Drawing on contemporary biblical scholarship and the ancient Christian tradition, it addresses questions twenty-first-century readers bring to Scripture: Why does the Bible contain violence? Are there textual discrepancies? How do we handle passages with no clear contemporary application? Good calls readers past both "knee-jerk biblicism" and "skeptical disregard" toward a Christ-centered hermeneutic — reading all of Scripture through the lens of Jesus. Gregory Boyd wrote the foreword. The book was named one of Outreach Magazine's Resources of the Year (2019) in the Theology/Biblical Studies category — a significant evangelical recognition for a Mennonite author.

Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story (Herald Press, 2023) is Good's most ambitious work. Drawing the analogy of a gravity that draws diverse objects toward a common center, she argues that Jesus himself is the gravitational center capable of holding together a fractured church and catalyzing a new reformation. The book diagnoses the contemporary crisis of Christianity — ecclesial scandals, biblical authority questions, post-pandemic deconstruction, polarization — and argues that a grassroots movement is already emerging as the Spirit draws people back to a Jesus-centered vision of God and salvation. Good employs "centered-set" ecclesiology, arguing that belonging is defined not by boundary positions but by trajectory of motion toward Jesus. Endorsers include Richard J. Mouw, Brian McLaren, David P. Gushee ("a rising star of the next generation"), Gregory Boyd, and Oneya Okuwobi. Dennis R. Edwards contributed the foreword chapter.

In 2024, Good wrote the foreword to God Looks Like Jesus: A Renewed Approach to Understanding God (Herald Press, 2024) by Gregory Boyd and M. Scott Boren — a Jesus Collective-affiliated resource that extends the theological vision she and Boyd share.

The "Better Story" Vision and Resignation

Good's decision to leave Trinity Mennonite in May 2025 reflects a consistent pattern in her career of following the call to broader scope. Her entire body of work can be read as a sustained argument that the Western church has been operating with a distorted image of God — shaped more by power, fear, and cultural accommodation than by the person of Jesus — and that recovering "a better Christian story" requires concerted movement-level effort. She has spoken of many Christians carrying "a profound wound in their image of God that will only be healed through direct encounter with Jesus" and argued that "as our image of God is transformed by Jesus, we are set free to experience deeper transformation in our own humanity."

By 2025–2026, Good was based in Dayton, Ohio, conducting the Jesus Collective's resource development work, maintaining her AMBS teaching role, speaking widely (the Church of the Brethren Clergywomen's Retreat in February 2025; the Annual Mennonite Bible Study Series in Mountain Lake, Minnesota in January 2026; a California lecture series scheduled for 2027), hosting the "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel, and writing a weekly devotional newsletter for meghanlarissagood.com.

Key Relationships & Influences

Person	Relationship	Significance
Gregory Boyd (ReKnew; Woodland Hills Church)	Foreword author (The Bible Unwrapped); endorser; co-contributor; podcast host	Closest senior theological collaborator in the Jesus-centered/open theism stream; Boyd's Christocentric hermeneutic and "cruciform" theology of God align closely with Good's.
Dennis R. Edwards	Foreword chapter (Divine Gravity)	Anabaptist New Testament scholar; his contribution contextualizes Divine Gravity in Black Anabaptist theological tradition.
David P. Gushee	Endorser; theological peer	Prominent Christian ethicist; his "rising star of the next generation" endorsement signals Good's recognition beyond Mennonite circles.
Brian McLaren	Endorser	Progressive evangelical author and movement figure; endorsement signals Good's bridge role between Anabaptist and post-evangelical audiences.
Dottie Escobedo-Frank	DMin dissertation supervisor	First reader of Good's most systematic academic work; her influence runs through Good's preaching theology.
Nijay Gupta	DMin dissertation committee member	New Testament scholar; likely shaping influence on Good's careful Pauline and Johannine exegesis.
Barbara Brown Taylor	Interview subject, The Other Journal (2013)	Narrative preaching influence; Good's award-winning preaching aesthetic resonates with Taylor's literary-embodied approach.
Marva Dawn	Recommended resource (Shifting Culture Podcast)	Powers, Weakness, and the Tabernacling of God — influences Good's theology of divine power-through-weakness.

Core Thesis

The church's most fundamental crisis is a distorted image of God — one shaped by power, fear, violence, and cultural accommodation rather than by the person of Jesus Christ. The remedy is not merely doctrinal correction but a movement-level recovery of a "better Christian story": a story in which Jesus is the definitive revelation of who God is, the lens through which all of Scripture must be read, and the gravitational center around which a fractured church can reconvene. When the church recovers the Jesus-centered God — the God who looks like Jesus — it gains a new resource for biblical interpretation, a new vision of salvation as cosmic restoration, a new politics of self-sacrificial love over coercive power, and a new basis for unity that transcends theological and cultural fractures.

Theological Tradition

Primary: Anabaptist/Mennonite — Jesus-centered, peace-church, Scripture-through-Christ, community-embodied, Spirit-led Christianity. Good consistently names the Anabaptist heritage as the tradition she is drawing on and commending, describing it as "the transformative power of the Jesus-centered approach to faith that Anabaptism represents" (AMBS). However, she reaches well beyond Mennonite institutional boundaries, speaking to evangelical, mainline, and post-evangelical audiences.

Secondary influences:

- Post-evangelical and progressive evangelical convergence (Greg Boyd, Brian McLaren, David Gushee)
- Ecumenical theological retrieval (Barbara Brown Taylor's literary-preaching tradition; Marva Dawn's theology of divine weakness)
- Reconciliation theology (shaped by her post-MDiv work at Duke's Center for Reconciliation and time in Uganda)
- Narrative theology and hermeneutics (reading the Bible as a unified narrative arc culminating in Christ)

Denominational context: Credentialed within Mennonite Church USA (Mennonite ordination/credentialing assumed from lead pastoral role at MC USA congregations — specific ordination details UNKNOWN — needs research). Ecumenically engaged: she has spoken at Church of the Brethren events, evangelical conferences, and non-Mennonite Christian venues. Her theology is denominationally rooted but not denominationally bounded.

Key Frameworks & Models

Framework	Description	Where Developed
The Jesus Lens / "Jesus Glasses"	Reading all of Scripture through Jesus as the supreme interpretive authority. Jesus is not "the softer side of God that gets averaged" with divine judgment; he is the fullness of God and the logic of Scripture's narrative arc. Every Old Testament text must be read toward its fulfillment in Christ. "The goal of Scripture, according to the early Christians, is to lead people to an encounter with the living Christ."	The Bible Unwrapped (2018); Anabaptism at 500 conference (2021); throughout her teaching
Dialogic Biblical Authority	Authority is not located in a single source (Scripture alone, tradition alone, Spirit alone) but emerges from dynamic conversation among Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, and community experience. Articulated formally in her DMin dissertation Between Breaths (2018) and embodied practically in The Bible Unwrapped .	Dissertation (2018); The Bible Unwrapped (2018)
Divine Gravity / Centered-Set Ecclesiology	Jesus himself is the gravitational center that holds together a diverse, fractured church. Borrowing from centered-set theory, Good argues that Christian community is defined not by boundary positions (who is in/out) but by trajectory of motion toward Jesus. Those drawn toward the divine grace embodied in Jesus are the church, regardless of their position on peripheral questions.	Divine Gravity (2023); Anabaptist World review
The Better Christian Story (Eight Theses)	Divine Gravity proposes eight interlocking convictions that constitute a recovered Christian narrative: (1) Jesus as authoritative interpretive lens for God and Scripture; (2) salvation as setting all things right on earth; (3) discipleship as acknowledging and following Jesus; (4) Christian community as both means and goal of God's transformation; (5) God's people as reconciliation ambassadors; (6) the Spirit guiding and resourcing mission; (7) sacrificial love overcoming evil; (8) church unity centering on Jesus as gravitational focal point.	Divine Gravity (2023)
Cross-Shaped Power	The Jesus way of exercising power is categorically different from worldly (coercive, sword-shaped) power. God's kingdom advances through self-sacrifice, vulnerability, and suffering love — not military, political, or institutional force. Jesus's temptations in Matthew 4 were genuine precisely because the use of power for righteous ends (liberation of the oppressed) was available to him; he refused. This "cross-shaped power" appears "slower, more painful, seemingly like losing before winning" but alone genuinely defeats evil.	Divine Gravity (2023); website journal essay "Jesus and the Devil's Bargain" (2024)
Wounded Image of God	Many contemporary Christians suffer from a "profound wound in their image of God" — shaped by distorted theologies of divine violence, wrath, and power that contradict what is revealed in Jesus. Healing requires	meghanlarissagood.com/about ; throughout her work

	direct encounter with the Jesus-centered God. "As our image of God is transformed by Jesus, we are set free to experience deeper transformation in our own humanity."
The New Reformation	The church is living through another reformation-scale recalibration, analogous to the sixteenth-century Radical Reformation. Good defines reformation as "a repentance movement, a regularly required period of communal reflection and reorientation." The signs include post-pandemic deconstruction, ecclesial scandals, and a crisis of biblical authority — but also a spontaneous Spirit-led movement rediscovering Jesus-centered faith.	Divine Gravity (2023); Anabaptist World
Salvation as Cosmic Restoration	Good's soteriology is expansive: salvation is not primarily the rescue of individual souls from hell but God's project of "setting all things right" — restoring all of creation, reconciling divided humanity, and renewing the cosmos. This follows the Anabaptist peace-church tradition's integration of redemption and shalom.	Divine Gravity (2023); MennoCon21 (2021)

Distinctive Positions

- Jesus as the definitive revelation of God: Good's central commitment is that Jesus does not reveal one aspect of God alongside other competing divine attributes. Jesus is the fullness of God (Colossians 1:19), God's exact imprint (Hebrews 1:1-3), the original Word (John 1:1). This means that divine violence, wrath toward enemies, and coercive power as displayed in some Old Testament texts must be interpreted through — not simply averaged with — what Jesus reveals. "Jesus is not the softer side of God that gets averaged" with anything. — Anabaptist World, planning-an-anabaptist-bible
- Christocentric over bibliocentric hermeneutics: Good does not relativize Scripture — she insists on reading it faithfully and in its entirety — but she insists that Christ, not a flat reading of the whole text, is the interpretive authority. This is the Anabaptist way and, she argues, the theology of the early church: "The goal of Scripture, according to the early Christians, is to lead people to an encounter with the living Christ." — Anabaptist World
- Nonviolence is not optional but is intrinsic to the gospel: The cross-shaped power framework means that coercive force — even for righteous ends — is a "devil's bargain" rejected by Jesus. Good is explicit that the kingdom does not advance by the sword. This integrates her Anabaptist peace-church heritage with her Christocentric theology: nonviolence is not simply a political stance but flows from the very character of God revealed in Jesus.
- Jesus and peacemaking are inseparable: At MennoCon21, Good challenged Mennonites who pursue peace work without explicit Christ-proclamation. She grounded this in Ephesians 1:10 (Christ as the culmination of God's purposes) and Ephesians 2:14 (Jesus as our peace). Reconciliation without a center of gravity in something "bigger and better" lacks the power to hold together those who would naturally repel each other. "The best thing in the world is being with Jesus and participating in his work." — Anabaptist World

- Centered-set over bounded-set ecclesiology: The church is not defined by its doctrinal fences but by its gravitational orientation toward Jesus. This allows Good to affirm a broad, Spirit-led movement of Jesus-centered Christians across denominational lines while maintaining theological content: the center (Jesus) is non-negotiable; the trajectory toward him is the defining criterion.
- History as divine-human partnership, not divine determinism: Good resists both naive providentialism and fatalism. Drawing on 1 Samuel 8 (God granting Israel's request for a king "while noting this 'answer to prayer' does not reflect God's own judgment"), she argues that God permits human choice and its consequences as a teaching mechanism. God is "managing hundreds, thousands, millions of storylines all at once." — "Four Forgotten Truths," meghanlarissagood.com
- God's kingdom advances from the margins, not from power centers: Good consistently pushes against Christians' emotional investment in worldly power structures, arguing that God works from "Bethlehem and Capernaum" rather than Rome and Jerusalem. This is a political-theological position with Anabaptist roots: the church is a contrast community, not a power broker.
- Biblical authority is dialogic, not monolithic: Her DMin dissertation's central argument — that the Bible's authority functions through conversation among multiple sources and communities rather than as a self-interpreting, univocal text — undergirds her entire approach to hermeneutics. This positions her against both fundamentalist biblicism and liberal dismissal, toward an Anabaptist communal reading practice.
- True prophetic leadership is marked by suffering, not success: Drawing on Paul's "boasting in weakness" (2 Corinthians 11) and Jesus's warnings about false messiahs (Mark 13), Good argues that spiritual authority flows from costly discipleship and sacrificial love, not charisma or rhetorical skill. Authentic Christian leaders "bear the cross marks. Not just from their enemies, but for their enemies, for love of them." — "The Test of a Prophet," meghanlarissagood.com

View of Scripture

Good holds a high view of Scripture as the witness that leads people to Christ, while rejecting both fundamentalist inerrancy and skeptical dismissal. Her position:

- Scripture as sacred narrative arc: The Bible tells a unified story from creation to new creation, with all threads converging in and being redefined by Jesus. Her 2026 lecture series, "All the Stories are Jesus," exemplifies this: she walks through creation, exodus, temple, kingdom, wisdom, and exile, showing how each thread culminates in Christ.

- Genre-sensitive reading: The Bible Unwrapped emphasizes that readers must attend to literary genre — what kind of text is this? — before applying it. Confusing law, poetry, prophecy, and apocalyptic leads to misreading.
- Christ as the canon within the canon: Not all Scripture speaks with equal directness to the character of God. Jesus is the supreme disclosure; other texts are read in his light. This does not mean dismissing difficult texts but reading them through, not alongside, Christ.
- Authority as community practice: Derived from her DMin work, authority emerges in the lived conversation of Scripture, Spirit, tradition, reason, and community. No single locus suffices alone.

Eschatology and Hope

Good's eschatology is integrative and hope-oriented rather than escapist. Salvation encompasses "setting all things right on earth" — a present-and-future, cosmic-and-particular restoration project. She speaks of the church as channels of divine power capable of transformation that exceeds what we have yet attempted: "We can be channels of power beyond ourselves, but we've tried it so little, we don't know the difference." — Anabaptist World

Her commencement theology frames this eschatologically: the community's "primary work is to proclaim to the world its glorious destiny and to rejoice ahead of time in the victory that is overcoming everything" — a proleptic participation in Christ's triumph already won. The "broken world has been saved and it will be saved by Jesus Christ" — AMBS. This grounds her activist agenda in eschatological confidence rather than anxious striving.

Intellectual Genealogy

Shaped by:

- Anabaptist tradition (especially the Radical Reformation's Christocentric hermeneutics and peace theology) — foundational
- Gregory Boyd (open/cruciform theism; Christocentric hermeneutic; "cross-shaped" power) — closest collaborative theological influence; their work is mutually reinforcing
- Marva Dawn (Powers, Weakness, and the Tabernacled of God) — theology of divine weakness and kenotic power; cited as recommended resource
- Frederick Buechner (literary preaching tradition; narrative theology of grace) — the award named in his honor acknowledges a deep affinity with his approach; Good's narrative, accessible theological writing bears Buechner's influence
- Barbara Brown Taylor (embodied, literary preaching; interviewed by Good in 2013) — aesthetic and homiletical influence
- Nathan Hatch (The Democratization of American Christianity) — cited as recommended reading on reformations and grassroots religious movements; Good applies this historical lens to the present "new reformation"

- Duke Divinity tradition (Stanley Hauerwas and the church-as-contrast-community strand, though Good applies it with more irenic and less adversarial tone)

In conversation with:

- Brian McLaren (progressive evangelical reform; endorsed Divine Gravity)
- David P. Gushee (Christian ethics; endorsed Divine Gravity)
- Scot McKnight (accessible New Testament scholarship; endorsed The Bible Unwrapped)
- Dennis R. Edwards (Black Anabaptist theology; contributed to Divine Gravity)
- Richard J. Mouw (Reformed evangelical irenicism; endorsed Divine Gravity — a cross-tradition endorsement)

Pushes back against:

- "Knee-jerk biblicism": Flat, literalistic readings that ignore genre, narrative arc, and the Christ-center — The Bible Unwrapped is the sustained rejoinder
- Skeptical dismissal: Academic or cultural dismissal of Scripture's authority and coherence — Good holds both together
- Distorted theologies of divine violence and coercion: Any theology that places God's violence on the same level as God's self-revelation in Jesus
- Peace without Jesus: Mennonite peace work that loses its explicitly Christ-centered anchor — her MennoCon21 address directly challenged this tendency
- Worldly definitions of Christian success and authority: Charisma, rhetorical power, and institutional prestige as markers of spiritual authority — replaced by cross-bearing
- Christian celebrity culture: "The Search for Heroes" (2024 essay) distinguishes authentic spiritual character from celebrity appeal
- Church as power center: Any vision of the church as a political/cultural power broker rather than a contrast community advancing from the margins

Theological Evolution

Good's theology has developed through three recognizable phases, each building on the previous:

1. Reconciliation and incarnational phase (2006-2013): Shaped by Duke Divinity, the Center for Reconciliation, Uganda, and Albany Mennonite. The central questions were: What does it mean for the church to embody reconciliation? What is the relationship between Jesus and shalom? This phase produced a pastor committed to the social-political dimensions of the gospel and the peace tradition of Anabaptism, but as yet without the crystallized "Jesus lens" framework.
2. Hermeneutics and Scripture phase (2013-2018): The DMin at Portland Seminary catalyzed the articulation of what had been an intuition into a systematic hermeneutical framework. The Bible Unwrapped is the primary output. The focus is on how to read Scripture faithfully in a post-biblical-authority-crisis world — neither biblicism nor dismissal, but Christ-centered, genre-sensitive, dialogic engagement.

3. Movement and story phase (2018-present): Divine Gravity represents Good's most expansive theological vision — from how to read the Bible (phase 2) to what the whole Christian story means and how to catalyze a movement around it. The "better Christian story," the new reformation, Jesus Collective, and her post-pastoral network work all belong to this phase. The frame shifts from congregation to movement; from hermeneutics to missiology; from the local to the global.

Throughout all three phases, the unchanging center is Jesus: who he is, what he reveals about God, and what it means to follow him. The progression is from incarnational ethics to hermeneutical framework to movement theology — each layer adding scope to the same fundamental Christological conviction.

Voice Summary

Meghan Larissa Good writes and preaches as a literary-narrative theologian: someone who moves between careful exegesis, vivid story, and cultural diagnosis with apparent ease, and who consistently brings theological weight down into the register of accessible, direct prose. She is an award-winning preacher in the tradition of Frederick Buechner — her prose has Buechner's quality of theological honesty, the willingness to name doubt alongside conviction, and the use of the specific concrete detail to carry abstract truth. But her register is distinctly her own: warmer, more activist in orientation, and more explicitly Anabaptist than Buechner's Calvinist irony.

Where JR Woodward is a diagnostic framework-builder and Alan Hirsch is a prophetic provocateur, Good occupies a third position: the narrative theologian-preacher. She is at her most distinctive when anchoring a large theological claim in a specific human scene, when moving from personal confession of uncertainty to theological resolution, and when helping readers feel why the Jesus-centered God is not just correct but beautiful. Her tagline — "God looks like Jesus. And that changes everything." — is characteristic: short, declarative, quietly radical, and opening immediately onto the next practical and theological question.

Writing Characteristics

Dimension	Assessment
Register	Accessible-literary — integrates serious theological content (Christological hermeneutics, kenotic power, centered-set ecclesiology, the new reformation) with storytelling, personal confession, concrete imagery, and plain prose. Less academically formal than her DMin dissertation; more theologically rigorous than devotional writing. The sweet spot is what she describes as her own goal: theological depth that doesn't sacrifice accessibility.
Complexity	Moderate — she argues for complex positions (dialogic authority, Christocentric hermeneutics, centered-set ecclesiology) but never overloads the reader with jargon. Technical terms appear only when named and defined. The Divine Gravity reviewer notes the book "overflows with images, stories, and illustrations." The Bible Unwrapped has been described as "an accessible primer for college students and parishioners alike."
Tone	Honest-inviting — she leads with personal admission of doubt, difficulty, or provocation, then opens outward to the reader and ultimately toward conviction. Not preachy. Not self-deprecating to the point of weakness. A kind of theological courage: naming what is genuinely hard, then pressing through to something real. Occasionally "delightfully cheeky" (per endorser Oneya Okuwobi).
Storytelling	High — narrative is her primary theological mode. She opens essays with a scene, an encounter, a confession of puzzlement. She uses parables, cultural analogies, and vivid images rather than abstract propositions. The "rabid badger in a bag" image (in "Jesus and the Devil's Bargain") is characteristic — unexpected, funny, and precise.
Humor	Present and deployed deliberately — "quirky sense of humor" (Herald Press bio); "don't ever ask me to play kickball" (personal bio). Humor appears as a pressure-release in dense theological arguments and as a signal of trust with the reader: I'm not going to be pompous about this.
Scripture Use	Narrative-arc and Christocentric — Scripture appears as a unified story reaching its climax in Jesus, not as a collection of proof texts. Key anchoring passages: Colossians 1:19, Hebrews 1:1-3, John 1:1, Ephesians 1:10, Ephesians 2:14, 2 Corinthians 2:14-17. Difficult passages are engaged honestly, not avoided; the genre is named; the text is read through its relationship to Christ.

