Roy Moran — Executive Summary

Compiled: 2026-05-13

Confidence: HIGH on biography, books, and frameworks; MEDIUM on engagement metrics

Strategic Insight: The Hybrid Bridge

Position: Roy Moran uniquely bridges the classical Western pastoral establishment (Dallas Theological Seminary, 25-year senior pastor of a 1,000+ attendee attractional church) with the global Disciple-Making Movement (DMM) world (mentored by David Watson; current Global Team Leader at New Generations).

Why this matters: Almost every other DMM voice in North America comes from one of two camps — Global South missions practitioners (whose credibility doesn't transfer to suburban U.S. pastors) or post-evangelical missional theorists (whose practice doesn't transfer to existing congregations). Moran is the rare third option: a senior pastor who walked his own established church through the conversion and lived to write the field manual.

Strategic implication: He is uniquely credible to two audiences who normally don't share leaders — the seminary-trained suburban pastor and the obedience-based DMM practitioner. His Hybrid Church framework is the only widely-published model that gives a Western senior leader an actual on-ramp into DMM without requiring them to abandon their existing congregation.

At-A-Glance Scorecard

Dimension	Score	Status	Key Insight
Biographical Completeness	85%		Strong on identity, books, orgs; light on quantitative church metrics
Framework Mastery	90%		Hybrid Church is a developed, published, lived framework
Digital Presence	60%		Active website + podcast, but no owned audience, no flagship course
Voice Distinctiveness	80%		Practitioner-pastor tone; metaphor-driven; obedience over information
Movemental Fit	86%		High alignment on disciple-making, missional-incarnational, organic systems

Primary Positioning: The senior-pastor practitioner of Disciple-Making Movements in the West.

Core Differentiator: The Hybrid Church framework — attractional and multiplicative held together in one congregation.

Strategic Advantage: 25 years of lived pastoral case study, plus current weekly access to global DMM data through New Generations.

Three-Sentence Bio (for citations and intros)

Roy Moran is the co-founder and directional leader of Shoal Creek Community Church in Kansas City, where he served as senior pastor for 25 years before transitioning to Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations. Trained at Baylor and Dallas Theological Seminary and originally shaped by the Willow Creek attractional model, Moran's decisive turn came when he realized his disciples weren't making disciples — a recognition that drew him into Disciple-Making Movement (DMM) practice under the mentorship of David Watson. He is the author of Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015) and Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017), hosts the weekly Movement Conversations podcast, and serves as Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International.

Movemental Recommendation

Fit Score: 8.6 / 10 — Onboard, high-priority.

The combination of (1) DTS-credentialed Western pastoral authority, (2) lived 25-year hybrid case study, (3) published framework, (4) current global DMM data access, and (5) a massive owned-audience gap maps almost perfectly to Movemental's thesis. Network leverage through Jerry Trousdale, Curtis Sergeant, Mike Moran, Doug Cobb, and the David Watson legacy network compounds.

Author Profile — Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/roy-moran/profile/identity.md

Identity

Who he is

Roy Moran is a senior-pastor practitioner of Disciple-Making Movements in the West. For twenty-five years he led Shoal Creek Community Church, the attractional congregation he co-founded in Kansas City in 1992, while running a parallel obedience-based DMM track inside the same body — and then he wrote the field manual for doing both at once. He is, by his own framing, neither a Global South missions specialist nor a post-Christendom theorist but a third thing: a seminary-trained, Willow Creek-shaped Western pastor who walked his own established church through the conversion to multiplication and lived to document it.

Core convictions

- Obedience over information. Moran measures discipleship by "I will" statements followed by accountability, not by attendance, content delivered, or programs completed. Transformation, in his view, comes through obedience, not the accumulation of knowledge.
- Multiplication is the real test. The question that broke his complacency in the mid-2000s — whether the disciples his church made were themselves making disciples — remains his diagnostic. Four-generation reproduction is the proof that genuine multiplication is occurring.
- You do not have to abandon the congregation. Unlike voices that treat the institutional church as the problem, Moran reforms from inside. The Hybrid Church holds the attractional gathering and the multiplicative network together rather than treating them as rivals or sequential phases.
- Community precedes conversion. Relationships come first; the gospel is planted within them.
- Spiritual literacy is the win-condition. The church exists to produce disciples who can read, interpret, and obey Scripture and reproduce that capacity in others without professional clergy mediation.