Signature Patterns

- Core tagline: "God looks like Jesus. And that changes everything." — appears on the homepage, in speaker bios, across organizational affiliations. Not merely a slogan: it is her epistemological and hermeneutical claim in compressed form. Every piece of her work is an expansion of this sentence.
- Recurring phrases and formulations:
- "Through the lens of Jesus" / "putting on our Jesus glasses" — her standard formulation for Christocentric hermeneutics

- "A better Christian story" — the Divine Gravity frame for the recovery project
- "A center of gravity in something bigger and better" — her image for the Jesus-centered ecclesial vision
- "Cross-shaped power" — her term for the kenotic alternative to coercive force
- "The broken world has been saved and it will be saved by Jesus Christ" — her theological confidence about eschatology and mission
- "The Spirit of God is stirring something, possibly even on the scale of some of the great reform movements" — her movement-discernment frame
- "Trajectory of motion toward Jesus" — her centered-set description of belonging
- Favorite movement: Skepticism to conviction. Good frequently begins by voicing the doubt or difficulty that the reader (or she herself) feels, names it honestly, then works through it toward a theologically grounded resolution. This is the Buechner move: the resurrection of grace from the site of admitted doubt.
- Opening style: Concrete, specific, often personal — she opens with a scene or a confession rather than a thesis. "The article explores Jesus's temptations in Matthew 4 through a reframed theological lens" — but the actual opening is: Good admits she initially dismissed these temptations as too obvious to take seriously, then a friend's insight shifted everything. She earns her theology by showing the work of getting there.
- Argument architecture: Good's typical essay or address moves through:
 1. Concrete opening — a scene, an admission, a puzzling text, a cultural observation
 2. Naming the real question — what is actually at stake (not the surface question but the deeper one)
 3. Honest acknowledgment of difficulty — what makes this genuinely hard to believe or live
 4. Theological ground — what Scripture (through the Jesus lens) actually says; what the tradition offers
 5. The turn — a reframe that changes how the question looks
 6. Practical implication or invitation — what this means for the reader's life, church, or practice
- Preaching voice (from MennoCon19 and MennoCon21 reports):
 - Rooted in the specific biblical text; attends to narrative context and imagery
 - Willing to name what the church has gotten wrong or neglected without being adversarial
 - Calls toward action and hope from a place of theological confidence, not anxious urgency
 - Uses pneumatological and creation imagery (breath, wind, ruach) in a way that feels physically and spiritually alive

- Prophetic register without prophetic posture: Good makes challenging, even confrontational theological claims (the church is running on the wrong breath; peace without Jesus lacks a center; Christians have a wounded image of God) — but she delivers them with invitation rather than denunciation. The prophetic content is present; the rhetorical mode is pastoral.
- Literary allusions and cultural references: The Buechner award is diagnostic — she reads widely. Recommends Nathan Hatch on religious democratization; interviews Barbara Brown Taylor on embodied faith; engages Marva Dawn on divine weakness. She brings cultural, historical, and literary references into theological essays without footnoting them into academic stiffness.

Representative quotes

On the Jesus-centered hermeneutic:

Speaking vs. Writing

Based on speaking bios, podcast episode notes, and conference reports:

- Preaching and writing are closely integrated: Good's essays read like sermon introductions, and her sermons apparently read like theological essays. The award-winning preacher and the accessible author are the same voice. This distinguishes her from theologians who write abstractly and preach concretely, or vice versa.
- Speaking topics match written themes precisely: Her speaking topics — Jesus-centered Christianity, biblical interpretation through Jesus, depolarizing the church, Holy Spirit discernment, contemporary preaching — are exactly the themes of her books and journal essays. No disconnect between platform and publication.
- Workshops on preaching craft: Good's speaking portfolio includes "contemporary preaching" workshops — how to construct sermons for audiences with short attention spans, use of story and metaphor, introductory and advanced preaching technique. This makes her unusual: a theologian who also teaches homiletics, and whose voice reflects that self-awareness about the craft of communication.
- Ecumenical range: She has spoken to Mennonite Church USA conventions, Church of the Brethren clergy, Jesus Collective gatherings, Mennonite educational institutions, Eastern Mennonite University, Canadian Mennonite University (as instructor), evangelical conferences, and non-Mennonite Christian gatherings. Her voice adapts to these contexts without losing its Anabaptist theological roots.

- Tone in person: Described as a "passionate preacher and storyteller" (Herald Press); "flair for storytelling and quirky sense of humor" (speaker bio). In conference contexts, she delivers serious theological content with energy and warmth. The Clergywomen's Retreat (70+ women, 16 church districts) used her for four days of morning sessions — suggesting sustained authority and engagement over time, not just a single keynote.

Comparison with Other Movement Leaders

Dimension	Meghan Larissa Good	JR Woodward	Alan Hirsch
Primary rhetorical mode	Narrative theologian-preacher	Diagnostic framework-builder	Prophetic provocateur
Opening move	Concrete scene or personal confession of doubt	Framing question or diagnostic observation	Provocative declaration or sharp diagnosis
Signature move	Skepticism-to-conviction arc; "God looks like Jesus" crystallizing claim	Renaming (apostle = dream awakener)	Binary contrasts ("not X but Y")
Theological tradition	Anabaptist/Mennonite; Jesus-centered; peace-church	Missional-incarnational; post-Christendom	Missional-incarnational; apostolic
Complexity	Moderate — narrative carries the weight	High — many layered frameworks	High — dense conceptual vocabulary
Story use	Very high; narrative is primary mode	Moderate; uses case studies and analogies	Very high; historical movements and personal narrative
Humor	Present, warm, "quirky"	Minimal	Occasional; dry, Australian
Academic register	Literary-accessible; award-winning preacher	Practitioner-scholar; PhD thesis vocabulary	Popular academic
Primary audience	Mennonite/Anabaptist + Jesus Collective post-evangelical convergence	Church planters, missional practitioners	Missional church leaders, apostolic pioneers
Ecclesiology	Centered-set; Jesus as gravitational center	Polycentric; neighborhood-rooted movement	Organic; movemental; post-Christendom
Core concern	Recovering the Jesus-centered God	Recovering polycentric, kenotic leadership	Recovering apostolic imagination

The Buechner Inheritance

The Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching is the most precise external indicator of Good's voice. Buechner (1926-2022) was known for: theological honesty about doubt and grace; the use of vivid, literary prose in theological writing; the conviction that grace hides in ordinary life and must be excavated by careful attention; and a refusal of religious cliché in favor of lived reality. Good's writing exhibits all of these: the willingness to name what is genuinely puzzling or painful about the Christian faith, the use of specific, surprising imagery (rabid badgers; dinosaur bones; volcanoes), and the consistent movement from doubt toward grace without bypassing the doubt. She received this award as the inaugural recipient — not as an established figure inheriting a tradition but as the one who inaugurated it, suggesting Portland Seminary recognized in her something that defined what the award should honor.

Overall Assessment

Good's voice is that of a narrative theologian with pastoral depth and prophetic content — someone who can move across the full spectrum from devotional warmth to theological rigor to prophetic challenge without losing the thread of accessibility. She is the preacher who helps the deconstruction survivor realize that what they were trying to escape was not Jesus but a distorted image of God; the theologian who helps the peace-church activist see that their peacemaking needs a center of gravity; the writer who helps the ordinary Christian reader understand that every biblical story is, at its root, a Jesus story. The "better Christian story" she is after is not an abstraction — it is a felt sense of the beauty and coherence of Jesus-centered faith, communicated through a voice that has been honed in the pulpit, sharpened in the academy, and tested in sixteen-plus years of local congregation life.

Description: Good addresses the questions that 21st-century readers bring to the Bible — questions about biblical authority, literary genre, difficult texts, and how to interpret Scripture without falling into either knee-jerk fundamentalism or dismissive skepticism. The book guides readers toward "faithful reading, communal discernment, and deep and transformative wonder about Scripture." Three sections span biblical basics, interpretive methods across different literary genres (including Old Testament violence, poetry, prophecy, apocalyptic), and practical application to daily life, including the role of the Holy Spirit and community discernment. Each chapter concludes with questions for reflection. Written to be accessible for a lay audience while maintaining scholarly integrity. Simultaneously functioned as the book artifact component of Good's DMin dissertation ("Between Breaths: The Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority") at Portland Seminary.

Foreword note: Gregory Boyd wrote the foreword, calling the book "enjoyable to read—without sacrificing anything by way of biblical scholarship."

Key endorsers: Scot McKnight (Northern Seminary) — "accessible, witty and theologically sound"; Leonard Sweet (Evangelical Seminary) — "a rare treasure"; Gregory Boyd — commends the balance of storytelling and scholarship.

Description: A movement manifesto for a more hopeful, Jesus-centered Christianity. Good argues that Western Christianity is entering a period of reformation analogous to the Protestant Reformation — driven by new technologies, ecclesial scandals, and a crisis of biblical authority. The book presents eight central theses addressing Christian belief and practice, organized in three parts: a dilemma, a rediscovery, and a proposal for transformation. She argues "the Christian story the church has been telling has become too small" and invites readers into a movement already emerging across denominational lines that rediscovers authentic, Christ-focused narrative — "God is breathing life among us, restoring creation, and reconciling all divided things." The final chapter explores unity through a "gravitational approach" where "Jesus is Lord" is the centered story around which the Jesus movement revolves, drawing on Anabaptist theologian Mark Baker's centered-set ecclesiology. David C. Cramer (Anabaptist World, Jan 19, 2024) describes it as "both an apologetic for the Christian faith and a manifesto for reforming it."

Key endorsers:

- Richard J. Mouw (Fuller Seminary president emeritus): "In this engagingly written book, Meghan Larissa Good has given me new hope for the cause of the gospel."
 - Brian D. McLaren: "I'm so grateful for gifted leaders like Meghan Larissa Good who are not only theologizing about ways forward for Christian leaders and communities but also experimenting with embodying creative theology in congregational practice."
 - Gregory A. Boyd: "Powerful and insightful" — addresses gospel distortions.
 - David P. Gushee (Mercer University): Describes Good as "a rising star of the next generation of Christian writers" and the book as "an Anabaptist-inflected presentation of the way of Jesus."

Frameworks

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/meghan-good/content/frameworks.md

Frameworks: Meghan Larissa Good

Status: Complete (grounded in published corpus)

Last updated: 2026-06-05

Confidence: HIGH on framework existence and naming; framework dates anchored to the source book's publication year.

Good's frameworks form one coherent argument: God looks like Jesus, so all of Scripture and the whole life of faith is read through the lens of Jesus, and the church recovered on that center is held together not by boundaries but by a shared gravitational pull toward Christ — advanced through cross-shaped rather than coercive power.

The Jesus Lens (Christocentric Hermeneutic)

Field	Value
Introduced	2018 (The Bible Unwrapped; DMin dissertation)
Components	(1) Jesus as the fullness of God (Col. 1:19, Heb. 1:1-3, John 1:1); (2) Jesus as Scripture's authoritative interpreter; (3) every text — including OT violence, difficult Pauline and apocalyptic passages — read through and toward its culmination in Christ; (4) Christ as the "canon within the canon" while honoring all of Scripture
Visual / model	"Putting on our Jesus glasses" (verbal metaphor)
Adoption evidence	The Bible Unwrapped (Outreach 2019 Resource of the Year; ~150 Goodreads ratings); informed the Anabaptist Community Bible project (2022 keynotes); "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel (54+ Luke devotionals, 2026)
Source	heraldpress.com ; anabaptistworld.org

The Jesus Lens reads all of Scripture through Jesus as the supreme interpretive authority: Jesus is "not the softer side of God that gets averaged" with divine judgment, but the fullness of God against which every text is evaluated.

Dialogic Biblical Authority

Field	Value
Introduced	2018 (DMin dissertation Between Breaths; The Bible Unwrapped)
Components	Authority emerges from dynamic conversation among five dialogue partners — Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, and community/experience — rather than from a single static source (sola scriptura alone)
Visual / model	"Dialogical paradigm" (described, not diagrammed)
Adoption evidence	Dissertation publicly available in George Fox Digital Commons; underlies The Bible Unwrapped; informs the AMBS Teaching Leadership competency she oversees
Source	digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/dmin/272

Dialogic authority argues that Christian authority "cannot be possessed as a static and absolute quality of any single entity" — its shape is "fundamentally relational" and dialogic, positioning her against both fundamentalist biblicism and liberal dismissal.

Divine Gravity / Centered-Set Ecclesiology

Field	Value
Introduced	2023 (Divine Gravity)
Components	Jesus as the gravitational center holding together diverse, naturally repelling people; belonging defined by trajectory of motion toward Jesus rather than by boundary position; centered-set over bounded-set church (drawing on Mark D. Baker's application of Paul Hiebert's missiological model)
Visual / model	Gravity metaphor — objects drawn toward a common center
Adoption evidence	Divine Gravity (4.36–4.62 Goodreads; endorsed by Mouw, McLaren, Gushee, Boyd); featured on Jesus Collective's "Jesus Centered Foundations" resource page; MennoCon21 address

Divine Gravity defines Christian community not by doctrinal fences (who is in or out) but by orbital direction toward Jesus: "Individuals and groups who would naturally repel each other will be held together when they find a center of gravity in something bigger and better."

The Better Christian Story (Eight Theses)

Introduced	2023 (Divine Gravity)
Components	(1) Jesus as authoritative interpretive lens for God and Scripture; (2) salvation as setting all things right on earth; (3) discipleship as acknowledging and following Jesus; (4) Christian community as both means and goal of God's transformation; (5) God's people as reconciliation ambassadors; (6) the Spirit guiding and resourcing mission; (7) sacrificial love overcoming evil; (8) church unity centering on Jesus as gravitational focal point
Visual / model	— (organized in three parts: a dilemma, a rediscovery, a proposal)
Adoption evidence	The structural backbone of Divine Gravity; cited in Cramer's Anabaptist World review as "a manifesto for reforming" the faith

The Better Christian Story is eight interlocking convictions that constitute a recovered Christian narrative, framed as the content of a Spirit-led "new reformation."

Cross-Shaped (Kenotic) Power

Field	Value
Introduced	2023 (Divine Gravity); developed in "Jesus and the Devil's Bargain" (2024)
Components	God's kingdom advances through self-sacrifice, vulnerability, and suffering love, not coercive force; Jesus's Matthew 4 temptations were genuine (power for righteous ends was available) and refused; cross-shaped power "appears slower, more painful, seemingly like losing before winning" but alone defeats evil
Visual / model	—
Adoption evidence	Central to Divine Gravity; journal essay "Jesus and the Devil's Bargain" (2024); rooted in Anabaptist peace-church theology

Cross-shaped power is a theology of power in which coercive force even for righteous ends is a "devil's bargain" rejected by Jesus; nonviolence flows from the very character of God revealed in Christ.

Notes: The column appears quarterly (February, May, August, November) suggesting a November 2020 start. The August 2022 entry is the last confirmed piece. Good is also quoted in the Anabaptist World article "Putting on our Jesus glasses" (September 15, 2022), where she describes the Anabaptist hermeneutical method as "putting on our Jesus glasses" in the context of a new Anabaptist Bible project.

Note: The January 2024 cluster ("Jesus and the Devil's Bargain," "A World Without Judgment," "Praying for Lightning," "The Best Question I've Ever Been Asked") appears to be a linked thematic series — Good described "Jesus and the Devil's Bargain" as the fourth and final installment in a series exploring "What don't you like about your faith?" Likely 3–4 posts precede it in late 2023 that are not yet cataloged.

Thematic Analysis

Good's writing across all venues clusters around:

1. Jesus-centered interpretation — how reading through the lens of Jesus transforms Scripture's meaning ("Jesus glasses")
 2. The Christian story — what it means to recover an authentic, non-distorted gospel narrative
 3. Practical theology for doubt and questioning — addressing the reader who is unsure, skeptical, or wounded
 4. Women in Scripture and ministry — the Luke 1 piece and Barbara Brown Taylor interview signal sustained interest
 5. Preaching and homiletics — craft of communication runs implicitly through the pastoral voice of her writing

Notes on the Table

- Episodes #2 and #3 (Greg Boyd) are a two-part series on the same podcast, released together on May 9, 2025.
- Episodes #7 and #8 (Discover the Word) are two consecutive weeks of a 10-episode "Story of Scripture" series; Good is a recurring panel guest across all 10 episodes at "The Table." The series aired October 28 – November 8, 2024.
- Episode #6 (The Competent Pastor) carries an editorial note that "In the time between this interview and publishing, Meghan Good has resigned as pastor of Trinity Mennonite Church in Arizona."
- The Yeovil Community Church "interview" (#9) appears on both YouTube and the church's sermon archive; it is not a formal podcast episode but an ad-hoc recorded conversation.

Hosted Audio Content: "Reading Jesus"

Reading Jesus Podcast / Devotional Series

Field	Detail
Name	Reading Jesus
Platform	YouTube channel + Jesus Collective resources
Channel URL	https://www.youtube.com/@ReadingJesus
Format	Short devotional video/audio segments; Gospel of Luke focus
Status	Active — content referenced as recently as 2025
Content	Devotional series on reading the Gospel of Luke as encountering the risen Jesus
Subscriber count	UNKNOWN — needs direct YouTube research
Video/episode count	UNKNOWN — needs direct YouTube research
Connection	Aligns with and promotes The Bible Unwrapped and Divine Gravity themes

Note: The "Reading Jesus" designation spans both a YouTube channel and what sources describe as a "Reading Jesus podcast." It is likely that the YouTube videos function as the primary delivery mechanism, with audio-only versions distributed as podcast episodes. She also offers a free eBook Reading Scripture with Jesus to newsletter subscribers, which may overlap thematically with this series.

Denominational / Institutional Audio

Event	Platform	Date	Notes
MennoCon19 — Friday Morning Worship	YouTube (Mennonite Church USA / MCC channel)	July 2019	Full worship address; sermon titled "He Breathed on Them"; video confirmed at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dogKWAwc2JE
MennoCon21 — Evening Worship Address	Unknown / possibly Mennonite Church USA archive	July 7, 2021	Address on the relationship between Jesus and Mennonite peacemaking; ~590 in-person + 454 online; audio/video availability UNKNOWN

Key Themes Across Podcast Appearances

Primary Themes (appear in 4+ episodes)

1. Jesus-centered Christianity — the claim that re-centering on Jesus transforms every aspect of faith and life; present in virtually every interview

2. Recovery of a better Christian story — the reform movement thesis from Divine Gravity; present in all 2023–2025 appearances
3. Biblical interpretation / hermeneutics — how to read Scripture faithfully; drawn from The Bible Unwrapped
4. Reformation analogy — Western Christianity undergoing a reformation comparable to the 16th century

Secondary Themes (appear in 2-3 episodes)

1. Pastoral competency and preaching — craft of ministry; pastoral presence; listening to the Holy Spirit
2. The biblical narrative arc — Scripture as one coherent story (Story of Scripture series)
3. Unity and community across disagreement — practical ecclesiology; centered-set church
4. Anabaptist / Mennonite context — peacemaking, Jesus-centered identity, Jesus and reconciliation

Most Frequent Podcast Hosts

Host	Episodes	Podcast
Greg Boyd	2 (two-part series)	Apologies & Explanations (ReKnew)
Mart DeHaan, Elisa Morgan, Daniel Ryan Day	10 (panel, 2 weeks)	Discover the Word
Joshua Johnson	1	Shifting Culture
Teena Dare	1	Faith, Work & Rest (Resh)
Alex Dye	1	Ohio Conference Cast
Michael Danner & Rachel Ringenberg Miller	1	The Competent Pastor (MC USA)

Timeline

Year	Appearances	Notes
2021	2 podcast/interview appearances	Faith, Work & Rest (Nov); Yeovil interview (May)
2024	3 confirmed episodes + 10-episode Discover the Word series	Shifting Culture (Jan); Ohio Conference Cast (Feb); Discover the Word (Oct–Nov)
2025	2 podcast episodes (Greg Boyd × 2) + Competent Pastor	Competent Pastor (Feb); Greg Boyd Parts 1–2 (May)

Note: 2022–2023 appearances are thin in confirmed results. Given the November 2023 publication of Divine Gravity, it is likely that podcast appearances occurred in late 2023 that have not been cataloged.

Gaps & Opportunities

What Was Not Found

- No dedicated podcast — Good does not host her own standalone podcast; the "Reading Jesus" channel appears to be the closest analog
- No AMBS chapel sermon archive — AMBS has a YouTube channel (<https://www.youtube.com/ambsedu>) but Good's specific chapel sermons there are unconfirmed; needs direct search
- No pre-2021 podcast appearances — despite 16+ years of pastoral ministry and the 2018 book launch, no podcast appearances from 2018–2020 were identified
- MennoCon21 audio/video — her evening worship address (July 7, 2021) is referenced but audio/video availability is unconfirmed
- 2022–2023 appearances — likely exist around the Divine Gravity launch period; not yet cataloged
- Audible Divine Gravity duration — confirmed available but runtime not retrieved (Audible returned 503 error)

Opportunities for Movemental

1. Owned audio channel gap — Good has no dedicated podcast; a Movemental-hosted podcast series would fill a clear gap in her content ecosystem
 2. Discover the Word reach — her 10-episode Story of Scripture series (Our Daily Bread) represents her highest-reach audio appearance; cross-referencing to her books and newsletter would be natural
 3. Anabaptist network — Ohio Conference Cast, Mennonite Church USA Competent Pastor — strong denominational distribution channel that could amplify Movemental content
 4. Reading Jesus integration — her owned YouTube/audio channel shares thematic DNA with all her books and speaking; unification under a Movemental ecosystem would increase discoverability

Meghan Larissa Good — Video & Multimedia Content Catalog

Research Date: 2026-05-27

Status: Verified from YouTube (direct search), Mennonite Church USA, MennoMedia, ReKnew, Shifting Culture; view counts and dates not all retrievable

Executive Summary

Meghan Larissa Good hosts her own YouTube channel ("Reading Jesus") — which distinguishes her from some peers — but her broader video presence is distributed across institutional channels (Mennonite Church USA, Jesus Collective, Our Daily Bread Ministries) and podcast video feeds (Shifting Culture, Greg Boyd / ReKnew). Her largest identifiable video presence comes from her role as a main conference speaker at MennoCon19 (2019) and MennoCon21 (2021) and as a featured guest on the Our Daily Bread "Discover the Word" series (2024). No dedicated personal YouTube channel distinct from the "Reading Jesus" channel was identified.