Vocational identity

Moran's titles map his calling: directional leader and "spiritual literacy advocate" at Shoal Creek, founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International, and Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations. The progression from "senior pastor" to "directional leader" is deliberate — a reframing of the pastoral win away from attendance and toward reproducing, literate disciples. His seminary credentials (Baylor Greek, Dallas Theological Seminary Th.M.) are not incidental; they are the credibility that lets him speak senior-pastor-to-senior-pastor about a practice the Western establishment usually treats as exotic.

What makes his voice distinct

Moran's voice is pastoral, candid, and story-led rather than academic. He admits failure openly — the "disciples not making disciples" confession is the spine of his story — and guards against triumphalism, treating DMM as adaptive rather than magic. He reaches for vivid metaphor (the hybrid car, spent matches, the signal fire, the launchpad) and speaks more from his own congregation than from aggregate statistics. He is reforming, not abandoning; convicted, not anti-institutional. The result is the only widely published on-ramp into DMM for the pastor who is convinced something must change but is unwilling to walk away from the people in front of him.

Biography

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/roy-moran/profile/biography.md

Roy Moran

Roy Moran is the rare Western voice trusted simultaneously by classically trained senior pastors and by global Disciple-Making Movement practitioners, because he is both. He co-founded Shoal Creek Community Church in the Kansas City metropolitan area in 1992 with his wife Candy and a handful of others, building it on the Willow Creek attractional template, and served as its senior pastor for roughly twenty-five years. Trained in Greek studies at Baylor University and credentialed with a Th.M. from Dallas Theological Seminary, he came to a decisive crisis in the mid-2000s when he was finally willing to admit out loud that the disciples his church was making were not making disciples. That recognition pulled him into a long mentorship under David Watson, the Disciple-Making Movement pioneer behind CityTeam International (now Beyond), and into the global DMM lineage. Rather than abandon his congregation, Moran ran an obedience-based DMM track inside the same body that held his attractional Sunday gathering, then wrote the playbook for doing it. His two books, Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015) and Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017), articulate that integrated "come and go" model. Today he serves as Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations, the Jerry Trousedale-led network documenting disciples and churches across Africa, Asia, and Latin America; as founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International, a Kansas City hub for DMM training; and as host of the weekly Movement Conversations podcast. He remains Shoal Creek's directional leader and "spiritual literacy advocate."

Early life and formation

Moran graduated from Radford High School in 1972 and went on to study Greek at Baylor University, an evangelical-Baptist formation that grounded him in the biblical languages. He completed a Th.M. at Dallas Theological Seminary around 1980, giving him the classical Western seminary credentialing that later made his turn toward DMM credible to an audience of seminary-trained pastors.

Shoal Creek Community Church

In 1992, Moran co-founded Shoal Creek Community Church in Kansas City, Missouri, with his wife Candy and four others, planting it on the Willow Creek seeker-sensitive model. The church grew to more than 1,000 attendees. Over twenty-five years it became the longest-running U.S. case study of a hybrid attractional-plus-multiplicative congregation. Moran has since transitioned from senior pastor into a "directional leader and spiritual literacy advocate" role, a deliberately post-pastoral framing of his ongoing relationship to the body he founded.

Disciple-Making Movements

Moran's mid-2000s realization that his disciples were not reproducing drew him into Disciple-Making Movement practice under David Watson's mentorship around 2008–2014. He adapted DMM — obedience-based, reproducible discipleship aimed at four generations of multiplication — for the North American context rather than treating it as foreign-mission theory. Core practices he teaches include Discovery Bible Study (read, retell, observe, obey, share), obedience-based metrics built on "I will" statements and accountability, and "person of peace" discernment drawn from Luke 10.

The Hybrid Church framework

His signature contribution is the Hybrid Church framework: an integrated local-church strategy that holds an attractional Sunday gathering and a multiplicative DMM track inside the same body, switching modes by terrain like a hybrid car. The gathering is built for the minority of Americans open to attending a church; the multiplicative network is built for the majority who will never come on a Sunday. He summarizes its load-bearing convictions as clarity of language, obedience over information, visible progress, community before conversion, and Sunday as launchpad rather than destination.

New Generations and Mercy Alliance

Around 2017 Moran joined the leadership of New Generations, where he now serves as Global Team Leader, Platform — connecting him weekly to global DMM data through colleagues including Jerry Trousdale. He also founded and directs Mercy Alliance International, a Kansas City-based hub for DMM training, hybrid coaching, and regional coordination. He has served on the boards of Beyond (formerly CityTeam International), New Generations International, the Institute of International Medicine (INMED), and ReEngage Staffing Services.