- Own YouTube channel: Yes — "Reading Jesus" (<https://www.youtube.com/@ReadingJesus>)
 - Own channel subscriber count: UNKNOWN — direct YouTube metadata not retrievable via search
 - Own channel video count: UNKNOWN — needs direct channel research
 - Estimated total confirmed/identifiable videos across all platforms: 15-25+
 - Date range: 2019 (earliest confirmed) to 2026 (ongoing)
 - Most significant video events: MennoCon19 worship address (2019); MennoCon21 worship address (2021); Discover the Word 10-episode series (2024)

Own Channel: "Reading Jesus" (YouTube)

Field	Detail
Channel Name	Reading Jesus
Channel URL	https://www.youtube.com/@ReadingJesus
Format	Short devotional video segments; Bible reading / Gospel of Luke focus
Host	Meghan Larissa Good
Status	Active
Subscriber Count	UNKNOWN — needs direct research
Video Count	UNKNOWN — needs direct research
Content Description	Jesus-centered devotional readings and short teachings; designed to model reading Scripture as an encounter with the risen Jesus; thematically aligned with The Bible Unwrapped and Divine Gravity
Connection to Books	Serves as the video/audio expression of the hermeneutical approach developed in The Bible Unwrapped
Notes	Sources describe this as both a YouTube channel and a "Reading Jesus podcast" — likely the same content distributed via both video and audio feeds

Conference / Institutional Videos

Notes: MennoCon19 was a major Mennonite Church USA biennial convention. Good was a featured worship leader / morning keynote preacher. Sermon title: "He Breathed on Them" (confirmed by search results). These are among her highest-profile preaching recordings. The channel that hosts these is the Mennonite Church USA or an affiliated Mennonite media organization.

Evening Worship Address at MennoCon21	Mennonite Church USA / unknown channel	July 7, 2021	Unknown	~590 in-person + 454 online	UNKNOWN — needs research	Conference sermon / worship address

Notes: Good delivered an evening worship address on July 7, 2021, posing the "defining question" for Mennonite Church USA: "How much does Jesus actually matter to the work of reconciliation?" Video recording availability unconfirmed. The in-person + online attendance figures suggest this was streamed / recorded. Check Mennonite Church USA YouTube channel (youtube.com/MennoniteChurchUSA) for the archive.

Notes:

- "12: Unwrapping The Bible" and "BONUS (12b)" appear to be from the same podcast/series but the show name is not confirmed from available metadata. Given the episode number (12) and "Unwrapping the Bible" title, this is likely a Christian formation or theology podcast from 2018–2019, coinciding with The Bible Unwrapped release. Show name UNKNOWN — needs research.

- The Shifting Culture episode (Ep. 148) and Competent Pastor episode have confirmed YouTube video versions.

Notes: Meghan Good joined Mart DeHaan, Elisa Morgan, and Daniel Ryan Day as a "scholar and preacher" for the two-week "Story of Scripture" journey. Our Daily Bread Ministries has a large YouTube subscriber base — this is likely her most widely viewed video appearance outside the Mennonite world. The series covers the narrative arc of the Bible from Creation to New Creation. 10 episodes total (5 per week), with the YouTube links above representing the week anchor videos.

Mennonite Church USA (Competent Pastor)	1	Season 1, Episode 5

Total confirmed / identifiable video appearances: 20-25+

Total including Reading Jesus channel (unquantified): 25-50+

Notable Gaps

1. Reading Jesus channel — subscriber count and full video inventory are unresearched; this is her highest-priority owned video asset and needs direct channel audit
2. MennoCon21 — video of her July 7, 2021 evening worship address is unconfirmed in archives
3. AMBS chapel sermons — Good is AMBS faculty; AMBS has an active YouTube channel (<https://www.youtube.com/ambsedu>) but her specific chapel preaching appearances there are not cataloged
4. Unidentified "Ep. 12" podcast — show name and channel name for the "Unwrapping The Bible" series need identification
5. Trinity Mennonite Church sermon archive — Good served as lead/teaching pastor at Trinity Mennonite Church in Glendale/Phoenix, Arizona for approximately 15 years; the church's sermon archive (if online) would represent her single largest video corpus, but URL and availability are UNKNOWN

6. Conference recordings — Jesus Collective North American Tour (2023), Mosaic Conference (2025), Ohio Annual Conference Assembly (2024), Church of the Brethren Clergywomen's Retreat (February 2025) — likely recorded but not confirmed online

7. No TED/TEDx talks identified

Comparison to Similar Leaders

Good's video profile is smaller but more personal than many contemporaries. She owns a YouTube channel ("Reading Jesus") which gives her a direct relationship with an audience — unlike JR Woodward who has no dedicated YouTube presence. However, her institutional appearances (MennoCon, Our Daily Bread) are high-reach and suggest she is gaining visibility beyond the Anabaptist world. The primary gap is her church sermon archive, which — given 15+ years of pastoral ministry — likely represents hundreds of recorded sermons that are either lost or in unpublished local archives.

Meghan Larissa Good — Academic Profile, Dissertation & Scholarly Work

Catalog Date: 2026-05-27

Confidence Level: High (dissertation confirmed in Digital Commons; AMBS role confirmed; award confirmed)

Researcher: Movemental Research Team

Positioning Note

Meghan Larissa Good is a practitioner-scholar — her academic formation is in homiletics and hermeneutics, but her primary output has been pastoral (16+ years as lead/teaching pastor), popular theological (two Herald Press trade books), and ecclesiastical (AMBS faculty, Jesus Collective theology chair). She is not a research-track academic publishing in peer-reviewed journals; she is a theologically trained minister-author whose DMin work produced a commercially published book (The Bible Unwrapped) and who now shapes doctoral candidates through AMBS's Teaching Leadership competency. Her scholarly contribution is best understood as applied homiletical theology — the integration of dialogic authority theory, Jesus-centered hermeneutics, and preaching craft into ministry practice.

DMin Dissertation

"Between Breaths: The Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority"

Field	Detail
Full Title	Between Breaths: the Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority
Author	Meghan Larissa Good
Institution	Portland Seminary at George Fox University
Program	Doctor of Ministry (DMin)
Year	2018
Repository	George Fox University Digital Commons: https://digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/dmin/272/
Lead Mentor / Advisor	Dottie Escobedo-Frank, DMin
Committee Members	Jamie Noling-Auth, DMin; Nijay Gupta, PhD
Published Book Artifact	The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2018) — the lay-accessible version of the dissertation's core argument
Sermon Portfolio Artifact	Bone Gardener: Selected Sermons (George Fox University, 2017) — 12 sermons embodying the dialogic homiletical approach
Award	Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching (Portland Seminary, May 2018) — first recipient of this award

Abstract Summary: Good's dissertation examines how Christian authority functions across Protestant traditions in a post-Reformation context. She argues that "the authority of the Bible functions dialogically" — not residing in a single static source (sola scriptura alone) but through a complex conversation among Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, and experience, with different Protestant branches prioritizing these sources differently. She introduces a dialogical paradigm as a fresh framework for understanding religious authority as relational rather than hierarchical. The dissertation includes a practical case study on gay marriage as an example of dialogic authority in practice. The accompanying book (The Bible Unwrapped) provides a lay introduction to core questions of biblical interpretation and authority.

Key Themes:

- Dialogic authority vs. monologic (static) biblical authority
- Post-Reformation Protestant epistemology
- Scripture, tradition, Spirit, reason, experience as dialogue partners
- Practical hermeneutics for lay communities
- Preaching as embodied, relational dialogic event

Research Question: How does Christian authority function dialogically, and what does that look like in contemporary Protestant practice?

Award: Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching

Field	Detail
Award Name	Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching
Awarding Institution	Portland Seminary at George Fox University
Date Awarded	May 2018
Distinction	First recipient of this award
Named for	Frederick Buechner — novelist, theologian, and memoirist; widely regarded as one of the most influential preacher-writers of the 20th century
Significance	Recognizes outstanding homiletical work demonstrated across the DMin program; naming the award after Buechner signals the seminary's value for literary/narrative approaches to preaching — a sensibility visible throughout Good's writing and speaking

Academic Affiliations & Roles

Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary (AMBS)

Field	Detail
Institution	Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Elkhart, Indiana
Role	Faculty of Record — Teaching Leadership Competency, Doctor of Ministry in Leadership
Start Date	UNKNOWN — active as of January 4, 2026 research; likely began 2022-2024
Format	Regular Zoom sessions with DMin students; personalized learning plan development; integration of knowledge into ministry practice
Contact	mgood@ambs.edu / 541-220-1574
URL	https://ambs.edu/employees/meghan-good/
Program URL	https://ambs.edu/doctor-of-ministry-in-leadership/

Role description: Good works with DMin students in the Teaching Leadership competency track. She develops personalized learning plans, processes learning with students, and helps them integrate knowledge into their diverse ministry contexts. The Teaching Leadership competency addresses how leaders teach, preach, and communicate the faith effectively in congregational and organizational settings.

Jesus Collective — Theology Circle

Field	Detail
Organization	Jesus Collective
Role	Chair of the Theology Circle; also listed as Resource Development Manager
Description	The Theology Circle is a group of 13 theologians and practitioners from six countries across four continents, providing theological direction and resources for the Jesus Collective network, mentoring theological leaders, and providing a peaceful voice for the Jesus-centered movement worldwide
Theological significance	This is an international theological leadership role — not merely a church committee. As chair, Good exercises theological authority over the network's doctrinal direction and resources
URL	https://jesuscollective.com/

Published Academic / Scholarly Work

Good's scholarly output flows through her DMin project and has been channeled primarily into the popular-academic lane (trade books, lay hermeneutics). She does not have a peer-reviewed journal article corpus.

Books as Scholarly Contribution

Title	Year	Publisher	Academic Classification
The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today	2018	Herald Press	Popular-academic hermeneutics; grew from DMin dissertation book artifact
Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story	2023	Herald Press	Ecclesiology / missional theology for practitioner audience

Sermon Portfolio

Title	Year	Publisher	Notes
Bone Gardener: Selected Sermons	2017	George Fox University (Portland, OR)	DMin artifact; 12 sermons embodying dialogic homiletical method; not commercially published

Key Theological Interlocutors (from dissertation and published work)

Scholar / Thinker	Engagement Area
Frederick Buechner	Narrative homiletics; literary preaching; memoir and theology
Dottie Escobedo-Frank	DMin mentor; preaching; dialogic homiletics
Nijay Gupta	Committee member; New Testament scholarship
Gregory A. Boyd	Foreword to The Bible Unwrapped; open theism; Jesus-centered Christianity
Mark Baker	Anabaptist centered-set ecclesiology; referenced in Divine Gravity
Dennis R. Edwards	Foreword to Divine Gravity; urban ministry; Anabaptist scholarship
Scot McKnight	Endorser; New Testament; Anabaptist-influenced scholarship
Barbara Brown Taylor	Interviewed in The Other Journal (2013); embodied theology; preaching
Brian McLaren	Endorser; progressive evangelical / post-evangelical theology
Leonard Sweet	Endorser; postmodern homiletics; cultural theology

Research Interests and Theological Position

Based on confirmed publications, teaching, and interviews:

1. Dialogic hermeneutics — Scripture's authority functions relationally through multiple dialogue partners (Bible, tradition, Spirit, reason, community)
2. Jesus-centered interpretation — The person and teaching of Jesus as the hermeneutical key to Scripture, including the Old Testament ("Jesus glasses")
3. Homiletics — Narrative preaching; story and metaphor; dialogic sermon construction; preaching as communal discernment
4. Ecclesiology — Centered-set church; movement ecclesiology; the "new reformation" thesis
5. Christian authority post-Reformation — Navigating Protestant fragmentation; reclaiming coherent authority without fundamentalism
6. Women in Scripture and ministry — Implicit through her Luke work, interview with Barbara Brown Taylor, and role as a female DMin award recipient in homiletics

Theological tradition: Anabaptist-Mennonite (primary), with engagement across post-evangelical, progressive evangelical, and mainline ecumenical networks. Affiliated with Jesus Collective, which is explicitly cross-denominational and Jesus-centered rather than confessionally Anabaptist.

Conference / Lecture Appearances (Academic Framing)

Title / Event	Venue	Date	Topic
MennoCon19 — Morning Worship	Mennonite Church USA biennial convention	July 2019	"He Breathed on Them" — sermon

Gaps & Notes

- No peer-reviewed journal articles confirmed — Good's scholarly output runs through her DMin dissertation, trade books, and denominational magazine columns. No JSTOR, EBSCOhost, or ATLA-indexed journal articles found.
 - Dissertation full text: Available at Digital Commons (George Fox University); the PDF was not retrievable directly (HTTP 403) but the metadata page confirms its presence: <https://digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/dmin/272/>
 - DMin committee: Advisor Dottie Escobedo-Frank and committee members Jamie Noling-Auth and Nijay Gupta confirmed from the Digital Commons record.
 - AMBS start date: Exact date she joined AMBS faculty is unconfirmed; the role was active as of January 2026 research.
 - Ordination status: Good is described as an "ordained pastor" in some sources (notably the Ohio Conference Cast preview, Feb 2024). Denominational affiliation for ordination (Mennonite Church USA or specific conference) is UNKNOWN — needs verification.
 - Duke Divinity and Gordon College: No specific faculty, mentor, or thesis connections from those institutions have been identified beyond the degrees held.

Meghan Larissa Good — Courses & Training Programs

Catalog Date: 2026-05-27

Status: Verified from ambs.edu, meghanlarissagood.com/speaking/, mennoniteusa.org, brethren.org, and web sources

Summary

Good's teaching footprint spans four distinct contexts: (1) her primary academic role as Faculty of Record at AMBS (Doctor of Ministry program, Teaching Leadership competency); (2) adjunct / guest teaching at Northern Seminary (Formation for Ministry, 2025) and Canadian Mennonite University (21st Century Preaching, 2021); (3) preaching workshops offered directly through her personal website for emerging and experienced preachers; and (4) retreat and conference teaching for denominational gatherings. She does not appear to have a commercially available online course platform (e.g., Teachable, Thinkific) as of May 2026 — but her speaking/workshops page and the AMBS role represent her primary training delivery.

AMBS — Doctor of Ministry in Leadership: Teaching Leadership Competency

Field	Detail
Institution	Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary (AMBS), Elkhart, Indiana
Program	Doctor of Ministry in Leadership (DMin)
Role	Faculty of Record — Teaching Leadership Competency
Degree Level	Doctoral (DMin, 32 credit hours)
Program Duration	3 years
Competency Credits	3 credit hours (directed study format)
Format	Individualized — regular Zoom sessions with each student; personalized learning plan development; integrating learning into ministry context
Cohort size	UNKNOWN; multiple students per cohort across program
URL	https://ambs.edu/doctor-of-ministry-in-leadership/
Contact email	mgood@ambs.edu

Program Structure: The DMin has five competency tracks. Students select their competency emphasis and work with a Faculty of Record in a directed study course. Good oversees the Teaching Leadership track, which focuses on developing leaders' capacity to teach, preach, and communicate effectively in ministry contexts — an area directly aligned with her DMin specialization (dialogic preaching authority) and the Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching.

Curriculum context: The five competencies are Anabaptist Leadership, Intercultural Leadership, Teaching Leadership, Change Leadership, and Resilient Leadership. Core leadership courses are offered as January intensives on campus, with online coursework throughout.

Faculty of Record peer group (DMin program, also listed): Deborah K. Byler, and at least six others. Good is specifically named for Teaching Leadership in AMBS's faculty descriptions.

AMBS — Practical Leadership Training (PLT)

Field	Detail
Institution	Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary
Program	Practical Leadership Training
Role	Occasional instructor / module leader
Format	Short modules (one session to several hours); designed for pastors, lay leaders, nonprofit leaders
Focus areas	Administration, leadership, contextual engagement, well-being
URL	https://ambs.edu/practical-leadership-training/
Notes	Good appears in PLT instructor bios. Teaching Leadership is primarily a DMin competency; no standalone PLT module by Good was confirmed as of May 2026. May teach occasional PLT modules; needs direct inquiry.

Northern Seminary — Formation for Ministry

Field	Detail
Institution	Northern Seminary, Lisle, Illinois
Role	Instructor — Formation for Ministry
Year	2025
Format	UNKNOWN — likely modular intensive or online
Degree program context	Formation for Ministry at Northern Seminary typically integrates spiritual formation, vocation, and theological reflection
URL	https://www.seminary.edu/
Confidence	Confirmed via web search summary; not directly confirmed via Northern Seminary course page

Canadian Mennonite University — 21st Century Preaching

Field	Detail
Institution	Canadian Mennonite University (CMU), Winnipeg, Manitoba
Role	Preaching Instructor / Workshop Leader
Year	2021
Format	UNKNOWN — workshop or short course; likely part of CMU's Centre for Faith and Life or Centre for Renewal (renew conference)
URL	https://www.cmu.ca/community/
Confidence	Confirmed via web search summary; not confirmed via CMU course catalog
Notes	Consistent with her Anabaptist network and preaching specialization. CMU has hosted Meghan Good as a speaker/preacher; a prior visit occurred around 2017 as well.

Personal Preaching Workshops (Direct Offering)

Offered through meghanlarissagood.com/speaking/ as part of her speaking and workshop portfolio.

Introduction to Preaching Workshop

Field	Detail
Audience	Those new to preaching; "finding their voice"
Format	Workshop (in-person or online); length/price UNKNOWN
Topics	Sermon construction; finding one's preaching voice; story and metaphor in preaching

Advanced Preaching Workshop

Field	Detail
Audience	Experienced preachers looking to expand their communication toolkit
Format	Workshop (in-person or online); length/price UNKNOWN
Topics	Advanced sermon craft; dialogic techniques; biblical interpretation through metaphor and narrative
URL	https://meghanlarissagood.com/speaking/

Notes: Both preaching workshops are offered directly by Good; they are listed on her website as part of her speaking and workshop menu. Pricing and specific scheduling are handled through direct contact (not a public course catalog). These appear to be custom engagements arranged with churches, institutions, and conference organizers rather than fixed-enrollment open courses.

Conference / Retreat Teaching (Formal Teaching Role)

Event	Organization	Date	Location	Format	Topics
Church of the Brethren Clergywomen's Retreat	Church of the Brethren Ministry Office	February 10-13, 2025	San Pedro Spiritual Development Center, Winter Park, Florida	Multi-day retreat; morning presentations	"Love the World like Jesus with Courage, Care, and Healing" — 3+ sessions; 70+ attendees; multilingual (English, Spanish, Haitian Creole)
2024 Annual Conference Assembly (ACA)	Ohio Mennonite Conference	March 1-2, 2024	Sharon Mennonite Church, Plain City, Ohio	Featured speaker; workshops	Divine Gravity; Jesus-centered movement; what it takes to align with what the Spirit is doing
"All the Stories are Jesus" Lecture Series	UNKNOWN host institution	January-February 2026	UNKNOWN	Lecture series (multiple sessions)	Scripture as a unified story pointing to Jesus
"Thinking with Jesus"	Fresno Pacific University	March 2027 (scheduled)	Fresno, California	UNKNOWN — keynote or lecture series	Jesus-centered theology and thinking
Mosaic Conference Annual Gathering	Mosaic Mennonite Conference	2025	UNKNOWN	Speaker	UNKNOWN topic; confirmed speaker role

Jesus Collective — Jesus Centered Foundations (Resource, not course)

Field	Detail
Resource Name	Jesus Centered Foundations
Organization	Jesus Collective
Format	8 video modules × 30 minutes each, with discussion questions
Topics	The Kingdom of God, The Trinity, Humanity, The Cross, The Spirit & the Church, Scripture, Eschatology, Discipleship and Mission
Price	$49 (individual) to $299 (large church); free for Jesus Collective partners
Meghan Good's Role	Chair of the Jesus Collective Theology Circle; Divine Gravity is listed as a complementary book resource alongside this video series. Direct teaching role in the videos: UNKNOWN — needs research
URL	https://jesuscollective.com/jesus-centered-foundations/

Key Teaching Frameworks

Good's teaching, whether at AMBS, in workshops, or in conferences, consistently deploys these frameworks:

Framework	Source	Description
Dialogic Authority	DMin dissertation ("Between Breaths," 2018)	Scripture's authority functions dialogically through tradition, Spirit, reason, and experience — not in a single static source
Jesus-centered Hermeneutics	The Bible Unwrapped (2018)	Reading Scripture through the "Jesus lens"; moving beyond biblicism or skepticism
Centered-set Ecclesiology	Divine Gravity (2023)	Community defined by trajectory toward Jesus rather than bounded membership; draws on Mark Baker's Anabaptist centered-set model
The New Reformation	Divine Gravity / speaking	Western Christianity entering a reform period; identifying and aligning with what the Spirit is doing
Story and Metaphor in Preaching	Preaching workshops / DMin	Craft elements: narrative construction, metaphor, dialogic sermon form

Gaps & Needs

- AMBS DMin student count — number of students Good currently oversees in the Teaching Leadership competency is UNKNOWN

- Online course — as of May 2026, no standalone commercial online course (e.g., on Teachable, Course Craft, or similar) has been confirmed; this is a significant opportunity gap
 - Northern Seminary course details — course name, format, whether ongoing or one-time, not confirmed
 - Jesus Centered Foundations teacher credits — whether Good appears on screen or co-created any of the 8 videos needs direct verification
 - "All the Stories are Jesus" lecture series host — institution or organization hosting this January–February 2026 series is not confirmed

- Theology Circle leadership: Chairs 13-person international group across 6 countries (Jesus Collective)

Note on AMBS Board Status

The May 2019 AMBS commencement record explicitly identifies Good as a "member of the AMBS Board of Directors." The current (May 2026) board roster does not include her name. This indicates she served on the board — most likely from approximately 2019 — but her term has since concluded. The claim in the research prompt that she has been on the board "since ~2019" is confirmed for the period around 2019; ongoing status should be treated as UNKNOWN — needs verification.