Media and ongoing work

Since 2020, Moran has hosted the weekly Movement Conversations — Powered by New Generations podcast, one of only a handful of sustained DMM media properties in the English-speaking world, featuring interviews with global movement catalysts. He continues to write at roymoran.com, where his archive spans Disciple-Making Movements, Hybrid Church, DBS practice, and lessons from twenty-five years at Shoal Creek.

Core Thesis

The Western church has been measuring the wrong thing. For most of his ministry Roy Moran built and led an attractional congregation whose success was counted in attendance, programs, and content delivered — and then, in the mid-2000s, he was finally willing to say out loud that the disciples his church was making were not themselves making disciples. That confession is the theological hinge of his entire body of work. His answer is that discipleship is proven by obedience and multiplication, not by information transfer: a church is healthy not when it gathers a crowd but when ordinary believers obey Scripture and reproduce that capacity in others to the fourth generation and beyond. The recovery he proposes is obedience-based, reproducible disciple-making — the Disciple-Making Movement (DMM) practice flourishing across the Global South — translated into the language and structures of the North American church, and held together with the attractional gathering rather than set against it.

Theological Tradition

Primary: Conservative evangelical, with a Disciple-Making Movement / Church-Planting Movement missiology layered onto a classical Western seminary formation.

Formation: Greek studies at Baylor University (an evangelical-Baptist grounding in the biblical languages) and a Th.M. from Dallas Theological Seminary — a conservative, text-centered, dispensationally-shaped evangelical training. These credentials are not incidental to his theology: they are the reason a seminary-trained senior pastor can speak about obedience-based discipleship to other seminary-trained pastors who would otherwise dismiss DMM as exotic foreign-mission theory.

Practical inheritance: The Willow Creek seeker-sensitive / attractional movement, on whose template he co-founded Shoal Creek Community Church in 1992. His mature theology is best read as a critique-from-within of that model — keeping its hospitality to outsiders while refusing its tendency to equate attendance with discipleship.

Missiological lineage: The obedience-based DMM stream descending from David Watson (CityTeam International, now Beyond), carried forward through Jerry Trousdale and New Generations, and adjacent to the T4T ("Training for Trainers") literature of Steve Smith and Curtis Sergeant. Moran is the rare figure who stands inside both the classical Western seminary world and this global movement world at once.

Key Theological Frameworks

Framework	Theological core	Where developed
Hybrid Church	Ecclesiology as both/and rather than either/or: an attractional Sunday gathering and a multiplicative DMM network held inside one body, switching modes by terrain "like a hybrid car." Reform from within the institutional church rather than its abandonment.	Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017)
Disciple-Making Movements (DMM)	A movement of reproducing disciples and churches understood as God-ordained, Spirit-dependent, Bible-centered, obedience-focused, discovery-based, and disciple-driven — aimed at four generations of multiplication without professional-clergy mediation.	Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015)
Obedience-Based Discipleship	Formation measured by acted-on "I will" commitments and report-back accountability rather than by knowledge accumulated. "Obedience over information" as the diagnostic of genuine maturity.	Spent Matches (2015)
Discovery Bible Study (DBS)	A discovery hermeneutic: ordinary people read and retell a passage, observe what it says about God and people, name an obedience response, and share it — Scripture interpreted and obeyed by the group itself, with no professional teacher required.	Spent Matches (2015); DMM training
Person of Peace	Missiology drawn from Jesus' sending instructions in Luke 10: the receptive individual who opens a household or relational network becomes the natural doorway for the gospel and the seedbed of multiplication.	Spent Matches (2015); DMM training
Spiritual Literacy	The maturity goal of the whole system: believers able to read, obey, and reproduce Scripture on their own — a functional priesthood of all believers that de-professionalizes the interpretation of the Bible.	Framing tied to his post-pastoral "spiritual literacy advocate" role at Shoal Creek

Distinctive Positions

- Obedience over information. The central, repeated conviction: transformation comes through obedience to Scripture, not through the accumulation of biblical knowledge. Discipleship is tracked by "I will" statements and accountability, not by attendance or content consumed.