Meghan Larissa Good: Collaborators Network

Research Date: 2026-05-27

Last Updated: 2026-05-27

Foreword Writers / Writing Collaborators

Name	Relationship	Context	Key Details
Gregory A. Boyd	Foreword Writer (The Bible Unwrapped); Podcast Host; Co-publication collaborator	Wrote the foreword to The Bible Unwrapped (2018). Good wrote the foreword to Boyd's God Looks Like Jesus (Herald Press, 2025). Boyd hosted Good in a two-part interview on his ReKnew podcast (episodes 1268-1269, May 9, 2025) to discuss Divine Gravity. Both share Jesus Collective involvement.	Boyd is senior pastor of Woodland Hills Church (St. Paul, MN) and president of ReKnew Ministries. Boyd endorsed Divine Gravity: "With Divine Gravity, pastor Meghan Larissa Good has created a work that will make followers of Jesus rethink what faith and faithfulness mean in the twenty-first century." This is one of Good's deepest collegial relationships — spanning two mutual book contributions and multiple platforms.
Dennis R. Edwards	Foreword Writer (Divine Gravity)	Edwards wrote the foreword to Divine Gravity (2023). Edwards is listed as a secondary author on the book's Amazon/publisher listings ("Good, Meghan Larissa; Edwards, Dennis R."), suggesting the foreword is substantial in scope.	Edwards is Associate Professor of New Testament at Northern Seminary, a sought-after conference speaker, and frequent contributor at Missio Alliance. He has served as a church planter in Brooklyn and Washington DC with nearly three decades of urban ministry experience. He is also an endorser of God Looks Like Jesus (Boyd, 2025).

DMin Dissertation Committee (Portland Seminary, 2018)

Good's dissertation — "Between Breaths: the Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority" — involved three formal advisors who shaped her doctoral formation and, through The Bible Unwrapped, her subsequent publishing work.

Name	Role	Affiliation	Relationship
Dottie Escobedo-Frank	Primary Advisor	Portland Seminary (George Fox University)	Good's lead DMin advisor and an endorser of The Bible Unwrapped: "You need this book in your church, and in your work with people who are searching for answers." The close advisory relationship is evident in the book's accessibility-focused design.
Jamie Noling-Auth	Secondary Advisor	Portland Seminary (George Fox University)	Second committee member for Good's DMin. No public collaboration confirmed beyond the dissertation context.
Nijay Gupta	Expert Advisor (New Testament)	Then at Portland Seminary; later Northern Seminary / Seattle Pacific University	New Testament scholar who provided expert review for the dissertation. His expertise in New Testament and hermeneutics aligns with The Bible Unwrapped's subject matter.

Jesus Collective Theology Circle

Good chairs the Jesus Collective Theology Circle — a body of 13 leaders across 6 countries and 4 continents providing theological direction and resources for the Jesus Collective network. As chair, she is the primary collaborator with all Theology Circle members. Full membership list is not publicly enumerated on the Jesus Collective website as of May 2026.

Confirmed Theology Circle-adjacent collaborators (individuals with confirmed Jesus Collective connections and collaboration with Good):

Name	Role	Context
M. Scott Boren	Jesus Collective contributor; co-author with Boyd on God Looks Like Jesus	Boren contributed to God Looks Like Jesus (Herald Press, 2025), for which Good wrote the foreword. Boren is a Theology Circle member-adjacent figure.
Betty Pries	Jesus Collective resource contributor	Doctor of conflict transformation; contributed to Jesus Collective's "Making Peace in a Polarized World" resource alongside Samuel Sarpiya.
Samuel Kefas Sarpiya	Jesus Collective resource contributor	Executive Director, Center for Nonviolence and Conflict Transformation (Rockford, IL). Endorser of Divine Gravity and Jesus Collective content contributor.

Note: The Theology Circle's full 13-member roster across 6 countries has not been publicly posted on the Jesus Collective website; the introductory blog post no longer surfaces member names. This section should be expanded when the roster is published. UNKNOWN — needs further research.

AMBS Academic Colleagues

Name	Role	Affiliation	Relationship to Good
Safwat Marzouk	Associate Professor of Old Testament	Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "It invites readers to see the Bible for what it is: a collection of sacred texts through which God has spoken." Colleague in the AMBS faculty community.

Endorsers and Theological Allies

Name	Affiliation	Nature of Connection
Richard J. Mouw	President Emeritus, Senior Professor, Fuller Seminary	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "In this engagingly written book, Meghan Larissa Good has given me new hope for the cause of the gospel." Leading evangelical theologian providing cross-tradition validation.
Brian D. McLaren	Author (Do I Stay Christian? and many others)	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "The world needs to see congregations of people who are actually following Christ, and that's exactly where Divine Gravity leads." McLaren is one of the best-known voices in progressive/post-evangelical Christianity.
David P. Gushee	Distinguished University Professor of Christian Ethics, Mercer University	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "Meghan Larissa Good is a new voice to me, but she is clearly a rising star of the next generation of Christian writers."
Oneya Okuwobi	Teaching Pastor, 21st Century Church; Asst. Professor of Sociology, University of Cincinnati	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "the questions she poses are invaluable for we who collectively and desperately desire a realignment of the Western church to God's great story."
Mark D. Baker	Professor of Mission and Theology, Fresno Pacific Biblical Seminary	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "This book overflows with images, stories, and illustrations that communicate deep insights with freshness and clarity."
Nelson Okanya	Global Missions President, Center for Serving Leadership	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "Good offers a compelling reimagination of the story of God's work and the redemptive potential of the people of God."
Keri Ladouceur	Pastor and Founder, New Ground Network	Endorsed Divine Gravity: "This anointed call to unity cultivated from a different center has the potential to recalibrate our understanding of mission."
Leonard Sweet	Bestselling author, scholar, speaker	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "The Bible Unwrapped bears untold gifts, as rich and valuable in their own way as those brought to a child by wise ones two thousand years ago."
Kurt Willems	Writer, podcaster, lead pastor, Pangea Church	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "This book about the Book is a gift to the church!"
Paul Borgman	Author	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "Meghan Larissa Good's heart and mind combine in a very special talent that will entice readers."
Derek Hogan	Asst. Professor of New Testament, Campbell Divinity School	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "The messy and sacred world of the Bible is a window through which we can view God's story."
John T. Noble	Assoc. Professor of Bible and Religion, Huntington University	Endorsed The Bible Unwrapped: "An accessible primer on Scripture and interpretation for college students and parishioners alike."

Key Relationship Clusters

The Boyd / Jesus Collective Circle

Good's most prominent cross-tradition collaboration is with Greg Boyd. They have written forewords for each other's books, Boyd endorsed Divine Gravity, Good chairs the Theology Circle at Boyd-adjacent Jesus Collective, and Boyd hosted her on his podcast. The relationship spans 2018 (The Bible Unwrapped foreword) through 2025 (God Looks Like Jesus foreword + podcast).

The Anabaptist-Mennonite World

Good is embedded in the Mennonite Church USA ecosystem: AMBS faculty, MC USA ordained minister, Anabaptist World columnist, MennoCon preacher, and Herald Press author. Key colleagues within this world include AMBS faculty member Safwat Marzouk and Portland Seminary advisors Dottie Escobedo-Frank and Jamie Noling-Auth.

The Broader Progressive-Evangelical Circle

Endorsements from Richard Mouw (Fuller), Brian McLaren, David Gushee, and Dennis Edwards (Northern Seminary / Missio Alliance) position Good in a cross-denominational progressive-evangelical conversation around Jesus-centered renewal. Edwards in particular bridges the Missio Alliance world and Good's work.

Mentorship / Influence Lines

- Dottie Escobedo-Frank appears to be a key formative mentor (primary DMin advisor; endorsed debut book).
- Greg Boyd functions as the most prominent peer endorser and platform amplifier outside the Mennonite world.
- Dennis R. Edwards is the key co-collaborator on Divine Gravity (foreword) and shares a theologically adjacent orbit.

Endorser	Affiliation	Quote / Summary
Dennis R. Edwards (Foreword)	Associate Professor of New Testament, Northern Seminary; author; urban church planter	Wrote foreword. Edwards is listed as secondary author on Amazon listings, indicating the foreword is substantive.
Richard J. Mouw	President Emeritus and Senior Professor of Faith and Public Life, Fuller Seminary	"In this engagingly written book, Meghan Larissa Good has given me new hope for the cause of the gospel."
Brian D. McLaren	Author of Do I Stay Christian?; progressive Christian leader	"I'm so grateful for gifted leaders like Meghan Larissa Good who are not only theologizing about ways forward for Christian leaders and communities but also experimenting with embodying creative theology in congregational practice. The world needs to see congregations of people who are actually following Christ, and that's exactly where Divine Gravity leads."
Gregory A. Boyd	Senior Pastor, Woodland Hills Church; President, ReKnew Ministries	"With Divine Gravity, pastor Meghan Larissa Good has created a work that will make followers of Jesus rethink what faith and faithfulness mean in the twenty-first century...the vision she presents is as refreshing as it is compelling."
David P. Gushee	Distinguished University Professor of Christian Ethics and Director, Center for Theology and Public Life, Mercer University	"Meghan Larissa Good is a new voice to me, but she is clearly a rising star of the next generation of Christian writers. I will be looking forward to hearing what she has to say for many years to come."
Oneya Okuwobi	Teaching Pastor, 21st Century Church; Assistant Professor of Sociology, University of Cincinnati	"Readers may not agree with Good on every count, but the questions she poses are invaluable for we who collectively and desperately desire a realignment of the Western church to God's great story."
Samuel Kefas Sarpiya	Executive Director, Center for Nonviolence and Conflict Transformation (Rockford, IL)	"What the Protestant Reformation did in the sixteenth century, Divine Gravity might do for us today, ushering us into a rediscovery of Jesus and his centrality to the Christian faith and life."
Mark D. Baker	Professor of Mission and Theology, Fresno Pacific Biblical Seminary	"This book overflows with images, stories, and illustrations that communicate deep insights with freshness and clarity."
Nelson Okanya	Global Missions President, Center for Serving Leadership	"Good offers a compelling reimagination of the story of God's work and the redemptive potential of the people of God."
Keri Ladouceur	Pastor and Founder, New Ground Network	"This anointed call to unity cultivated from a different center has the potential to recalibrate our understanding of mission."

Endorsements GIVEN (by Meghan Larissa Good for others' books)

Book	Author	Good's Role	Publisher	Year	Notes
God Looks Like Jesus: A Renewed Approach to Understanding God	Gregory A. Boyd (with M. Scott Boren; Jesus Collective)	Foreword Writer	Herald Press	2025 (published May 27, 2025)	Good wrote the foreword for Boyd's book, which presents the Jesus Collective's central conviction that God's character is fully revealed in Jesus. Good's foreword describes the book as helping readers "shout from the mountaintops the good news." This is a reciprocal relationship — Boyd wrote the foreword to Good's debut book in 2018.

Note on other endorsements given: No additional confirmed written endorsements (back-cover blurbs or forewords) for other authors' books have been found in available sources as of May 2026. The God Looks Like Jesus foreword is the only confirmed item in this category.

UNKNOWN — needs further research into whether Good has endorsed other publications (e.g., for Mennonite or Anabaptist press titles).

Endorsement Network Summary

People Who Have Endorsed Good's Work (received)

- Gregory A. Boyd — foreword (The Bible Unwrapped) + endorsement (Divine Gravity)

People Good Has Endorsed (given)

- Gregory A. Boyd (foreword, God Looks Like Jesus, Herald Press, 2025)

Mutual Endorsement Relationships

- Gregory A. Boyd: Boyd wrote the foreword for The Bible Unwrapped (2018); Good wrote the foreword for God Looks Like Jesus (2025). Full reciprocal relationship across seven years.

Endorser Theological Range

Good's endorsers represent a wide cross-denominational range:

- Anabaptist/Mennonite: Safwat Marzouk (AMBS), Dottie Escobedo-Frank
- Progressive evangelical: Brian McLaren, David Gushee, Greg Boyd (open theism/ReKnew)
- Reformed/evangelical: Richard Mouw (Fuller Seminary)
- Missio Alliance world: Dennis R. Edwards (Northern Seminary)
- Global/urban ministry: Nelson Okanya, Oneya Okuwobi, Samuel Kefas Sarpiya, Keri Ladouceur
- Academic: Derek Hogan (Campbell Divinity), John T. Noble (Huntington), Mark D. Baker (Fresno Pacific)
- Popular/pastoral: Leonard Sweet, Kurt Willems, Paul Borgman

This breadth signals that Good occupies a cross-tradition niche — Mennonite home base, but read across progressive evangelical, post-evangelical, and mainline circles.

Important note on follower counts: All social media and YouTube follower counts are genuinely unknown — not zero. The discovery research was unable to retrieve authenticated platform data. Any specific number would be fabricated. The directional assessment below reflects inference from Goodreads volume, denominational context, and comparable authors — not measured counts.

Publishing Reach

Metric	Value	Confidence
Books authored	2 (Herald Press trade books) + 1 DMin sermon collection (non-commercial)	HIGH
Foreword contributed	1 (Boyd's God Looks Like Jesus, 2025)	HIGH
Publisher	Herald Press (MennoMedia — Mennonite Church USA)	HIGH
Year range	2018–2023	HIGH
Audiobook confirmed	1 (Divine Gravity, self-narrated, Audible, ~June 2024)	HIGH
Goodreads avg rating	~4.32 / 5 (combined estimate; 4.31 on Bible Unwrapped, 4.62 on Divine Gravity hardcover)	HIGH
Most-rated book	The Bible Unwrapped (150 ratings, 26 reviews)	HIGH
Outreach Magazine award	2019 Resource of the Year — Theology/Biblical Studies	HIGH

Organizational Reach

Organization	Est. Reach	Evidence
Jesus Collective network	1,000s of churches and leaders across North America	jesuscollective.com — Canadian-registered charity; she chairs 13-person Theology Circle across 6 countries, 4 continents
Mennonite Church USA	~60,000 members in ~500 congregations	MC USA national body; she has preached at MennoCon19 and MennoCon21 conventions
AMBS DMin students	Dozens per cohort year	DMin Teaching Leadership Faculty of Record; Zoom-based mentoring
Church of the Brethren clergy network	70+ attended a single retreat she led (Feb 2025)	brethren.org news coverage
Ohio Mennonite Conference	Regional constituency; ~1,000-2,000 annual assembly attendees	Annual Conference Assembly 2024 keynote
Anabaptist World readership	Estimated 5,000–15,000 denominational readers	8 confirmed quarterly columns 2020–2022
Reading Jesus YouTube viewers	NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE	54+ devotionals in 2026 suggests consistent viewership; volume implies audience, not isolated viewership

Reach Tier Assessment

Tier	Range	Assessment
Micro (< 10K combined)
Growing (10K-50K)	Most likely this tier	172 Goodreads ratings, Mennonite denominational context, modest but high-engagement conference circuit, unknown social/YouTube
Established (50K-250K)
Major (250K+)

Estimated tier: Micro to early Growing (5,000–20,000 unique individuals across all channels)

Rationale: The 172 Goodreads ratings, if applying a 5–10x multiplier standard for niche Christian titles, suggest 850–1,700 book readers for The Bible Unwrapped and fewer for Divine Gravity. However, the Outreach Magazine 2019 Resource of the Year award implies broader reach than Goodreads ratings alone capture — evangelical retailers and ministry catalogs will have distributed the book to readers who do not use Goodreads. Her Mennonite denominational circuit (MC USA conventions, AMBS, Ohio Mennonite Conference, Church of the Brethren) represents a concentrated high-trust audience of several thousand. Jesus Collective's North American tour (she was a keynote) extends her reach into post-evangelical and progressive-evangelical circles. The "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel with 54+ episodes in 2026 is the most underestimated reach indicator: daily devotional video consumers rarely leave Goodreads reviews. Her total combined reach is meaningfully smaller than JR Woodward's (~25,000–40,000 estimated) and significantly smaller than Alan Hirsch's (~150,000+). This is an honest assessment, not a deficiency — her audience is unusually high-trust, high-engagement, and strategically positioned at the intersection of Anabaptist theology and the broader deconstruction-to-reconstruction movement.

Confidence: LOW-MEDIUM — follower counts unknown; estimate is inference from indirect signals.

Audience Profile

Who Is the Audience?

Primary audience: Pastors, ministry leaders, and theologically educated laypeople in Mennonite Church USA and adjacent Anabaptist/Brethren traditions who are wrestling with how to articulate and embody a Jesus-centered faith in a post-Christendom, post-scandal ecclesial environment. Typically ages 30–55, seminary-educated or self-educated theologically, often bi-vocational or in small-to-mid-size congregations. They encounter Good through MC USA denominational channels (Anabaptist World, MennoCon, conference circuits), AMBS, and Herald Press.

Secondary audience: Post-evangelical and progressive-evangelical Christians — many in deconstruction or reconstruction — who are looking for a credible, intellectually honest, Jesus-centered alternative to both fundamentalism and theological liberalism. They are drawn to Good through Jesus Collective, the Boyd/ReKnew network, Brian McLaren adjacent communities, Red Letter Christians, and her "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel. Ages 25–45; often digitally native; may have no Mennonite background at all but resonate with her Christocentric hermeneutic and "better story" framing.

Tertiary audience: Preachers and homiletics students — across traditions — who discovered Good through her Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching, her preaching workshop offerings (listed on her speaking page), or referrals from Portland Seminary. They are interested not just in her theology but in her craft of narrative preaching. This is a smaller but highly influential audience: preachers who adopt her approach can multiply her reach through their own congregations.

Audience Demographics (Estimated)

Dimension	Assessment
Primary role	Pastor / Ministry leader / Seminary student / Theologically engaged layperson
Age range	25–55 (core: 30–45)
Education	High — substantial proportion have MDiv, MA in theology, or are in seminary programs; lay audience is theology-literate
Denominational breadth	Mennonite/Anabaptist home base; meaningful reach into progressive-evangelical, post-evangelical, and Brethren circles. Her Outreach Magazine award and Boyd/McLaren/Gushee endorsers signal a broader evangelical-to-progressive spectrum.
Geographic concentration	US-centric (with MC USA concentrated in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kansas, Oregon, Arizona); Canada (Jesus Collective is Canadian-registered; Canadian Mennonite coverage confirmed); increasingly cross-denominational through Jesus Collective's North American footprint
Gender split	Estimated 45–55% female — higher female representation than missional-church-planting networks, consistent with Mennonite ordination of women and her women's retreat ministry (Church of the Brethren Clergywomen's Retreat, 70+ women). Preaching-focused content appeals across gender lines.
Political orientation	Center-left on the theological-political spectrum; peace-church tradition (Mennonite nonviolence); non-partisan but willing to name prophetic challenges to power. Not as explicitly political as JR Woodward's "Faithful Resistance" Substack.

Audience Personas

Persona 1: Hannah — Mennonite Pastor Seeking a Compelling Narrative

Field	Value
Role	Lead pastor, mid-size Mennonite Church USA congregation in Ohio
Age	38
Education	MDiv from AMBS
Tradition	Mennonite Church USA
Discovery path	Encountered The Bible Unwrapped through a Herald Press mailing to pastors; read it during a congregational study on biblical authority; attended MennoCon21 and heard Good speak on "Do Peacemakers Need Jesus?"
Primary format	Books (study with congregation); speaking/conference; newsletter
Use case	Needs theological tools to help her congregation navigate deconstruction pressure from younger members, questions about OT violence, and diminishing confidence in Scripture — without losing their Anabaptist peace-church convictions
Pain point	Feels the tension between the peace tradition's social witness and the need to proclaim Jesus clearly; Good's MennoCon21 address addressed this directly

What Hannah values in Good: The Christocentric hermeneutic of The Bible Unwrapped gives her congregation a framework that holds together scriptural authority and honest engagement with hard texts. Divine Gravity's eight-thesis "better story" gives her language for articulating why Jesus-centered faith is not just defensible but beautiful. Good's Anabaptist credential matters: Hannah trusts that Good is speaking from inside the tradition, not reforming it from outside.

What Hannah struggles with: Wishes Good had more sermon resources — specific preaching helps, not just principles. The "Reading Jesus" YouTube series on Luke is useful but she wishes for more denomination-specific formation content and study guides linked to the lectionary.

Persona 2: Caleb — Post-Evangelical Reconstructing

Field	Value
Role	Worship leader at a non-denominational church; podcast listener; in his own faith reconstruction process
Age	29
Education	BA in religion from a Christian university; self-educated theologically
Tradition	Former Southern Baptist; now attending a progressive-leaning non-denominational church
Discovery path	Found the "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel while searching for alternatives to fundamentalist hermeneutics; then read Divine Gravity after a Jesus Collective recommendation
Primary format	YouTube devotionals (primary); books; newsletter
Use case	Rebuilding a coherent theology of Scripture and God after leaving fundamentalism; needs a Jesus-centered hermeneutic that doesn't require him to abandon intellectual honesty
Pain point	Deconstruction has destabilized his image of God; he's suspicious of anything that sounds like "Christian celebrity" or manufactured certainty

What Caleb values in Good: Her willingness to name the "profound wound in their image of God" that many people carry — and to identify Jesus, not better doctrine, as the remedy. The "Reading Jesus" devotional format is low-barrier, intellectually honest, and Christocentric without being preachy. Her "Jesus glasses" hermeneutic gives him a principle for re-engaging Scripture without starting over from zero. Her humor signals safety: she won't be pompous about this.

What Caleb struggles with: The Mennonite denominational context can feel foreign. He wishes Good were more active on Substack or a platform where he could comment and discuss. The YouTube channel lacks a comment culture or community space where reconstruction conversations could happen.

Persona 3: Dr. Adaeze — Preaching Faculty Member

Field	Value
Role	Homiletics instructor at a small evangelical seminary
Age	45
Education	PhD in Preaching
Tradition	Anglican/Episcopal
Discovery path	Learned of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching at Portland Seminary; read The Bible Unwrapped to evaluate for course adoption
Primary format	Books; speaking (workshop format)
Use case	Wants to assign theologically rich, accessible texts on biblical interpretation for preaching courses; wants a voice that models narrative-literary preaching rather than just describing it
Pain point	Most accessible hermeneutics books lack theological depth; most scholarly hermeneutics books are too dense for M.Div. students in preaching courses

What Adaeze values in Good: The Bible Unwrapped threads the needle she needs — accessible enough for first-year seminarians ("accessible primer for college students and parishioners alike," per Huntington University endorser), theologically serious enough for advanced coursework. The Buechner Award credential matters to her as an endorsement of the preaching-writing integration. She is considering assigning Divine Gravity in a course on prophetic preaching and ecclesiology.

What Adaeze struggles with: Wishes Good had an academic publication record — even one peer-reviewed article — to ease approval for course adoption at her institution. The DMin dissertation ("Between Breaths") is not widely accessible; a published academic article derived from it would help.

What the Audience Values (from reviews and coverage)

Top Praise Themes

Theme	Frequency	Example Source
Accessibility without sacrificing theological depth	Very High	Goodreads: "best book I've read on interpreting the Bible"; "accessible primer"; Boyd: "enjoyable to read without sacrificing scholarship"
Jesus-centered hermeneutic as a coherent, liberating framework	Very High	Goodreads reviews; Anabaptist World review (Cramer, 2024); David Gushee endorsement
Useful for faith reconstruction / people leaving fundamentalism	High	Goodreads: "best introduction to the Bible for anyone... reconstructing their faith"; Cramer review notes utility for deconstructors
Narrative storytelling that carries theological weight	High	Mark D. Baker endorsement: "overflows with images, stories, illustrations"; voice analysis confirms distinctive literary style
A coherent "better story" that unifies without flattening	Medium-High	Divine Gravity Goodreads: "prophetic," "gold," "reformational" — readers sense they have found a frame that holds
Prophetic courage without condemnation	Medium	"Reconciliation work that gives up on proclaiming Jesus loses its very ground" — praised as honest and constructive

Top Criticisms (from reviews and absence of coverage)

Criticism	Frequency	Source
Most useful for those deconstructing; may feel incomplete for committed Scripture readers	Low-Medium	Cramer, Anabaptist World review of Divine Gravity (Jan 2024) — the one substantive formal review
Lacks bibliography / further-reading guide	Low-Medium	Cramer: "would benefit from a guide for further reading"
Limited discovery outside Mennonite/Anabaptist circles	Structural	No Christianity Today feature, no Christian Century standalone; Outreach award is the major crossover signal
Social media presence is quiet — no way to have a conversation	Structural	No Substack, no active discussion community; YouTube lacks engagement infrastructure

Audience Size by Channel

Title	Goodreads Ratings	Avg Rating	Est. Total Readers	Notes
The Bible Unwrapped (2018)	150	4.31	750–1,500	Ratings-to-readers multiplier of 5–10x for niche Christian titles; Outreach award and Herald Press distribution suggests actual readership may exceed this
Divine Gravity (2023)	~22 (paperback) + 37 (hardcover)	4.62 (hc)	300–700	Still accumulating ratings; audiobook released ~June 2024 may be growing audience
Books subtotal	~172	~4.32 avg	~1,000–2,200	Conservative estimate; does not include library readers, study group copies, or audiobook listeners

Speaking & Organizational

Channel	Audience Size	Engagement Level	Notes
Jesus Collective Theology Circle	13 leaders, 6 countries	Very High (peer-leadership)	Chairs international theological body
Jesus Collective network broadly	Thousands (est. 2,000–5,000 in active network)	Medium-High	Featured speaker at North American tour; Divine Gravity featured in Jesus Centered Foundations resources
MC USA conventions (MennoCon19, MennoCon21)	1,000+ per convention	Medium	Keynote/featured speaker; MennoCon21: ~1,044 confirmed attendees
AMBS DMin students	20–50/year (est.)	Very High (mentoring relationship)	Faculty of Record role is intensive
Church of the Brethren Clergywomen	70+ per retreat	High	Led four days of morning sessions — sustained authority, not a one-off keynote
Ohio Mennonite Conference	300–1,000/event (est.)	High	Keynote at Annual Conference Assembly 2024
Speaking subtotal	~3,000–7,000 cumulative	High	Dense denominational audience; not mass-market reach but disproportionately pastoral influence

Digital Content

Channel	Audience Size	Engagement Level	Notes
"Reading Jesus" YouTube channel	NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE	Assumed Medium-High (consistent production = consistent audience)	54+ devotionals on Luke in 2026 alone; the most underestimated reach channel
Website newsletter	NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE	Medium (stated weekly cadence)	"Reading Scripture with Jesus" lead magnet; site-native (not Substack)
Anabaptist World columns	5,000–15,000 readers (estimated denominational readership)	Low-Medium	8 quarterly columns 2020–2022; concluded
Podcast guest appearances	Small per episode (est. hundreds–low thousands combined)	Medium	6 confirmed appearances across 5 shows: ReKnew, Red Letter Christians, Shifting Culture, Competent Pastor, Our Daily Bread
Digital subtotal	Unknown but directionally significant	Medium	YouTube channel is the largest underestimated asset

Engagement Levels Assessment

Most Engaging Content Types

Format	Engagement Level	Evidence
Conference keynotes / retreat leadership	Very High	Four consecutive days leading Church of the Brethren Clergywomen's Retreat; two MennoCon keynotes; sustained authority
Books (study group format)	High	Free study guide for The Bible Unwrapped suggests congregational group use; Divine Gravity group Zoom Q&A offer
YouTube devotionals (Reading Jesus)	High per viewer	Volume (54+ episodes) signals committed audience; devotional format = daily-engagement intent
Newsletter	Medium-High	Weekly cadence; lead magnet reflects real conversion architecture
Podcast guest appearances	Medium	6 episodes; no owned audio channel; burst activity around Divine Gravity release
Social media	Unknown	Follower counts invisible; no evidence of sustained engagement strategies

Topics That Drive Engagement

Topic	Engagement	Platform	Evidence
Jesus as the lens for reading all of Scripture	Very High	YouTube, books, speaking	Core of "Reading Jesus" channel; The Bible Unwrapped top-rated; Buechner Award
The "better Christian story" / new reformation	High	Books, speaking, podcast	Divine Gravity "prophetic" and "reformational" language in reviews; Cramer review notes it as "starting point"
Deconstruction / reconstruction — finding a Jesus-centered anchor	High	Books, YouTube, Jesus Collective	"Best introduction to the Bible for anyone reconstructing their faith"; Jesus Collective audience segment
Cross-shaped power vs. coercive power	Medium-High	Books, journal essays	"Jesus and the Devil's Bargain" (2024 essay); Divine Gravity chapter; theological urgency for peace-church audience
Preaching craft and narrative homiletics	Medium	Speaking workshops; Buechner Award reputation	Preaching workshops listed on speaking page; Portland Seminary award
Women, prophecy, and pastoral authority	Medium	"The Confidence of Women" (Other Journal, 2017); Church of the Brethren Clergywomen	"When God has a secret, God talks to women" — distinctive voice in women's ministry contexts

Geographic Distribution

Region	Estimated Share	Evidence
US — Midwest (Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas)	30-35%	MC USA concentration in Ohio/Indiana; Ohio Mennonite Conference annual coverage; AMBS in Elkhart, IN
US — Pacific Northwest and Southwest (Oregon, Arizona, California)	20-25%	Albany Mennonite (OR) and Trinity Mennonite (Glendale AZ) pastoral base; Fresno Pacific lecture series (2027)
US — Mid-Atlantic and Northeast (Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York)	10-15%	MC USA concentration in Lancaster County PA; Brethren networks in Virginia
Canada	10-15%	Jesus Collective is Canadian-registered (Toronto); Canadian Mennonite covered her 2019 AMBS address
US — Southeast and Other	5-10%	David Gushee (Mercer University) and Oneya Okuwobi (Cincinnati) endorser connections
International	5-8%	Jesus Collective Theology Circle spans 6 countries, 4 continents; Dennis Edwards' urban ministry context; Samuel Sarpiya (Rockford/global)

Audience Overlap with Other Movemental Leaders

Greg Boyd — HIGH overlap

Dimension	Evidence
Mutual foreword exchange	Boyd wrote foreword for The Bible Unwrapped (2018); Good wrote foreword for Boyd's God Looks Like Jesus (2025)
Shared publisher	Both published by Herald Press (MennoMedia)
Shared organizational context	Both connected to Jesus Collective; Boyd is founder-adjacent; Good is Resource Development Manager and Theology Circle Chair
Shared hermeneutical framework	Both hold a Christocentric "God looks like Jesus" hermeneutic; Boyd's "cruciform" theology of God aligns closely with Good's Jesus-lens framework
Podcast	Boyd hosted Good in two-part Divine Gravity interview (ReKnew, May 2025)
Audience crossover	Estimated 40-60% of Good's post-evangelical audience also engages Boyd's work

Brian McLaren — MODERATE overlap

Dimension	Evidence
Endorsement	McLaren endorsed Divine Gravity: "The world needs to see congregations of people who are actually following Christ"
Shared audience	Both address post-evangelical/deconstructing Christians seeking a credible, Jesus-centered alternative; both speak into the "progressive Christian" space without fully adopting that label
Distinctive voice	McLaren is more politically engaged, more publicly prophetic, and operates at a larger scale; Good is more theologically grounded in a specific tradition (Anabaptism) and speaks to a more pastoral/formation-focused audience
Audience crossover	Estimated 20–35% overlap — post-evangelicals who follow McLaren would find Good credible and resonant

Dennis Edwards — MODERATE overlap

Dimension	Evidence
Foreword	Edwards wrote the substantive foreword to Divine Gravity (2023); listed as secondary author on Amazon
Shared networks	Both connected to Missio Alliance; Edwards' Missio Alliance presence and Northern Seminary affiliation bring a different (Black urban church planting) constituency
Complementary voice	Edwards brings Black Anabaptist theological tradition; Good brings white Mennonite Christocentrism; they represent a diversity within the same broad stream

Comparison Table vs. Peers

Positioning Summary

Good's audience is substantially smaller in raw count than her peer comparables but unusually concentrated at the intersection of (a) pastoral/theological credibility in Anabaptist traditions and (b) the post-evangelical deconstruction/reconstruction audience seeking a Jesus-centered anchor. She is the most credentialed voice in the Mennonite tradition on the themes of biblical interpretation and movement ecclesiology, and among the most articulate voices in the Jesus Collective orbit. Her audience compares favorably to JR Woodward's in engagement quality — pastoral, formation-oriented, high-trust — though smaller in absolute terms.

The most important audience signal: her "Reading Jesus" YouTube devotional series (54+ episodes in 2026 alone, focused on Luke) represents a daily-content relationship with an audience that is choosing to accompany her through an entire Gospel. This level of sustained engagement is rare and suggests a highly committed viewer base, even if subscriber counts are unknown.

Movemental Audience Implications

- Warm audience routes: Jesus Collective (she already chairs the Theology Circle and develops resources there); Herald Press/MennoMedia readers; MC USA convention attendees; Ohio Mennonite Conference network; Church of the Brethren clergywomen; Boyd/ReKnew audience; Red Letter Christians podcast listeners; Shifting Culture Podcast listeners. Each of these represents a pre-warmed audience that already trusts Good's voice.
 - Content format priority: Books and devotional video are her audience's primary modes of engagement. The "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel is the clearest growth vector — it already produces content at scale and has an audience relationship that no other channel of hers matches. A Movemental-hosted hub should function as the connective tissue that links the YouTube series to the books, the newsletter, the speaking calendar, and course opportunities.
 - Underserved audience segment: Preachers and homiletics students represent a high-value, underserved audience for Good. The Buechner Award is a credential that should unlock speaking and teaching opportunities in seminary preaching programs — but this audience cannot easily find her online. A Movemental profile with a dedicated preaching-craft content track could unlock this audience segment.
 - Cross-pollination with Boyd/McLaren: The highest-value cross-referencing on the platform would pair Good with Boyd (shared Christocentric hermeneutic, mutual forewords) and, more cautiously, with McLaren (shared deconstruction-reconstruction audience, overlapping theological concerns). Good provides the Anabaptist tradition depth and pastoral credibility that McLaren lacks; McLaren provides the scale and name recognition.
 - Honest audience sizing: This is a micro-to-growing leader by any standard digital metric. Her audience is not comparable in size to JR Woodward's (25K–40K estimated) or Alan Hirsch's (50K–100K estimated). Movemental should set realistic expectations: the opportunity here is not to amplify an already-large platform but to help a high-quality, under-leveraged voice reach the audience her work warrants — particularly through centralizing the "Reading Jesus" channel, connecting it to the books and newsletter, and unlocking new audiences through preaching networks and the broader post-evangelical/ Jesus Collective ecosystem.

Site Structure

meghanlarissagood.com functions as a personal author-speaker-theologian hub. The homepage leads with the theological tagline, prominently features Divine Gravity with a group-purchase Zoom Q&A offer, and presents "Latest stories" from the journal in a grid layout. Two newsletter signup CTAs appear above and below the fold, both offering the free eBook as an incentive — the clearest conversion mechanic on the site.

The six-page navigation (Home / Books / Speaking / Journal / About / Contact) is lean and purposeful. The Books page presents both titles with Amazon purchase links and notable endorsements (Greg Boyd on The Bible Unwrapped; Richard J. Mouw on Divine Gravity). The Speaking page is the most detailed secondary page, listing topics, booking logistics, upcoming engagements through 2027, and past speaking history. The About page confirms current roles (Jesus Collective Resource Development Manager; AMBS DMin faculty; "Reading Jesus" YouTube host) and educational background without listing any social media links.

The Contact page uses WPForms Lite for a simple name/email/message form, with a second newsletter signup embedded below. No social handles are displayed anywhere in the primary navigation or footers based on pages accessed.

Jesus Collective Relationship

Meghan Larissa Good chairs the Jesus Collective Theology Circle — a body providing theological direction and resources for the Jesus Collective network and mentoring theological leaders. Her book Divine Gravity is featured on the organization's "Jesus Centered Foundations" resources page as an extended written companion to their Five Markers video/discipleship content. After resigning from Trinity Mennonite Church on May 2, 2025, she joined Jesus Collective full-time as Resource Development Manager. Jesus Collective is a Canadian-registered charitable organization (CRA: 716049739RR0001) founded in association with Greg Boyd (Woodland Hills Church / ReKnew), oriented toward a "Jesus-Centered, Spirit-Empowered" movement theology.

Assessment: Meghan Larissa Good's academic presence is entirely institutional (AMBS faculty page) rather than distributed across independent academic repositories. She has not built an Academia.edu or Google Scholar presence despite her DMin credential and published academic-adjacent articles. Her publication record is practitioner-facing (Herald Press trade books, Anabaptist World columns, Outreach Magazine) rather than peer-reviewed academic.

Digital Presence Score: Meghan Larissa Good

Dimension	Score (1-5)	Notes
Website Quality	3.0	WordPress site is clean and purposeful with a clear author-platform architecture; 6-page navigation is lean and well-organized; Journal/blog is active (monthly cadence, dating back at least 2 years); two newsletter CTAs with a meaningful lead magnet are genuine strengths . Weaknesses: no embedded video from "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel; no newsletter signup within individual journal posts; book section links to Amazon rather than any owned checkout flow; no search functionality; CMS is not identified as a premium theme. Solid for a niche theologian; below what a speaker at this level could achieve.
Social Media Activity	1.5	Three confirmed personal platforms (Instagram @meghanlarissagood, Twitter/X @meghan_larissa, Facebook); follower counts universally not visible, making quantitative scoring impossible. Activity level is low-to-moderate on Instagram (recent posts confirmed) and unknown elsewhere. No YouTube social cross-posting strategy observed. No Threads, Bluesky, TikTok, or LinkedIn. The "Reading Jesus" channel is substantive but operates as a content platform rather than a social community. This is her most significant gap relative to peers at her influence level.
Content Freshness	3.5	Strong. Journal posts approximately monthly (10+ in the 12-month window ending April 2026). "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel produces 54+ videos in the first 5 months of 2026 — a high-velocity content cadence. Podcast guest appearances in 2025 (Greg Boyd, Red Letter Christians, Shifting Culture) demonstrate active external content production. Anabaptist World columns concluded 2022; those are historical. The Divine Gravity (2023) book is her most recent major piece. Overall: content production is active and varied; frequency is respectable for a theologian rather than a content creator.
Platform Diversity	2.5	Personal website + YouTube channel + email list + 3 social platforms is a workable core. Supplemented by AMBS and Jesus Collective institutional presence, Herald Press publishing, Goodreads, and recurring podcast guest appearances. But: no Substack, no academic repository, no course platform, no paid community, no LinkedIn, no emerging platforms (Bluesky/Threads). Organizational reach (Jesus Collective, Mennonite Church USA) extends her footprint but does not constitute owned platform diversity.
Email / Newsletter	2.5	The newsletter exists and is meaningfully architected: free eBook lead magnet ("Reading Scripture with Jesus") is above average for the peer set; two CTAs on the site show intentional conversion design. Weaknesses: unknown subscriber count (no public metrics); site-native platform (WPForms + unknown ESP) vs. Substack means no public discovery layer; no newsletter archive; not integrated into individual journal posts; no paid tier. The fundamentals are there, but the system is opaque and lacks the network effects of Substack.
Discoverability (SEO)	3.0	Multiple institutional backlinks (AMBS, Jesus Collective, Mennonite Church USA, Ohio Mennonite Conference, Church of the Brethren, Outreach Magazine, Missio Alliance, Anabaptist World) provide solid SEO signals. Book pages on Amazon and Goodreads. Publisher pages at Herald Press and Menno Media. Podcast appearances generate backlinks from Red Letter Christians, ReKnew, Shifting Culture, Ohio Conference Cast. Name disambiguation (vs. actress "Meagan Good") is resolved at the domain level by using full name in URL and on-page content. Gap: no Wikipedia page; no Academia.edu profile; no High-DA publication bylines (Christianity Today, etc.). Ranks well for "Meghan Larissa Good" but likely thin on topical queries ("Jesus-centered theology," "Anabaptist hermeneutics").

Overall	2.7/5	A genuine but modest digital footprint. Meghan Larissa Good has the essential infrastructure (personal website, email list, YouTube channel, confirmed social presence), but nearly every dimension is constrained by either missing data (follower counts), missing platforms (Substack, LinkedIn, emerging social), or missing integration (YouTube not embedded on website; journal posts without newsletter CTAs). Her most distinctive asset — the "Reading Jesus" channel with 54+ episodes in 2026 — is largely invisible from her website and social presence. The overall picture is of a productive theologian-author whose digital presence has grown organically without a systematic amplification strategy.

Score Interpretation

Meghan Larissa Good has a practitioner-first, digital-second presence that is coherent but underdeveloped relative to her influence, institutional positioning, and content production volume. Her influence is felt most strongly through:

- Organizational role: Jesus Collective (Resource Development Manager + Theology Circle Chair) extends her reach into a cross-denominational network beyond Mennonite contexts
- Published books: Two Herald Press titles with strong ratings (4.31 and 4.36 on Goodreads); The Bible Unwrapped recognized by Outreach Magazine
- Teaching/speaking: Active at AMBS (DMin faculty), Northern Seminary, Jesus Collective gatherings, cross-denominational retreats (Church of the Brethren)
- "Reading Jesus" channel: The highest-volume content asset she owns, with 54+ episodes in 2026 — but largely disconnected from her website and social strategy

Key Gaps for Movemental to Address

1. "Reading Jesus" YouTube is her biggest disconnected asset: 54+ video episodes in 2026, but no embed on homepage or Journal page, no cross-posting to Instagram Reels or Shorts, no dedicated "Watch" section on the website. This is her best content and least visible.
2. All social follower counts are unknown: Foundational audience data is missing. Needs direct platform access to record Instagram, Twitter/X, Facebook, and YouTube subscriber counts.
3. No Substack or public newsletter archive: Her email newsletter is invisible from the outside. No subscriber count, no past-issue archive, no discovery layer. Substack would give her free public discoverability and a network of theological readers.
4. No LinkedIn presence: For a DMin faculty member at AMBS and Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective, LinkedIn is an obvious professional platform gap.

5. No newsletter CTA in journal posts: Organic search visitors read a single article and have no clear path to email signup unless they navigate elsewhere.
6. No Wikipedia article: She has the credentials (two published books, DMin, Outreach Resource of the Year, 15+ years pastoral ministry, institutional faculty role) but no Wikipedia entry. This is a discoverable gap.
7. No course platform: Despite 15+ years of pastoral experience and DMin faculty credentials, no Teachable/Thinkific/self-hosted course exists. She teaches students at AMBS and Northern Seminary but there is no public-facing "course" product.
8. No Threads/Bluesky/Emerging Platform: Consistent with peer set in Mennonite/Anabaptist space; less critical than YouTube integration.
9. Email delivery platform unknown: Whether she uses Mailchimp, ConvertKit, or another ESP affects how sophisticated the audience funnel is. This is an ops gap, not a visibility gap, but matters for Movemental integration conversations.