- Multiplication is the real test. Four-generation reproduction — disciples who make disciples who make disciples — is the proof that genuine discipleship is occurring. A ministry that adds attenders but does not reproduce disciples has not yet succeeded by the New Testament standard.
- Reform from within, not abandonment. Unlike voices that treat the institutional, attractional church as the problem to be escaped, Moran holds the gathering and the multiplicative network together. The congregation is not the enemy of movement; it can host one.
- Community precedes conversion. Relationships come first and the gospel is planted within them, inverting the program-then-belong sequence of much attractional practice.
- The de-professionalized church. The aim is believers who can feed themselves on Scripture and pass it on, rather than remaining dependent on clergy to interpret and apply the Bible for them — a practical recovery of the priesthood of all believers through DBS.
- Spirit-dependence and openness to the supernatural. DMM as he frames it is God-ordained and Spirit-dependent rather than a technique; his own Movement Conversations interviews foreground supernatural manifestations, indigenous incarnation, and the Spirit's initiative in movements.
- Sunday as launchpad, not destination. The weekend gathering is reframed as a sending platform for a dispersed, multiplying network rather than the finish line of the Christian week.
- Clarity of language and visible progress. He treats imprecise discipleship vocabulary as a theological problem in its own right, insisting on clear, reproducible language and observable markers of growth so that multiplication can actually be disciplined and measured.
- Adaptive, not triumphalist. He guards against treating DMM as magic, presenting it as adaptive practice learned through failure — the "spent matches" and "signal fire" imagery frames Western spiritual exhaustion honestly rather than promising a formula.

Intellectual Genealogy

Shaped by:

- David Watson — primary DMM mentor (~2008-2014); founder of CityTeam International (now Beyond); the obedience-based, Discovery-Bible-Study lineage from which Moran's practice descends.
- Jerry Trousdale — New Generations colleague and conversation partner; the global DMM network through which Moran reads worldwide movement data in his "Global Team Leader, Platform" role.
- The T4T stream — Steve Smith (late) and Curtis Sergeant — adjacent Church-Planting-Movement editorial DNA that shares his reproducible-discipleship convictions.
- The Willow Creek / attractional movement — formative early influence (Shoal Creek's original template) that his mature theology both inherits and critiques.

- Dallas Theological Seminary and Baylor — the conservative-evangelical, biblical-languages foundation underwriting his text-centered hermeneutic.

In conversation with:

- The Beyond / New Generations / 24:14 Coalition constellation of DMM practitioners.
- Doug Cobb, Stan Parks, Harry Brown, and the wider community of catalysts interviewed on his weekly Movement Conversations podcast.

Theological Evolution

Moran's theology moved in three stages. He began as a seeker-sensitive, attractional pastor, co-founding Shoal Creek in 1992 on the Willow Creek model and growing it past a thousand attenders — a ministry whose theology of success was, at that point, largely a theology of the gathering. The mid-2000s crisis — the admission that his disciples were not making disciples — broke the sufficiency of that model and drove him into a long mentorship under David Watson and the global DMM world. The resulting Hybrid Church synthesis is his settled position: rather than choosing between the attractional congregation and the multiplicative movement, or sequencing them as phases, he holds them together in one body, insisting that obedience-based, reproducing discipleship can be recovered inside the very institutions most Western movement thinkers have written off. The trajectory is consistent — from counting attendance to counting obedient, reproducing disciples — and Moran himself frames it not as a repudiation of his pastoral past but as the discipleship his earlier ministry was always meant to produce.

Roy Moran: Calling Profile

Calling synthesis and mDNA alignment for strategic positioning and content-calling fit

Version: 1.0.0

Last Updated: 2026-05-13

Expert Perspective: mDNA / APEST analysis, missional calling assessment, vocational profile

Calling Statement (Synthesized)

Roy Moran is called to catalyze Disciple-Making Movements inside Western, place-based, attractional churches — translating the obedience-based, reproducible practice that has produced movements across Africa, Asia, and Latin America into the language, structures, and pastoral leadership of the North American senior pastor. His calling is a bridge calling: not to plant the next great Sunday gathering and not to abandon the local church for pure movement work, but to hold the two together until the wider Western church can do the same.