Comparative Context (vs. JR Woodward)

Dimension	Meghan Larissa Good	JR Woodward
Personal website	WordPress, lean 6-page, active journal	WordPress/Astra, similar structure
Twitter/X	@meghan_larissa (count unknown)	@dreamawakener (~15,800)
Facebook	Personal profile (count unknown)	Author page @missionalculture (~6,300)
Instagram	@meghanlarissagood (count unknown)	@dreamawakener (low / dormant)
YouTube	"Reading Jesus" (54+ eps in 2026; count unknown)	No personal channel
Newsletter	Site-native (WPForms); free eBook CTA	Substack "Faithful Resistance" (hundreds)
Lead magnet	"Reading Scripture with Jesus" eBook — yes	None identified
Substack	Not found	jrwoodward.substack.com (active)
Books (Goodreads ratings)	172 combined (4.31 / 4.36 avg)	650 total (4.25 avg)
Academia.edu	Not found	477 followers, 8 papers
Wikipedia	No	No
Organizational affiliation	Jesus Collective (staff)	V3 Movement (National Director)
Overall Score	2.7/5	3.3/5

Notable contrast: JR Woodward scores higher primarily due to known follower counts (enabling quantitative social scoring), an active Substack with public subscriber metrics, and a larger Goodreads footprint. Meghan Larissa Good may actually have comparable or stronger YouTube content volume (54+ videos in 2026 is significant), but because that data is not publicly visible and the channel is not integrated into her website, it cannot be scored. The true gap may be smaller than the scored gap — but it cannot be closed without direct platform data access.

Primary Newsletter

Field	Value
Platform	Site-native (WordPress + WPForms Lite) — NOT Substack, NOT ConvertKit
Name / Tagline	"Weekly insights on Jesus-centered living" (no standalone newsletter brand name found)
Subscribe URL	meghanlarissagood.com (homepage); meghanlarissagood.com/contact/
Lead Magnet	Free eBook: "Reading Scripture with Jesus" — delivered to inbox upon signup
Frequency	Weekly (stated: "weekly insights")
Subscriber Count	NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE — no subscriber count displayed on site; platform (WPForms Lite) does not publish audience metrics
Free / Paid	Free only — no paid tier identified
Launch Date	Unknown — site has been active since at least 2018 (publication date of The Bible Unwrapped)
Email Provider	UNKNOWN — WPForms Lite handles form submission; the actual email delivery platform (Mailchimp, ConvertKit, etc.) is not exposed in public-facing code. Needs direct inspection or confirmation from subject.

Newsletter Signup Placement

Two distinct signup forms appear on meghanlarissagood.com:

1. Homepage — above the fold / featured section: Prominent CTA with the free eBook offer, positioned near the top of the home page alongside the latest journal posts.
2. Contact page — embedded below contact form: Secondary signup for visitors who reach out via the contact form.

No signup form was found embedded in individual journal/blog posts, which represents a missed opportunity to convert readers who arrive via organic search.

Lead Magnet: "Reading Scripture with Jesus" (Free eBook)

Field	Value
Title	Reading Scripture with Jesus
Format	Digital eBook (PDF or ePub — format not specified)
Delivery	Email inbox upon signup
Topic	Christological / Jesus-centered approach to reading the Bible — directly thematically connected to The Bible Unwrapped (2018) and her overall hermeneutical framework
Value proposition	"Weekly insights for Jesus-centered living" + free eBook
Confidence	High — described consistently across homepage and contact page; verified via WebFetch of meghanlarissagood.com

This lead magnet is meaningfully designed: it gives away a focused piece of her core intellectual framework (Jesus-as-hermeneutical-lens), establishing credibility and thematic resonance before asking for ongoing email attention. It is more substantive than a typical PDF checklist or "first chapter" offer.

Newsletter Content

No newsletter archive is publicly accessible. The content is not published on a Substack-style platform that would make past issues viewable. Based on the journal content on her site and her stated theological focus, the newsletter likely:

- Features weekly devotional reflections on Scripture through a Jesus-centered lens
- Draws from the same themes as her journal posts (Theology, Spirituality, Christian Living, Jesus-centered interpretation)
- May include announcements of upcoming speaking events and new journal posts
- Is not publicly archived or indexed

Content confidence: Low — inferred from site content and tagline, not from direct newsletter access.

Anabaptist World Column Archive (2020-2022)

Meghan Good served as Quarterly Bible Columnist for Anabaptist World from November 2020 through August 2022 — eight columns in total. These columns represent her longest-running external contribution series and demonstrate sustained editorial relationship with Mennonite denominational media.

Organizational Newsletters She May Be Featured In

Organization	Newsletter / Platform	Her Likely Inclusion	Status
Jesus Collective	jesuscollective.com (email list; newsletter format unknown)	High — as Resource Development Manager and Theology Circle Chair, she will contribute to and be featured in Jesus Collective communications	Probable but unverified
AMBS	ambs.edu (institutional newsletter, "AMBS Window")	Medium — faculty are occasionally featured in institutional alumni/supporter newsletters	Possible but unverified
Mennonite Church USA	mennoniteusa.org	Low — she has been featured in their content (Competent Pastor video) but is not a regular contributor	Historical

Podcast Content (Closely Related to Newsletter / Ongoing Content)

The "Reading Jesus" YouTube/podcast channel functions as Meghan's primary ongoing content distribution vehicle — more voluminous than the written newsletter and more accessible than the journal. It represents the audio-visual equivalent of a newsletter in terms of audience nurture and regular touchpoints.

Channel	Format	Cadence	Volume (2026)
Reading Jesus (YouTube)	Video devotionals	Weekly or near-weekly	54+ episodes on Luke in first 5 months of 2026

Observations

- 1. Site-native newsletter, not Substack: Unlike JR Woodward, who migrated to Substack for his newsletter ("Faithful Resistance"), Meghan Good keeps her email list entirely within her WordPress site via WPForms. This means no public subscriber count, no publicly archived issues, and no Substack network effects — but full ownership of the list and no platform dependency.
- 2. The lead magnet is her strongest email capture tool: "Reading Scripture with Jesus" eBook is clearly positioned and meaningfully aligned with her intellectual brand. Two placements on the site (homepage + contact page) show intentional conversion architecture — more than many peers who have no lead magnet at all.
- 3. No Substack presence detected: Searches for meghan larissa good substack returned zero relevant results. This is a deliberate or organic absence. Her newsletter model is email-first, not public-first.

4. Subscriber count is a genuine gap: Without Substack's public subscriber metrics or a third-party tool, the list size is completely opaque. It could be in the hundreds or the thousands — no evidence either way. UNKNOWN — needs direct research.
5. Weekly cadence is stated but unverified: The homepage says "weekly insights" — this cadence is plausible given her journal posts (roughly monthly) and YouTube content (frequent), but whether the email newsletter is actually sent weekly vs. less frequently is not verifiable from outside.
6. No paid email tier: Unlike JR Woodward's Substack ($10/month paid option), Meghan's newsletter is free-only. This is consistent with her site positioning (books and speaking as primary revenue, not subscriptions).
7. Gap: No newsletter signup is embedded in individual journal posts, meaning organic search visitors who read a single article have no obvious email capture pathway unless they navigate to the homepage or contact page.
8. Gap: Newsletter content is completely private — no public archive exists. For Movemental positioning purposes, this means the newsletter cannot be evaluated for quality, cadence adherence, or audience development.
9. Gap: Email delivery platform identity is unknown. If she is using Mailchimp, ConvertKit, or a similar tool, the sophistication of her email automation, segmentation, and analytics remains opaque. WPForms Lite is a form plugin, not an email service; it likely integrates with an ESP that is not visible publicly.

Facebook — facebook.com/meghanlarissagood

- URL: <https://www.facebook.com/meghanlarissagood>
- Handle confirmed via: Missio Alliance author page bio ("Facebook: meghanlarissagood") and search result snippets
- Follower / Likes count: NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE (Facebook returned no readable content on fetch)
- Page type: Likely personal profile or author page (URL structure is personal-profile style, not a /Page/ format)
- Identity confidence: High — URL appears directly in Missio Alliance author profile

- Notable: Mennonite Church USA posted a MennoCon19 video featuring Meghan Good to their Facebook page (facebook.com/MennonitesUSA), indicating she has appeared in organizational social content even if her own page data is not accessible

YouTube — "Reading Jesus" Channel

- Channel name: Reading Jesus
- Confirmed via: meghanlarissagood.com/about/ ("Host of the 'Reading Jesus' YouTube channel"); AMBS profile ("Podcast series and journal articles on biblical interpretation"); Search snippet describing "54 devotionals on Luke so far in 2026"
- Channel URL: https://www.youtube.com/@ReadingJesus (YouTube handle) — a channel ID UCy2vDSNCR8S814nAvAqqrqQ appeared in search results but could not be definitively linked to this channel through accessible web content
- Subscriber count: NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE — YouTube channel page content was truncated in all fetch attempts
- Video count: NOT PUBLICLY VISIBLE
- Content: Devotional video series; in 2026 the focus is the Gospel of Luke (54+ episodes mentioned); the channel is described as a podcast-style Bible reading series ("Reading Jesus podcast")
- Cadence: Appears to be weekly or near-weekly given 54 episodes in approximately the first 5 months of 2026
- Identity confidence: High — explicitly listed as her channel on two institutional profile pages (meghanlarissagood.com and ambs.edu)
- Notable: "Reading Jesus" functions as both a YouTube channel and an associated devotional podcast/audio series. The About page describes it as a channel; search results reference a "podcast"; this is likely a dual YouTube/podcast format.

LinkedIn

- Status: Not found
- Search returned: LinkedIn directory page listing "10+ Meghan Good profiles" — none confirmed as Meghan Larissa Good the pastor/author
- Assessment: LinkedIn is not a platform she actively uses for public presence based on available evidence

Threads, Bluesky, TikTok

- Status: Not found for any of these platforms
- Assessment: No handles, profiles, or mentions of Meghan Larissa Good on these platforms surfaced in searches. Neither her website nor her institutional profiles list these platforms. Low priority compared to her core channels.

Organizational Social Channels She Is Associated With

Organization	Platform	Handle	Notes
Jesus Collective	Instagram	@jesuscollective	Listed in Red Letter Christians podcast episode about Meghan; she is Resource Development Manager
Jesus Collective	Website	jesuscollective.com	She chairs Theology Circle; Divine Gravity featured in their resources
Mennonite Church USA	Facebook/ YouTube	@MennonitesUSA	Featured her at MennoCon19; "Competent Pastor" video series S1E5
AMBS	Multiple	ambs.edu	Faculty profile, contact listing

Cross-Platform Observations

1. Handle consistency: The handle @meghanlarissagood (Instagram, Facebook) directly mirrors her full name — clear, unsurprising, and unambiguous. Twitter/X uses @meghan_larissa (first + middle name), which is a mild inconsistency but also unambiguous.
2. Instagram is her most active personal social platform based on confirmed recent post activity (2026); Twitter/X is confirmed but frequency unknown.
3. YouTube is the most substantive content channel: "Reading Jesus" produces high-volume devotional video content (54+ episodes in 2026 alone), making it functionally her primary content distribution platform outside the website.
4. No video distribution via personal social: Unlike some movement leaders, her YouTube content does not appear to be systematically cross-posted to Instagram Reels or TikTok.
5. No Substack personal newsletter platform: Unlike JR Woodward, she has not established a Substack (newsletter is site-native via WPForms Lite; no third-party newsletter platform found).
6. Follower count gap: All follower counts are unknown. This is a genuine research gap — not fabricated zeros. Direct platform access is needed.
7. Low Threads/Bluesky/TikTok presence: Consistent with her denominational context (Mennonite) and content style (devotional/theological essay). She is not building a viral social media presence.
8. Facebook likely her lowest-engagement platform: No evidence of active posting; the URL suggests a personal-profile style rather than a dedicated author page with "Likes."
9. Institutional amplification: She benefits from Jesus Collective's social presence (as a featured speaker/theologian) and Mennonite Church USA channels, but these extend organizational reach rather than personal brand following.

Combined-Followers Estimate

Cannot be calculated with integrity. All individual platform follower counts are not publicly visible. A fabricated estimate would be methodologically unsound.

Directional assessment (confidence: Low-Medium):

- Given the niche denominational context (Mennonite), single-issue focus (Jesus-centered theology), and modest Goodreads ratings volume (172 total), total combined followers likely fall in the low thousands to mid thousands range across Instagram + Twitter/X + Facebook + YouTube — consistent with a well-regarded regional/denominational thought leader rather than a national evangelical media figure. This is an inference, not a measured count.

UNKNOWN — needs direct research (visit platforms while logged in to record counts).

Summary

Meghan Larissa Good's media presence is concentrated in Anabaptist/Mennonite denominational media and the broader progressive-evangelical book ecosystem. Key coverage pillars: (1) Herald Press/MennoMedia press releases and author features; (2) Anabaptist World — her primary ongoing denominational platform as columnist and news subject; (3) Outreach Magazine's 2019 Resource of the Year award, her most prominent crossover media moment; (4) conference preview and event coverage from MC USA, Ohio Mennonite Conference, and the Church of the Brethren; (5) podcast appearances, which expanded significantly with Divine Gravity's release in 2023. She has not received feature coverage in Christianity Today, Christian Century (beyond a passing mention in the Anabaptist Study Bible interview), or mainstream evangelical outlets.

Note: The Outreach Magazine 403 error prevented direct page retrieval; the award and URL are confirmed through multiple secondary sources and the search result summary, which specifies the award was for the "Theology/Biblical Studies Category." This is Good's most prominent crossover press recognition.

Notable Gaps

- No confirmed Christianity Today feature or profile article on Meghan Good as of May 2026.
- No confirmed Christian Century standalone feature (she appears only in passing in the Anabaptist Study Bible interview, which focuses on the project, not Good specifically).
- No confirmed Publishers Weekly or Kirkus review of either book — both are trade Christian titles published outside secular/mainstream review channels.
- Limited coverage in non-Mennonite evangelical media — the Outreach Magazine award remains the primary crossover recognition.
- Social media presence: Good maintains a personal website and YouTube channel but social media footprint details were not fully assessed in this research cycle. UNKNOWN — needs research.

Book Reviews: Meghan Larissa Good

Subject: Meghan Larissa Good — Mennonite author, pastor, theologian Confidence Level: High (reviews and ratings sourced from Goodreads, publisher pages, and review sites)

Aggregate Ratings Summary

Book	Goodreads Rating	Goodreads Ratings Count	Goodreads Reviews	Amazon Rating
The Bible Unwrapped (Herald Press, 2018)	4.31 / 5	150	26	~4.7 / 5 (est.)
Divine Gravity (Herald Press, 2023)	4.62 / 5	37 (hardcover ed.)	8	~4.8 / 5 (est.)

Note: Divine Gravity has a smaller ratings pool but higher average, reflecting a more narrowly self-selected readership. Both books are trade-level Christian titles aimed at pastors and thoughtful laypeople; they are not positioned as academic texts and are reviewed primarily in Christian ministry and denominational media rather than academic journals.

Leonard Sweet	Author, scholar	"The Bible Unwrapped bears untold gifts, as rich and valuable in their own way as those brought to a child by wise ones two thousand years ago."
Dottie Escobedo-Frank	Pastor, author	"You need this book in your church, and in your work with people who are searching for answers."

Derek Hogan	Asst. Professor, Campbell Divinity School	"The messy and sacred world of the Bible is a window through which we can view God's story."

Reception Summary — The Bible Unwrapped

Readers consistently praise two qualities: accessibility (non-specialist language that does not sacrifice scholarship) and practical utility (useful for church study groups, people deconstructing faith, and students alike). The Outreach Magazine award signals acceptance by evangelical gatekeepers across denominational lines. The Goodreads rating of 4.31 across 150 readers is strong for a niche Christian title. No critical or negative published reviews have been found. The main implicit critique in endorser language is that it is intentionally introductory rather than academic — a feature, not a bug, given the book's stated audience.

Mark D. Baker	Fresno Pacific Biblical Seminary	"Overflows with images, stories, and illustrations that communicate deep insights with freshness and clarity."

Reception Summary — Divine Gravity

Divine Gravity has a smaller but highly enthusiastic readership. The single formal review (Cramer in Anabaptist World) is intellectually engaged and offers the book's most substantive published critique: it is most useful for those deconstructing faith rather than for committed Scripture-readers, and lacks a bibliography for deeper engagement. Goodreads reviewers use language like "prophetic," "gold," and "reformational" — suggesting strong resonance with its target audience of pastors and leaders seeking a compelling Jesus-centered narrative. The weight of endorsers (Mouw, McLaren, Gushee, Boyd) is exceptional for a first-time book from a Mennonite trade press.

Review Sentiment Analysis

Book	Positive	Mixed/Critical	Overall
The Bible Unwrapped	Overwhelmingly positive; praised for accessibility without sacrificing scholarship; "best book I've read on the Bible" (multiple reviewers)	Implicit: positioned as introductory rather than academic; no negative published reviews found	Strongly received; Outreach Resource of the Year validates cross-denominational reach
Divine Gravity	Enthusiastic endorsers and Goodreads reviewers; "prophetic," "gold," "reformational" language	Cramer (Anabaptist World) notes it may not fully engage readers already committed to Scripture; wishes for a further-reading guide	Strong practitioner and post-evangelical reception; thinner academic uptake by design

Gaps in Review Coverage

- No review found in Christianity Today, Christian Century, Sojourners, Journal of Mennonite Studies, or academic theological journals for either book.
- No confirmed Amazon review aggregation data (estimated from search summaries only).
- Divine Gravity has not yet received significant review coverage outside the Mennonite denominational sphere and the endorser-level evaluations — this may reflect the book's 2023 publication date and the slower pace of Christian publishing review cycles.

Academic Citations & Scholarly Impact: Meghan Larissa Good

Subject: Meghan Larissa Good, DMin (Portland Seminary / George Fox University) — pastor, author, theologian Confidence Level: Low-Medium (Good is primarily a trade/practitioner author; formal academic citation data is sparse and could not be retrieved from Google Scholar directly)

Overview

Meghan Larissa Good is not an academic publishing scholar in the traditional sense. Her two books — The Bible Unwrapped (Herald Press, 2018) and Divine Gravity (Herald Press, 2023) — are trade-level Christian titles written for pastors, laity, and thoughtful churchgoers, published through the Mennonite denominational press (MennoMedia / Herald Press). Her DMin dissertation (Portland Seminary, 2018) is accessible via George Fox University's Digital Commons but has not been published as a monograph.

As a result, her academic citation footprint is modest compared to publishing scholars. Her influence operates primarily through practitioner channels: denominational speaking circuits, pastoral training, seminary DMin work, YouTube/podcast teaching, and endorsement by prominent public theologians. This is not unusual for her type of output.

Dissertation

Title	Institution	Year	URL
"Between Breaths: the Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority"	Portland Seminary, George Fox University	2018	digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/dmin/272/

Abstract summary: Good argues that "Christian authority cannot be possessed as a static and absolute quality of any single entity. Its shape is fundamentally relational." The dissertation traces historical shifts in Protestant views on authority, proposes a dialogical paradigm, includes a case study on gay marriage, and accompanies the artifact of The Bible Unwrapped as its practical output. The dissertation is classified under "Christianity Commons."

Citation status: No confirmed academic citations of the dissertation have been identified. It is publicly accessible in the George Fox University Digital Commons, which makes it findable by researchers. UNKNOWN — needs Google Scholar/ProQuest search.

Google Scholar Search

A direct Google Scholar profile for Meghan Larissa Good was not located during this research cycle. Searches on her name in Google Scholar do not surface a confirmed profile or citation count. This is consistent with her positioning as a trade author rather than a journal-publishing academic.

Recommendation: A direct Google Scholar search for "Meghan Larissa Good" + "Bible Unwrapped" should be run in a future research cycle to confirm whether either book appears in the Scholar index with citation counts.

Who Cites or Engages Good's Work

Scholars and Public Theologians Who Have Evaluated Her Work in Writing

These figures have written forewords, endorsements, or formal reviews of Good's books, indicating engagement at a citation-level of seriousness:

Person	Affiliation	Engagement
Gregory A. Boyd	Senior Pastor, Woodland Hills; President, ReKnew	Foreword (The Bible Unwrapped), endorsement (Divine Gravity), podcast interview (May 2025)
Dennis R. Edwards	Assoc. Professor, Northern Seminary	Foreword (Divine Gravity) — listed as secondary author
Richard J. Mouw	President Emeritus, Fuller Seminary	Endorsement (Divine Gravity)
Brian D. McLaren	Author, public theologian	Endorsement (Divine Gravity)
David P. Gushee	Mercer University (Christian Ethics)	Endorsement (Divine Gravity): "clearly a rising star of the next generation of Christian writers"

Potential Citation Contexts (Practitioner Literature)

Good's work is most likely to be cited in the following practitioner and DMin contexts:

Context	Rationale
DMin dissertations on biblical hermeneutics and preaching	The Bible Unwrapped is explicitly the artifact produced alongside Good's own DMin dissertation, making it a natural reference for subsequent DMin students working on preaching and hermeneutics at Anabaptist, Mennonite, or progressive evangelical seminaries
Anabaptist Study Bible project	Good's 2022 keynote presentations on "Reading Scripture with Jesus" directly informed the Anabaptist Community Bible project; her interpretive framework may be referenced in project documentation
AMBS DMin student work	As Faculty of Record for Teaching Leadership in the AMBS DMin, Good's books are likely assigned or recommended reading for her students
Jesus Collective theological resources	As Theology Circle chair, her framework likely appears in Jesus Collective curriculum and network documents
CMU / MC Saskatchewan preaching courses	Her materials were used in graduate-level preaching courses; likely informally cited in student work

Citation Ecosystem Assessment

Good's influence operates through practitioner channels rather than academic citation networks:

Her academic footprint through Nijay Gupta (NT scholar who served on her DMin committee) is a latent connection to more formally academic networks; however, no confirmed citations of her work by Gupta or in Gupta-adjacent academic contexts have been found.

Comparison with Peers

For context, Good's trade-book model is typical of her peer cohort of Mennonite and progressive evangelical pastor-authors. Her Goodreads rating (4.31 across 150 ratings for The Bible Unwrapped; 4.62 across 37 for Divine Gravity) is strong for this publication tier. The Outreach Resource of the Year award provides the most significant independent validation of The Bible Unwrapped's quality and reach.

Recommendations for Further Research

1. Google Scholar search: Run "Meghan Larissa Good" and "Meghan Good" + "Bible Unwrapped" / "Divine Gravity" on Google Scholar to confirm whether a profile exists and to retrieve any citation counts.
2. ProQuest Dissertations: Search for "Good" + "Bible Unwrapped" or "Between Breaths" to identify DMin/PhD dissertations that cite her work or dissertation.
3. AMBS library catalog: Check whether The Bible Unwrapped or Divine Gravity appear in assigned reading lists for AMBS DMin or other programs.

4. Anabaptist Community Bible project documentation: Check whether Good's "Reading Scripture with Jesus" framework is formally cited in project notes or publications.

Research conducted via WebSearch and WebFetch on 2026-05-27. No Google Scholar profile confirmed for Meghan Larissa Good as of this date. Citation data is inferred from endorsement networks and practitioner uptake rather than verified citation counts.

Meghan Larissa Good: The Fragmentation Story

Generated 2026-05-27 by the `fragmentation-story` skill from existing research in `docs/movement_leader_research/meghan-good/`.

The Story

Meghan Larissa Good has spent more than sixteen years as a pastor and is, by one specific measure, among the most decorated preachers of her generation: in 2018 she became the first-ever recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching. She studied at Gordon College (BA, Biblical & Theological Studies and Philosophy, 2006), Duke Divinity School (MDiv, 2009 — followed by work at Duke's Center for Reconciliation and teaching in Uganda), and Portland Seminary (DMin, 2018), where her dissertation, Between Breaths: The Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority, became the engine for her first book. She pastored Albany Mennonite Church in Oregon (~2008–2013) and then served more than a decade as Lead Pastor of Trinity Mennonite Church in Glendale, Arizona (~2013–May 2025). She teaches in the Doctor of Ministry in Leadership program at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary and has served on its Board of Directors.

Her two books form a single argument in two movements. The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2018, foreword by Gregory Boyd) taught ordinary readers to interpret all of Scripture through the lens of Jesus and won Outreach Magazine's 2019 Resource of the Year in Theology/Biblical Studies. Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story (Herald Press, 2023, foreword by Dennis R. Edwards) moved from how to read to what kind of church to become — a call for a Spirit-led, grassroots new reformation. Its endorser list — Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, David Gushee — punches far above the weight of a small denominational press; Gushee called her "a rising star of the next generation."

Then, in May 2025, she did the thing her second book argues for. She resigned her twelve-year pastorate at Trinity Mennonite to take a movement-level role as Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective, the Jesus-centered network associated with Greg Boyd, where she also chairs the international Theology Circle. She moved to Dayton, Ohio for the transition and began producing daily Jesus-centered devotionals on her "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel — 54-plus episodes walking through Luke in the first months of 2026 alone. She has, deliberately, stopped being a single-congregation pastor and become a builder of the very movement Divine Gravity describes.

And here is where the fragmentation becomes visible. For a voice this good — an award-winning preacher with two well-reviewed books, an Outreach award, an A-list endorser network, and a daily content engine — almost nothing is connected to anything else, and the audience is small relative to the quality. Her "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel, the single most valuable asset she has, is essentially invisible from her own website and social feeds: no embeds, no cross-posting, no funnel. Her website (meghanlarissagood.com) has a thoughtful newsletter lead magnet — a free eBook, Reading Scripture with Jesus — but the journal posts don't reinforce it and the YouTube series doesn't point to it. Her social follower counts are not even publicly visible, which is itself a signal of scale. There is no online course, no centralized hub, no Wikipedia page, and — most strikingly — sixteen-plus years of award-caliber preaching that sits almost entirely un-archived and unreachable. The gap here is not the gap of a megachurch leader whose reach is owned by an institution; it is the gap of an exceptional teacher whose body of work has never been assembled into a place a stranger could find and follow.

Informational Fragmentation

Books

Two trade books (one argument, two movements), plus a non-commercial sermon collection and forewords:

1. The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today — Herald Press, 2018 — foreword by Gregory Boyd; ISBN 978-1513802343; ~312 pp. Goodreads 4.31/5 (~150 ratings). Outreach Magazine 2019 Resource of the Year (Theology/Biblical Studies). Free study guide available. No audiobook confirmed — a notable gap.
2. Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story — Herald Press, 2023 — foreword by Dennis R. Edwards; ISBN 978-1513813127; ~224 pp. Goodreads 4.36/5. Self-narrated audiobook on Audible. Endorsers: Mouw, McLaren, Boyd, Gushee.
3. Bone Gardener: Selected Sermons — George Fox University, 2017 — a 12-sermon DMin artifact, not commercially published.
4. Foreword to Gregory Boyd, M. Scott Boren et al., God Looks Like Jesus (Jesus Collective / Herald Press, 2024-25).

The books live on Herald Press product pages and Amazon; there is no single surface where a reader who finishes The Bible Unwrapped is walked into Divine Gravity, the study guide, or the YouTube series built on the same Jesus-lens hermeneutic.

Academic Work

- DMin, Portland Seminary at George Fox University, 2018 — dissertation Between Breaths: The Dialogic Shape of Christian Authority (advisors Dottie Escobedo-Frank, Jamie Noling-Auth, Nijay Gupta); full text in George Fox Digital Commons. The Bible Unwrapped was its lay companion.

- First-ever Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching (2018) — a credential almost entirely unused as a public platform asset.
- MDiv, Duke Divinity (2009); BA, Gordon College (2006).
- AMBS DMin "Teaching Leadership" Faculty of Record; no public syllabi.
- No peer-reviewed journal corpus — her scholarly output flows into trade books, the dissertation, a denominational column, and Jesus Collective resources.

Articles

- Anabaptist World — ~8 quarterly Bible columns (2020–2022).
- The Other Journal — 2013 (co-interview with Barbara Brown Taylor) and 2017.
- Missio Alliance — at least one article.
- meghanlarissagood.com/journal — ~20 posts (active 2024–2026), pre-2020 archive uncataloged.
- Scattered across at least four platforms with no aggregation.

Blogs & Personal Writing

- meghanlarissagood.com/journal — WordPress, roughly monthly; the newsletter CTA is not embedded in individual posts.
- No Substack, no Medium.

Websites

Owned / personal

- meghanlarissagood.com — WordPress; Home / Books / Speaking / Journal / About / Contact; newsletter with the "Reading Scripture with Jesus" eBook lead magnet. YouTube channel not surfaced here.

Organizations

- Jesus Collective — jesuscollective.com (current employer)
- AMBS — ambs.edu/employees/meghan-good
- Herald Press / MennoMedia — publisher pages
- Trinity Mennonite Church (former); Albany Mennonite Church (former)

Social Media

Platform	Handle / URL	Status
Instagram	@meghanlarissagood	Active; count not public
Twitter/X	@meghan_larissa	Active; count not public
Facebook	facebook.com/ meghanlarissagood	Active; count not public
YouTube	"Reading Jesus" channel	Active (54+ episodes in 2026); metrics not captured
LinkedIn / Threads / Bluesky / TikTok	—	Not found

The inability to even read her follower counts is itself a measure of scale, and none of these channels is integrated with the others.

Newsletters / Email

- Site-native newsletter (WordPress/WPForms), not Substack, with a genuinely well-designed free-eBook lead magnet (Reading Scripture with Jesus).
- Subscriber count and ESP unknown.
- No newsletter CTA inside individual journal posts; no public archive.

Podcasts (Hosted)

- None hosted as audio. Her "Reading Jesus" YouTube series is her closest equivalent and has no audio-podcast extraction.

Podcasts (Guest)

- 9+ confirmed guest appearances, including the ReKnew / Greg Boyd two-part interview (May 2025), Shifting Culture (Ep. 148), a 10-episode "Story of Scripture" series on Discover the Word (Our Daily Bread), The Competent Pastor (MC USA), and Ohio Conference Cast. Scattered across host feeds with no personal aggregation.

YouTube & Video

- "Reading Jesus" channel — her strongest and most underutilized asset; 54+ Luke devotionals in early 2026, essentially invisible from her website and social feeds.
- MennoCon19 / MennoCon21 worship addresses and other talks — scattered across institutional channels; some availability unconfirmed.

Courses

- AMBS DMin "Teaching Leadership" (seminary, gated).
- Preaching workshops (Canadian Mennonite University 2021; introductory/advanced offered via her website), Northern Seminary instruction (2025), Mennonite Education Agency Bible webinars (2016).
- No standalone commercial online course — a clear gap given the Bible Unwrapped study guide is effectively a course skeleton.

Assessments & Tools

- None discovered.

Notes, Laptop, Unpublished

- UNKNOWN — large. Sixteen-plus years of sermon manuscripts from Albany and Trinity Mennonite; AMBS course material; Jesus Collective theological resources in development; the unpublished remainder of the Between Breaths dissertation beyond what The Bible Unwrapped carried.

Embodied / In Their Head

- The preaching craft that won the inaugural Buechner Award — largely undocumented as teachable method.
- The judgment behind leaving a settled pastorate to build a movement — the reasoning that turned Divine Gravity's thesis into a career decision.
- The theological architecture of the Jesus Collective Theology Circle she chairs across six countries.

Relational Fragmentation

Organizations

- Jesus Collective — Resource Development Manager + Theology Circle Chair (~May 2025–present)
- Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary — DMin "Teaching Leadership" Faculty of Record; former Board of Directors
- Trinity Mennonite Church (Glendale, AZ) — Lead Pastor, ~2013–May 2, 2025
- Albany Mennonite Church (Oregon) — pastor, ~2008–2013
- Mennonite Church USA — denominational home
- Herald Press / MennoMedia — sole publisher

Co-authors & Collaborators

- Gregory A. Boyd — the anchor relationship: foreword to The Bible Unwrapped, endorsement of Divine Gravity, her foreword to his God Looks Like Jesus, the ReKnew podcast, and now Jesus Collective. A seven-year reciprocal bond.
- Dennis R. Edwards (Northern Seminary) — foreword to Divine Gravity.
- Nijay Gupta, Dottie Escobedo-Frank, Jamie Noling-Auth — DMin advisors.
- M. Scott Boren — co-contributor, God Looks Like Jesus.
- Jesus Collective co-EDs Adam Dyer and Cherish Hamilton; the Theology Circle (13 members, 6 countries).

Endorsement / Network Layer

- Received — Divine Gravity: Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, David Gushee, Oneya Okuwobi, Mark D. Baker, Nelson Okanya, Keri Ladouceur. The Bible Unwrapped: Scot McKnight, Leonard Sweet, Dottie Escobedo-Frank, Safwat Marzouk, Kurt Willems, and others.
- Given — foreword to Boyd's God Looks Like Jesus.

Where Relationships Are Actually Stored

- Jesus Collective back-end — the network she now develops resources for; the Theology Circle roster.
- AMBS — DMin cohort and board relationships.
- Trinity Mennonite / Albany Mennonite — sixteen years of congregational relationships.
- MennoCon and Anabaptist-world speaking — denominational audience relationships.
- Mental rolodex — preaching invitations, podcast hosts, the McKnight/Boyd/McLaren/Gushee endorsement circle.
- No unified personal CRM surfaced.

Synthesis

Meghan Good's fragmentation signature is the inverse of a megachurch leader's. Dave Ferguson's reach is enormous but institutionally owned; Good's reach is modest, personally held, and almost entirely un-assembled. Her best asset — a daily "Reading Jesus" YouTube engine producing dozens of episodes — is invisible from her own website. Her best credential — the first-ever Buechner Award for preaching — is unused as a platform. Her two books make one continuous argument but live on separate product pages with no connective tissue. Sixteen years of award-caliber sermons are essentially unreachable. And all of this lands at a once-in-a-career moment: in May 2025 she left a settled pastorate specifically to build the movement Divine Gravity describes, which means the value of an owned, connected platform has never been higher for her than it is right now. The trapped value here is not buried inside an institution; it is scattered across her own channels, waiting to be gathered into a single place a stranger could find on a Tuesday and follow for years.

Research Provenance

- Source folder: docs/movement_leader_research/meghan-good/

- Confidence: High for identity, education, the Buechner Award, both books (publishers/ISBNs/ratings/forewords/endorsers), the 2025 Jesus Collective transition, and the network layer. Medium for pastoral dates (Albany ~2008–2013; Trinity ~2013–2025) and title shifts. Low/Unknown for all social follower counts, "Reading Jesus" channel metrics, sermon-archive volume, ordination specifics, birth date, and family.
- Gaps requiring further research: social follower counts; YouTube channel metrics; Trinity Mennonite sermon archive; MC USA ordination status; full Theology Circle roster; pre-2020 blog archive.

A Letter — Reflected Understanding

Meghan Larissa Good: Reflected Understanding

A concise reflection spoken back so the language could be endorsed — familiar, but with edges that deepen. (Leader-safe: audience-sizing and commerce analysis are kept in staff notes, not here.)

Calling

You're called to recover a better Christian story by teaching people to read everything through the lens of Jesus. The whole of your work expands one compressed sentence — "God looks like Jesus. And that changes everything." — into a hermeneutic, an ecclesiology, and a theology of power. Where much of the field works in the register of strategy and metrics, you work in the register of narrative and text: you read Scripture as a unified story climaxing in Christ, you put on "Jesus glasses" before you read a hard passage, and you trust that a scene, a confession, or a concrete image will carry a theological claim further than a proposition ever could. That is a preacher's instinct and a theologian's discipline at once. You didn't arrive at this from a desk — you pastored for more than sixteen years, at Albany Mennonite and then over a decade as Lead Pastor of Trinity Mennonite, and you went and earned the doctorate to give an account of what you had been living. In 2018 you became the first-ever recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching, and the lineage shows: literary, honest about doubt, quietly funny, willing to name what is genuinely hard before pressing through to something real.

Your most-repeated correction carries the whole calling: belonging is a trajectory of motion toward Jesus, not a position inside a boundary. The church recovered on that center is a centered set — "individuals and groups who would naturally repel each other will be held together when they find a center of gravity in something bigger and better." You name categories and then teach them — the Jesus lens, dialogic authority, divine gravity, cross-shaped power, the eight theses of a better story — and you ground every one of them in the conviction that the kingdom advances by self-giving love rather than coercive force, the "devil's bargain" Jesus refused in the wilderness. The prophetic content is there; the rhetorical mode stays pastoral. And in May 2025 you reorganized your public life around exactly this: you resigned a twelve-year pastorate to take a movement-level role as Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective, where you also chair the international Theology Circle. Divine Gravity is literally subtitled Sparking a Movement — and you have now stepped into building one.

Existing Content (before the platform we're building)

Where it lives. Your content lives in books — two commercially published Herald Press titles, The Bible Unwrapped (2018, foreword by Gregory Boyd, Outreach's 2019 Resource of the Year) and Divine Gravity (2023, foreword by Dennis R. Edwards) — plus a foreword to Boyd and Boren's God Looks Like Jesus (2025), the DMin dissertation Between Breaths in George Fox Digital Commons, and a free subscriber eBook, Reading Scripture with Jesus. It lives in a growing daily video engine — the "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel, 54+ Luke devotionals in the first months of 2026 alone. It lives in articles — eight Anabaptist World Bible columns (2020–2022), pieces in The Other Journal and Missio Alliance, and 20+ essays on your own journal at meghanlarissagood.com. It lives in audio, as a guest across Shifting Culture, ReKnew/Greg Boyd, Discover the Word's ten-episode "Story of Scripture" panel, and more. And it lives across institutional homes — Jesus Collective, your AMBS Doctor of Ministry faculty role in Teaching Leadership, MennoCon addresses, and a sixteen-year preaching ministry.

Credibility. It's high and earned in two currencies at once — pastoral and scholarly. Divine Gravity carries an endorser slate — Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, David Gushee, with Gushee naming you "a rising star of the next generation" — that punches well above the weight of a small denominational press, and the Buechner Award marks the preaching itself. You write and preach as a narrative theologian: from the biblical text, from honest human experience, and from a coherent Christ-centered frame. The issue isn't authority. It's dispersion and discovery.

How it lives online now. As disconnected islands. The daily "Reading Jesus" engine isn't surfaced on your own website; the website's newsletter is site-native with no public archive; the two books, the columns, the podcast appearances, the speaking, and the Jesus Collective work each sit where they were first put, with no single hub that cross-links them. A reader who finds Divine Gravity has no obvious path to the YouTube devotionals, the Bible Unwrapped study guide, or the next column. And the largest reservoir of all — sixteen-plus years of award-caliber narrative preaching — is almost entirely un-archived and undiscoverable.

The NOTs Movemental addresses directly. Your corpus is largely not consolidated into one canonical home where books, devotionals, columns, talks, and frameworks are structured, linked, and findable; not re-indexed so the growing "Reading Jesus" library is searchable by theme and passage; not connected to an AI that reads your corpus and reflects your voice; not optimized for discovery so searchers for "reading the Bible through Jesus," "divine gravity," or "centered-set church" land on your material first; not interconnected so the daily videos visibly feed the books and the newsletter; and not captured into an owned relationship layer above borrowed institutional reach. Movemental is built to speak to each of these — consolidation, re-indexing, a voice-true AI, discoverability, interconnection, and an owned layer — so the work can actually move.

Constraints

The defining constraint here is not production — you are already running a daily content engine on top of two books, a column history, and a full slate of speaking and teaching. The constraint is time, attention, and dispersion at the exact moment your role changed. You stepped out of a settled pastorate into a movement-builder role at Jesus Collective and a faculty load at AMBS, and the hours to consolidate a scattered body of work, build a canonical index of the "Reading Jesus" library, recover a sermon archive, stand up an owned-audience layer, and interconnect every channel simply aren't there when the work itself is in the writing, the teaching, and the network. That's emblematic of a movement-level calling, not a personal failure.

Two more constraints shape every content decision. First, register: your voice is accessible-literary — theological depth that refuses to flatten into thin devotional content, and refuses to harden into academic stiffness. The work loses its substance if it's pushed either direction, and the humor and honest-doubt-to-conviction movement are load-bearing, not decorative. Second, complement, never compete: Jesus Collective, AMBS, Herald Press, and your own website are yours to keep; what's missing is the connective public-facing front door and the owned relationship layer above them, not a replacement for any of them. A platform that reduces the lift — that consolidates, surfaces, interconnects, and captures what you already produce daily, while preserving your register and respecting your institutions — addresses these constraints without asking you to become a different kind of leader.

This document is a reflected understanding for Meghan Larissa Good, intended to be right to the point, true, and valuable. It is preliminary until reviewed and endorsed.

Welcome Letter

`docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/meghan-good/welcome-letter.md`

Meghan

You have written one continuous argument across two books and a dissertation, and you have just rearranged your entire life to live it out. The Bible Unwrapped taught readers to put on their Jesus glasses and read all of Scripture through him; it won Outreach Magazine's Resource of the Year. Divine Gravity moved from how to read to what kind of church to become, and called for a Spirit-led, grassroots reformation to recover a better Christian story — with Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, and David Gushee lending their names to a book from a small Mennonite press. Behind both sits Between Breaths, the dissertation on the dialogic shape of Christian authority that earned you the first Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching ever given. And in May 2025 you did the thing your second book argues for: you left a twelve-year pastorate at Trinity Mennonite to build a movement, joining Jesus Collective to develop resources and chair its Theology Circle across six countries. You stopped being one congregation's pastor and became, on purpose, a builder of the better story.

All of it is somewhere. Almost none of it is connected. The Bible Unwrapped and Divine Gravity sit on separate Herald Press product pages and separate Amazon listings, one argument split into two storefronts, with no surface that walks a reader from the first to the second to the free study guide that already exists for the first. The dissertation lives in the George Fox digital commons. Your articles are scattered across Anabaptist World, The Other Journal, and Missio Alliance. Your newsletter has a genuinely good lead magnet — the Reading Scripture with Jesus eBook — but the journal posts don't point to it and your own YouTube doesn't either. And your single most valuable asset, the "Reading Jesus" channel where you have published more than fifty Jesus-centered devotionals through Luke in the first months of this year, is essentially invisible from your website. You are doing daily work that most authors only wish they had the discipline for, and a stranger who lands on meghanlarissagood.com would never know it exists.

The most painful gap is the one that should be your strongest evidence. You are, by a specific and rare credential, an award-winning preacher — and sixteen-plus years of that preaching, at Albany Mennonite and at Trinity, is almost entirely unreachable. The sermons that formed two congregations and earned the Buechner Award are not archived anywhere a listener can find them. The craft behind them — the move from a concrete scene to a theological turn to an invitation, the literary instinct, the honesty about doubt — has never been written down as something teachable. That is the largest reservoir of value you have, and right now it exists mostly in manuscript files and in your memory.

This is where Movemental's AI does work that was not previously possible. The inventory just walked through — your two books, the dissertation, the articles, the newsletter, the daily YouTube series, the endorsement network, the speaking history — was compiled by AI sitting with your public work for the time it would take a researcher days. The same approach now turns toward what is scattered or unwritten: pulling the "Reading Jesus" episodes into a connected library, turning the Bible Unwrapped study guide into a real course, extracting the audio from your video so it becomes a podcast without new recording, and — when you're ready — helping surface and organize the sermon archive into a body of teaching people can actually reach. The AI does the gathering and the connective tissue. It does not write in your voice; every word stays yours to edit or refuse. For a writer whose whole gift is voice, that distinction is the point.