Core calling elements:

- Identity: Practitioner-pastor (not academic, not full-time missionary)
 - Aim: Spiritual literacy that reproduces without professional clergy mediation
 - Theater of operation: The established U.S. congregation
 - Animating conviction: The disciples we are making are not making disciples — and that is fixable.

mDNA Alignment Profile

Element	Alignment	Visual	Level	Evidence
Jesus is Lord	85%		Very High	Christological center; "obedience to Jesus" framing throughout
Disciple Making	95%		Maximal	Entire ministry organized around this; the load-bearing center
Missional-Incarnational Impulse	85%		Very High	"70% who will never come on a Sunday"; neighborhood/workplace/prison deployment
Apostolic Environment	80%		High	Pioneering NA DMM; Hybrid framework creation; New Generations leadership
Organic Systems	90%		Very High	DBS, reproducible structures, four-generation reproduction metric
Liminality & Communitas	70%		High	Multi-year pastoral disorientation; mentorship under Watson; intentional discomfort

Overall mDNA Maturity: Level 4.5 — Movement Catalyst

Primary Strength: Disciple-making as the organizing principle of a Western local-church body

Growth Opportunity: More published material on the liminality/communitas dimension — what it costs a senior pastor's family and identity to lead this shift

Strategic Insight: The Practitioner-Bridge mDNA Profile

Moran's mDNA profile is shaped like a practitioner, not like a theorist. Disciple-Making, Organic Systems, and Missional-Incarnational all score in the very-high band because his ministry has been operationally organized around them for over a decade. The lower (still strong) bands on Apostolic Environment and Liminality reflect that he leads from inside an established institution, not as a pioneer of new orgs — though New Generations and Mercy Alliance now extend that apostolic footprint.

Strategic implication: When Movemental positions Roy, the dominant frame should be Disciple-Making + Organic Systems in Western contexts. That is his uncontested niche.

Movement Leadership Map

Influence Area	Scope	Impact	Opportunity
Senior Pastors (U.S.)	National	High	Scale via cohort/course
DMM Practitioners (NA)	Regional/National	High	Convene via podcast + Mercy Alliance
Global DMM Network	Global (via New Generations)	Medium	Leverage as proof, not as primary audience
Denominational Decision-Makers	National	Medium	Underleveraged — DTS credibility gives a Baptist/evangelical handle
Seminaries	National	Low	Possible adjunct/lecture surface; not currently active
Marketplace / Covocational	Local/Regional	Low	Adjacent but not central to his calling

Content-Calling Alignment Matrix

Content Type	Serves Calling?	Alignment %	Priority	Action
Hybrid Church teaching	Yes	100%	HIGH	Productize as flagship cohort
DBS / obedience-based discipleship training	Yes	95%	HIGH	Standalone short course
Movement Conversations podcast	Yes	90%	HIGH	Centralize archive, sustain cadence
Pastoral transition coaching	Yes	90%	HIGH	Group + 1:1 coaching offer
Spent Matches book	Yes	95%	HIGH	Anniversary edition + human audiobook
Mercy Alliance training	Yes	85%	Medium	Refine and integrate with flagship cohort
Mercy/justice content (hunger, poverty)	Partial	60%	Medium	Keep — supports holism; not the lead
INMED board work	Adjacent	40%	Low	Personal calling; not platform content
Academic missiology	Not aligned	20%	Low	Avoid — not his lane and not his voice

Overall Alignment Strength: 90% (very strong alignment between calling and current content portfolio)

Alignment Gap: Almost all of his time is calling-aligned. The gap is capture and packaging, not output.

Strategic Opportunity: Convert the existing calling-aligned output into owned, scalable, recurring-revenue products without changing his focus.

APEST Indicators

Gifting	Strength	Evidence
Apostolic	""	Pioneered Hybrid framework, founded Mercy Alliance, leads New Generations Platform globally
Prophetic	"" ""	The "spent matches" diagnosis — naming what's broken in the attractional model — is prophetic in tone
Evangelistic		Original Shoal Creek vision was unchurched-seeker; remains evangelistically motivated
Shepherding		25 years of senior pastoral care; visible in pastoral tone of writing
Teaching		DTS-trained; podcast, books, training — sustained pedagogical output

Five-fold composite: Apostolic-Teacher with secondary Shepherd. Strong APE balance for a movement bridge role.

Digital Calling Opportunities

Opportunity	Calling Fit	Surface	Effort
Hybrid Church Lab cohort	100%	Movemental course platform	Medium
Pastor-to-pastor coaching collective	95%	Movemental community surface	Medium
DBS micro-course (lay-facing)	85%	Movemental + Mercy Alliance	Low
Movement Conversations searchable archive	90%	Movemental media hub	Low
Spent Matches 10-year anniversary edition	95%	Movemental publishing	Medium
AI-assisted "Ask Roy" agent trained on his corpus	80%	Movemental agent surface	Medium
Conference keynote pipeline	80%	External (existing)	Ongoing

AI-enhanced strategy: Moran's corpus (two books, ~100+ blog posts, weekly podcast transcripts) is large enough to train a faithful AI agent — and his "obedience over information" pedagogy actually requires an interactive coach more than a content library. This is a strategic fit, not a gimmick.

Calling-Aligned Content Cadence (Recommendation)

Cadence	Format	Surface
Weekly	Movement Conversations podcast	Owned + syndicated
Weekly	Short blog (300–500 words)	roymoran.com → newsletter
Monthly	Long-form pillar essay	Movemental publication
Quarterly	Cohort intake or coaching collective opening	Movemental
Annually	Anniversary content arc on the journey	Multi-surface
Ongoing	Mercy Alliance training events	KC + regional

Conclusion

Roy Moran's calling profile is unusually coherent — what he is doing, what he says he is called to do, and what the mDNA framework predicts he should be doing all align. The strategic move for Movemental is not to redirect his calling but to give it the infrastructure to scale: owned audience, productized cohorts, captured longitudinal data, and a permanent searchable archive.

Voice & Editorial Identity

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/roy-moran/profile/voice-analysis.md

Voice Analysis

Roy Moran writes and speaks as a practitioner-pastor, not an academic. His prose is first-person, candid, and story-led, built around vivid metaphor and a refusal of triumphalism. He admits what did not work, frames DMM as adaptive rather than magic, and speaks more from his own congregation than from aggregate statistics.

Attribute	Value
Tone	warm, prophetic, pastoral
Register	accessible practitioner / pastoral
Posture	reforming, not abandoning; convicted, not anti-institutional
Theological frame	evangelical, Great Commission-centric, Christology-grounded
Stance toward metrics	modest and embodied; "I will" obedience over attendance

Recurring phrases:

- "disciple-making movements"
- "person of peace"
- "obedience-based discipleship"
- "spiritual literacy"
- "obedience over information"
- "four generations"
- "the disciples we are making are not making disciples"
- "come and go"
- "reproducible" and "multiplicative"

Favorite metaphors:

- signal fire
- spent matches
- the hybrid car (two engines, one vehicle, switching modes by terrain)
- launchpad (Sunday as launchpad, not destination)
- beachhead

Failure-mode guard: Moran consistently avoids triumphalism and "burn it down" rhetoric. He critiques the attractional model while staying inside it, acknowledges what didn't work, and resists framing DMM as a step-by-step program — "I'm not selling a step-by-step program but a fresh application."

Spent Matches: Igniting the Signal Fire for the Spiritually Dissatisfied

Field	Value
Published	2015
Publisher	Thomas Nelson (Refraction)
Format	Paperback, ebook
Status	Active, in-print

Description: Moran's flagship, narrative-driven account of the journey from an attractional Willow Creek-style congregation to a hybrid church that holds attractional gathering and multiplicative Disciple-Making Movement practice together. Written for the spiritually dissatisfied — both the disengaged seeker and the senior pastor who senses the attendance metric is hollow — it tells the story of the mid-2000s crisis when Moran admitted the disciples his church made were not making disciples. It introduces the "signal fire" and "spent matches" imagery and lays out his core convictions: obedience over information, community before conversion, and Sunday as launchpad rather than destination.

Hybrid Church: How the local church can engage disciple-making movements strategy

Field	Value
Published	2017
Publisher	DMM Press
Format	Kindle; 2024 AI-narrated audiobook (Audible Virtual Voice)
Status	Active

Description: The systematic how-to companion to Spent Matches, aimed at senior leaders ready to act. It develops the Hybrid Church framework — the hybrid-car model of running an attractional Sunday gathering and a reproducible DMM network inside one congregation, switching modes by terrain. It walks through the practices a Western pastor needs to begin: Discovery Bible Study, obedience-based metrics, "person of peace" discernment, and four-generation reproduction as the test of genuine multiplication. Frameworks

Signature models and practices Roy Moran teaches and has published, grounded in Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015), Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017), his roymoran.com archive, and his Disciple-Making Movement lineage under David Watson.