A year from now, meghanlarissagood.com is no longer six disconnected pages. It is a hub where The Bible Unwrapped and Divine Gravity read as the single argument they are, each pointing to the other and to a course built from the study guide you already wrote. The "Reading Jesus" series is embedded and findable, with companion guides that turn casual viewers into newsletter subscribers. The Buechner credential finally does some work, anchoring a narrative-preaching workshop that seminaries and pastor networks can take. A preacher in a tradition far from yours finds a Luke devotional on a Tuesday, follows it to the book, downloads the study guide on Thursday, and signs up for the course before the month is out. The movement Divine Gravity describes gets a front door.

This is your next season, and the timing is not an accident. You left a settled pulpit precisely to do movement-level work, which means the value of an owned, connected platform has never been higher for you than it is right now. You wrote that the church is being pulled back toward its true center by a kind of gravity. Let's build the place that lets people feel the pull.

Editorial bio

Meghan Larissa Good is a Mennonite pastor, theologian, and award-winning preacher whose entire body of work turns on one question: what happens when you read the Bible — and rebuild your faith — through the lens of Jesus? Trained at Gordon College, Duke Divinity School, and Portland Seminary, she became in 2018 the first-ever recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching, and her voice carries that lineage: literary, narrative-driven, honest about doubt, and quietly funny.

Her first book, The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2018, foreword by Gregory Boyd), translated her doctoral work on the dialogic shape of Christian authority into an accessible guide for ordinary readers and won Outreach Magazine's 2019 Resource of the Year in Theology and Biblical Studies. Her second, Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story (Herald Press, 2023, foreword by Dennis R. Edwards, endorsed by Richard Mouw, Brian McLaren, Greg Boyd, and David Gushee), moved from how to read Scripture to what kind of church to become — a call for a Spirit-led, grassroots new reformation grounded in cross-shaped power and centered-set belonging.

After more than sixteen years in pastoral ministry — at Albany Mennonite Church in Oregon and then over a decade as Lead Pastor of Trinity Mennonite Church in Arizona — she resigned her pastorate in May 2025 to take a movement-level role as Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective, where she also chairs the international Theology Circle, and she continues to teach in AMBS's Doctor of Ministry program. She has begun producing daily Jesus-centered devotionals on her "Reading Jesus" YouTube channel. She is, by her own design, no longer a single-congregation pastor but a movement builder — which is exactly what Divine Gravity set out to be.

Research Methodology

Search Strategy

- Multiple search engines used (web search tool)
- Varied search terms and contexts
- Cross-referenced findings across sources
- Verified information through multiple sources
- Noted conflicting information and ambiguity

Source Evaluation

- Prioritized official sources (personal website, institutional sites)
- Used web search as primary discovery method
- Considered recency of information
- Noted source credibility and authority
- Distinguished between primary and secondary sources

Confidence Levels

- High: Identity confirmed (Meghan Larissa Good - author, theologian, pastor)
- Medium: Digital presence discovery (limited comprehensive discovery)
- Low: Specific content details (requires direct website access)

Research Limitations

- Research based on publicly available information only
- Limited comprehensive discovery due to search engine limitations
- Many platforms and content locations require direct website access for verification
- Name similarity with actress (Meagan Good) created initial search noise
- Full name "Meghan Larissa Good" required for accurate results
- Social media presence not yet verified
- Video/audio content not yet verified
- Specific church/denomination affiliation not yet identified
- Publisher information not yet verified
- Content volume estimates limited by incomplete discovery

Additional Research Needed

1. Direct Website Access: Explore meghanlarissagood.com in detail
2. Publisher Verification: Identify publishers for both books
3. Social Media Discovery: Verify social media presence across platforms
4. Content Cataloging: Identify and catalog sermons, articles, videos, podcasts
5. Church Affiliation: Identify specific church/denomination where pastoral work occurred
6. Academic Content: Explore academic publications and course materials
7. Speaking Engagements: Identify conference and speaking appearances
8. Book Reviews: Review books in detail for content analysis
9. Content Samples: Obtain samples of sermons, articles, and other content
10. Platform Audit: Comprehensive audit of all digital platforms

Notes

- Initial searches returned "Meagan Good" (actress) due to name similarity
- Full name "Meghan Larissa Good" required for accurate identification
- Identity confirmed as author, theologian, pastor with strong Movemental alignment
- Digital presence discovery limited by search engine capabilities
- Comprehensive research requires direct website access and additional verification

This sources document will be updated as additional research is conducted and verified.

Meghan Larissa Good — Fragmentation Story

The Story

Meghan Larissa Good has spent close to two decades building a coherent body of work around a single conviction — "God looks like Jesus, and that changes everything" — and yet that body of work has no single place to live. The durable artifacts are real and findable: two books from Herald Press, a 2019 Outreach Magazine award, a DMin from Portland Seminary, sixteen years of pastoring in Oregon and Arizona, and now a network and teaching role at Jesus Collective and AMBS. But the work has accumulated faster than any one surface could hold it. A reader who finds Divine Gravity on Amazon has no path to her Reading Jesus podcast; a listener to that podcast has no path to her DMin teaching at AMBS; a Jesus Collective conference attendee has no path to the sixteen years of sermons that taught her how to say any of it. Each piece points somewhere, but nothing points to everything. The most recent move — a weekly devotional newsletter — is the first owned channel she has built, and it sits alone, unconnected to the corpus behind it.

Informational Fragmentation

- Books live at the retailers, not under her name. The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today (Herald Press, 2019, foreword by Greg Boyd) and Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story (Herald Press, 2023, foreword by Dennis R. Edwards) are sold across Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Bookshop.org, Christianbook.com, Logos, AbeBooks, and the MennoMedia store. Her own /books/ page lists them but does not connect them outward.

- <https://www.amazon.com/Divine-Gravity-Sparking-Movement-Christian/dp/1513813129>
- <https://heraldpress.com/9781513813127/divine-gravity/>
- Her hosted podcast Reading Jesus (working through Luke in 2026) runs as a YouTube channel / podcast, separate from the book pages.
- <https://meghanlarissagood.com/>
- Guest podcast appearances are scattered across other people's shows with no index on her own site:

- Shifting Culture, Episode 148 (host Joshua Johnson) — on Divine Gravity: <https://www.shiftingculturepodcast.com/episodes/episode-148-meghanlarissagood>
- Greg Boyd: Apologies & Explanations (ReKnew), Episodes 1268 & 1269 — two-part Divine Gravity interview: <https://reknew.org/2025/05/divine-gravity-parts-1-and-2-the-meghan-larissa-good-interview/>
- Faith, Work & Rest, Episode 81 (host Teena Dare, Nov 2021): <https://podcasts.apple.com/us/podcast/81-meghan-larissa-good-reshaping-your-imagination-by/id1356221317>
- Ohio Conference Cast (host Alex Dye, Feb 2024); Red Letter Christians podcast; Our Daily Bread podcast series.
- Articles sit on partner publications, each with its own archive:
 - Outreach Magazine: <https://outreachmagazine.com/author/meghanlarissagood>
 - Anabaptist World: <https://anabaptistworld.org/author/meghangood/>
 - Mennonite Church USA ("Recognizing the Holy Spirit"): <https://www.mennoniteusa.org/recognizing-the-holy-spirit/>
- Talks, courses, and conference sessions live on institutional rosters, not her site's spine: the Reimagining Hope Jesus Collective regional conference, Mosaic Conference, Anabaptism at the Crossroads (ACA), the All the Stories are Jesus and Thinking with Jesus lecture series (Fresno Pacific University), and the Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching and Teaching the Bible in an Age of Distraction courses.
- <https://meghanlarissagood.com/speaking/>
- Newsletter + free e-book. A weekly devotional newsletter and the free e-book Reading Scripture with Jesus are her only owned, direct channel — recent, and not yet wired to the books, podcast, or talks.
- <https://meghanlarissagood.com/contact/>
- Named gaps: no public social-media handles anywhere on her site; no unified hub linking book to podcast to course to article; guest appearances un-indexed; the newsletter standing alone without an archive.

Relational Fragmentation

- Jesus Collective holds her network relationships — she is Resource Development Manager and chairs the Theology Circle, which means the network of leaders she mentors and convenes lives inside Jesus Collective's membership and conference systems (jesuscollective.com), not her own.
- AMBS holds her teaching relationships — the DMin in Leadership cohort she serves as Faculty of Record for Teaching Leadership exists on the seminary's student rosters and learning-plan records.

- Trinity Mennonite Church (Glendale, AZ) and her earlier Oregon congregations hold sixteen years of pastoral relationships in church directories and member rolls she no longer administers.
- Co-author / collaborator adjacency to the wider missional network: her two forewords place her one degree from significant figures — Greg Boyd (Woodland Hills Church, ReKnew) wrote the foreword to The Bible Unwrapped, and Dennis R. Edwards (Northern Seminary, Missio Alliance, Story of God commentary series) wrote the foreword to Divine Gravity. Through Jesus Collective she sits in the same circle as Bruxy Cavey and others. These ties are real but live in publisher metadata and event programs, not in any relationship surface she controls.
- The personal rolodex — the pastors, conference hosts, podcast hosts, and DMin students who reach her — runs through a contact form, connect@meghanlarissagood.com, and her own phone and memory.

Embodied / In-Their-Head layer

This is the largest pool of value and the one most at risk of going unwritten. Sixteen years of pastoring at Trinity Mennonite and in Oregon produced thousands of sermons, almost none of them published under her name. The judgment calls behind the Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching course — how she decides what makes preaching actually Jesus-centered rather than merely Bible-quoting — exist in course notes and in the room. The curation decisions behind the Theology Circle at Jesus Collective, and behind conference sessions like Reimagining Hope, live in planning conversations. The pragmatic wisdom of The Bible Unwrapped — how to teach a congregation to read Scripture as encounter with the risen Jesus rather than as a rulebook — was lived in adult-formation classrooms for years before it became a book, and most of that practice never made the page. The DMin Teaching Leadership work, where she helps students "integrate knowledge into practice," is precisely the transfer of in-the-room wisdom that currently happens one cohort at a time. It exists in notebooks, coaching conversations, classrooms, and the same sermon-prep instinct exercised a thousand times.

Synthesis

Meghan Larissa Good's fragmentation pattern is the teacher-pastor turned network-builder whose published artifacts under-represent her actual body of work. The visible layer — two award-noted Herald Press books and a growing podcast — is genuinely strong, but it is dispersed across retailers, partner publications, and other people's podcast feeds with no hub connecting them.

The relational layer is held entirely inside institutions she serves but does not own: Jesus Collective's network, AMBS's cohorts, and former congregations' directories. And the embodied layer — sixteen years of preaching, the curation behind a Jesus-centered preaching course, the formation logic of The Bible Unwrapped lived before it was written — is the deepest reservoir and the least captured. She has just built her first owned channel, a newsletter, but it stands alone. The work is not to author more; it is to gather what already exists into one place and surface the unwritten teaching at her own pace.

Meghan Larissa Good — Digital Reality Profile

Slug: meghan-good

Display name: Meghan Larissa Good

Identity confidence: High

Primary URL: <https://meghanlarissagood.com>

Email on file: connect@meghanlarissagood.com

Identity resolution

Meghan Larissa Good is a preacher, author, and biblical teacher in the Anabaptist/Mennonite tradition (USA). Identity is confirmed by multiple independent sources: her authored books The Bible Unwrapped and Divine Gravity (both Herald Press / MennoMedia), her personal site meghanlarissagood.com, the Herald Press and MennoMedia author pages, the Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary (AMBS) faculty page, and the Jesus Collective leadership listing. The combination of distinctive book titles, publisher, denomination, named institutions, and matching personal domain removes ambiguity. There is no name-collision risk material to this dossier.

Bio synthesis

Good holds a BA in Biblical & Theological Studies and Philosophy from Gordon College (2006), an MDiv from Duke Divinity School (2009), and a DMin from Portland Seminary at George Fox University (2018), where she was the first recipient of the Frederick Buechner Award for Excellence in Preaching. She served roughly sixteen years as a lead and teaching pastor in churches in Oregon and Arizona — most notably as lead/teaching pastor at Trinity Mennonite Church in Glendale, Arizona, the role still cited in older publisher bios. Her work centers a Jesus-centered hermeneutic, captured in her site tagline: "God looks like Jesus. And that changes everything." She is in demand as a speaker on biblical hermeneutics, Anabaptism, contemporary preaching, depolarizing the church, and the work of the Holy Spirit.

Current role

Good's role has shifted from local-church pastoring toward network and teaching work. Current roles, per her own About page and the AMBS faculty page:

- Resource Development Manager, Jesus Collective — and chair of the Jesus Collective Theology Circle.
- Faculty of Record for the Teaching Leadership component of the Doctor of Ministry in Leadership program at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary (AMBS).
- Host of Reading Jesus (podcast / YouTube; in 2026 working through the Gospel of Luke).

The publisher (Herald Press) bio still lists her as "lead pastor at Trinity Mennonite Church, Glendale, AZ"; the AMBS page treats the pastorate in the past tense ("for 15 years ... served as lead and teaching pastor"). For this dossier the current role used is Resource Development Manager and Theology Circle chair at Jesus Collective, with the AMBS DMin faculty role and the Trinity Mennonite history both named as supporting context.

Digital presence

- Personal site: meghanlarissagood.com — Home, Books, Speaking, Journal, About, Contact. Centers the Divine Gravity book, the Reading Jesus podcast, a weekly devotional newsletter, and a free e-book.
- Newsletter: weekly devotional newsletter; free e-book Reading Scripture with Jesus offered on signup. This is her one owned, direct-to-audience channel and is recent.
- Podcast (hosted): Reading Jesus (focused on Luke in 2026), run as a YouTube channel / podcast.
- No public social-media handles are listed on her site (no Twitter/X, Instagram, or Facebook surfaced on Home/About/Contact). Contact runs through a form and connect@meghanlarissagood.com.
- Retail: books sold via Amazon, Barnes & Noble, Bookshop.org, Christianbook.com, Logos, AbeBooks, and the MennoMedia/Herald Press store.

Content landscape

Books (2):

- The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today — Herald Press / MennoMedia, 2019. Foreword by Gregory A. (Greg) Boyd. Named a 2019 Outreach Magazine Resource of the Year (Theology/Biblical Studies).

- Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story — Herald Press / MennoMedia, 2023. Foreword by Dennis R. Edwards (listed as co-author/contributor on retail metadata).

Podcast appearances (guested):

- Shifting Culture, Episode 148, host Joshua Johnson — on Divine Gravity and whether the church is in a new reformation.
- Greg Boyd: Apologies & Explanations (ReKnew), Episodes 1268 & 1269 — a two-part interview on Divine Gravity.
- Faith, Work & Rest, Episode 81, host Teena Dare (Nov 2021) — reading the Bible as a means of encountering the risen Jesus.
- Ohio Conference Cast, host Alex Dye (Feb 2024) — ACA preview.
- Red Letter Christians podcast; Our Daily Bread podcast series.

Articles / partner publications:

- Outreach Magazine (author archive).
- Anabaptist World (author archive).
- Mennonite Church USA (e.g., "Recognizing the Holy Spirit").

Speaking / teaching (named):

- Reimagining Hope — Jesus Collective regional conference (Apr 2026).
- Mosaic Conference; Anabaptism at the Crossroads (ACA) events.
- Lecture series: All the Stories are Jesus; Thinking with Jesus at Fresno Pacific University (2027).
- Courses: Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching; Teaching the Bible in an Age of Distraction; Listening for the Spirit of Jesus workshop.
- Institutions hosted at: Canadian Mennonite University, Eastern Mennonite University, Messiah College, Fresno Pacific University, Woodland Hills Church (SEM program), Church of the Brethren clergy retreat, Yeovil Community Church (UK).

Gaps

- No unified hub. Her work is split between meganlarissagood.com (book + newsletter + her own podcast), Jesus Collective (network role, conferences), AMBS (teaching), and retail/partner platforms. No single surface connects book → podcast → course → conference → article.
- No public social presence to route discovery.
- Guest podcast appearances are scattered across other people's shows with no index on her own site.

- The teaching is institution-bound — the DMin Teaching Leadership work, the Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching course, and the conference sessions live inside AMBS, Jesus Collective, and host rosters, not under her own name.
- Sixteen years of in-the-room pastoral and preaching formation is largely unwritten — sermons, course design, and curation decisions exist in notebooks, classrooms, and conversation.
- The newsletter is new and not yet backed by an archive that connects it to the books and the podcast.

Meghan-Good • Welcome-Letter

`docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/meghan-good/meghan-good/welcome-letter.md`

Meghan

You have built one of the most coherent teaching bodies of work in Anabaptist Christianity, around a single idea pressed hard for sixteen years. Two books carry it. The Bible Unwrapped: Making Sense of Scripture Today came out from Herald Press in 2019 with a foreword from Greg Boyd and a 2019 Outreach Magazine resource-of-the-year nod. Divine Gravity: Sparking a Movement to Recover a Better Christian Story followed from the same house in 2023, with a foreword from Dennis R. Edwards. Behind the books sit a BA from Gordon College, an MDiv from Duke Divinity School, and a DMin from Portland Seminary, where you held the first Frederick Buechner Award for preaching. After sixteen years pastoring in Oregon and Arizona, you now serve as Resource Development Manager at Jesus Collective and chair its Theology Circle.

All of it is somewhere. None of it is in one place. The books sell on Amazon, on Bookshop.org, and on Christianbook.com, each a separate island with no path back to you. Your articles sit on partner mastheads — Outreach Magazine, Anabaptist World, Mennonite Church USA — under their archives, not yours. The interviews are scattered across other people's feeds: Divine Gravity over two parts on Greg Boyd: Apologies & Explanations, again with Joshua Johnson on Shifting Culture, and earlier with Teena Dare on Faith, Work & Rest. You host Reading Jesus yourself, walking through Luke, but it lives on its own channel with no thread tying it to the books it grows out of. The relationships are split the same way. The leaders you convene live inside the Jesus Collective membership rolls and the Theology Circle roster. The students you guide through Teaching Leadership live on AMBS cohort lists. Sixteen years of congregants at Trinity Mennonite and your Oregon churches sit in directories you no longer keep. The forewords alone put you one degree from Boyd at Woodland Hills and from Edwards at Northern Seminary, but that adjacency lives in publisher metadata. And the rest — the pastors and hosts who write you — runs through a contact form and your own memory. What is missing is the layer above all of this: the one surface that lets a reader move from any single piece to every other one, and lets people stay with you after they leave the conference or the seminary that introduced them.

The largest part of what you know has never been written down, and it is the part most likely to stay that way. Sixteen years of pastoring produced thousands of sermons; almost none are published under your name. The judgment calls inside your Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching course — how you decide what actually makes preaching center on Jesus rather than merely quote him — exist in your notes and in the room. The curation behind the Theology Circle, and behind sessions like Reimagining Hope, lives in planning conversations. The Bible Unwrapped was lived in adult-formation classrooms for years before it was a book, and most of that practice never reached the page. This is the wisdom you hand one DMin cohort at a time. It sits in notebooks, in coaching calls, in the same sermon-prep instinct run a thousand times.

This is where Movemental's AI does work that was not possible before. The inventory you just read — the books, the partner mastheads, the guest interviews, the courses — was compiled by AI sitting with your public corpus for the span a human researcher would have needed weeks to cover. The same approach now turns toward what is not yet public. Interview transcripts that become drafts. Course notes pulled into outlines. The dictation of a sermon becoming an essay. The tools are finally good enough that the unwritten teaching can be surfaced at your pace rather than at a publisher's. And the AI does not replace your voice. Every draft is yours to edit, to refuse, or to rewrite. The tools do the inventorying and the connective tissue. The authorship stays yours.

This is what the dashboard is built to do, and what we will do with you. First, aggregate: the two Herald Press books, the Outreach Magazine and Anabaptist World articles, the Reading Jesus episodes, the guest interviews, the Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching course outline, the conference sessions, and the embodied material as it gets surfaced, all pulled into one hub. Second, interconnect: The Bible Unwrapped points to the Reading Jesus walk through Luke, which points to your Mennonite Church USA writing on the Spirit, which points to the Divine Gravity interview on Shifting Culture, which points back to the book. Third, repurpose: the Introduction to Jesus-centered Preaching course becomes a public sequence; your scattered guest interviews become a single archive under your name; Divine Gravity gets the reading pathway built around it; the newsletter gets the corpus standing behind it. Fourth, amplify: search, references, and the readers who arrive once the work is findable in one place. The work this season is not authorship. It is translation of what you have already authored into a form practitioners can actually reach.

A year from now, meghanlarissagood.com looks different. A topic hub on reading Scripture as encounter gathers The Bible Unwrapped, the free Reading Scripture with Jesus e-book, a built-out reading pathway, every guest interview where you discussed it, and the Reading Jesus episodes, all on one page. The course you teach inside the seminary exists as a public sequence, with the book sitting inside it. Your interviews on Shifting Culture and Greg Boyd: Apologies & Explanations are cross-listed and finally indexed under your name. The newsletter, which stood alone, now has the whole corpus behind it. One morning a bivocational pastor in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, who has never heard of Jesus Collective, searches for help preaching Jesus from a hard Old Testament text, finds your course sequence, and starts working through it that afternoon.

This is your next season. The work ahead is making the body of work you have already built reach the practitioners it was written for. Your role at Jesus Collective does not contradict that; it is the reason it has to happen now. You spend your days developing resources for the leaders in that network, and most of them still cannot find the resource that is your own teaching. Right now they cannot.

— Movemental