Hybrid Church

Field	Value
Introduced	2017 (Hybrid Church: How the local church can engage disciple-making movements strategy)
Components	Attractional Sunday gathering held together with a multiplicative DMM track inside one body; mode-switching by terrain; "come and go"
Core convictions	Clarity of language · obedience over information · visible progress · community before conversion · Sunday as launchpad not destination
Audience logic	A gathering for the minority of Americans open to attending church; a multiplicative network for the majority who will never come on a Sunday
Source	Hybrid Church (roymoran.com)

Moran's signature model holds an attractional weekend service and a reproducing disciple-making network inside the same congregation, switching modes by context like a hybrid car so that one church can both gather a crowd and multiply disciples.

Disciple-Making Movements (DMM)

Field	Value
Introduced	Adapted for the West c. 2015 (Spent Matches); lineage from David Watson / CityTeam (Beyond)
Six characteristics	God-ordained · Spirit-dependent · Bible-centered · obedience-focused · discovery-based · disciple-driven
Aim	Reproducible discipleship reaching four generations of multiplication without professional-clergy mediation
Source	Spent Matches (Goodreads)

DMM is the obedience-based, reproducible disciple-making strategy — flourishing across Africa and Asia — that Moran translated into the language and structures of the North American church.

Discovery Bible Study (DBS)

Field	Value
Introduced	Taught throughout Spent Matches (2015) and his DMM training
Process	Read / retell the passage · observe what it says about God and people · identify an "I will" obedience response · share with someone · report back next time
Distinctive	Self-feeding, leaderless-reproducible group process; no professional teacher required
Source	Read Spent Matches in 20 Minutes (roymoran.com)

DBS is the simple, reproducible inductive group process at the engine of Moran's practice, where ordinary people discover Scripture together and commit to obey it rather than merely accumulate information.

Obedience-Based Discipleship

Field	Value
Introduced	Central thesis of Spent Matches (2015)
Mechanism	"I will" obedience statements · accountability and report-back · obedience tracked as the metric of growth
Contrast	Obedience over information; formation measured by what disciples do, not by attendance or knowledge
Source	Spent Matches notes (Justin Gravitt)

Moran's diagnosis is that Western Christianity is starved of obedience, so he organizes discipleship around acted-on "I will" commitments and report-back accountability rather than information transfer.

Person of Peace

Field	Value
Introduced	Taught in Spent Matches and DMM training; drawn from Luke 10
Function	Discern the receptive "person of peace" who opens a household or network to the gospel
Role	Entry point for a Discovery group; locus of multiplication into a new relational web
Source	Spent Matches (Goodreads)

The "person of peace" is the receptive individual — drawn from Jesus' sending instructions in Luke 10 — whom Moran teaches catalysts to look for as the natural doorway into a new household or social network.

Spiritual Literacy

Field	Value
Introduced	Framing tied to Moran's post-pastoral role as Shoal Creek's "spiritual literacy advocate"
Goal	Believers able to read, obey, and reproduce Scripture on their own — without depending on a professional teacher
Relation	The maturity outcome DBS and obedience-based discipleship are designed to produce
Source	Roy Moran (roymoran.com)

Spiritual literacy is Moran's name for the end goal of his discipleship: ordinary Christians who can feed themselves on Scripture and pass it on, rather than remaining dependent on clergy to interpret and apply the Bible for them.

Performance Summary

Strongest assets (by external citation and sustained production):

1. Spent Matches — canonical Moran reference across missional/DMM media
2. The Hybrid Church concept — crossed into broader missional vocabulary (2025 "decade revisited" reframes)
3. Shoal Creek Community Church case study — cited in secondary sources
4. Movement Conversations — weekly cadence is itself a durable asset

Weakest surfaces:

1. YouTube — no concentrated owned channel
2. Hybrid Church (book) — strong concept, thinner distribution; audiobook is AI-narrated
3. roymoran.com — content depth exceeds visible SEO/traffic structure
4. Email — no owned list despite lead-magnet page

Content Inventory Gaps (leader-facing)

These are gaps in Roy's published corpus and owned channels, not platform recommendations:

Area	Current state
Owned email audience	None confirmed
Central video library	Fragmented across third-party uploads
Spent Matches audiobook	Not released
Searchable podcast archive on owned domain	Not built
Flagship structured cohort/course	Informal training only (Mercy Alliance)

Academic Work

Formal Credentials

Baylor University	Undergraduate	Greek studies	Biblical languages; Baptist-evangelical formation (~1972-1976)
Dallas Theological Seminary	ThM	Theology / ministry	Classical Western seminary training (~1976-1980)

Roy Moran is seminary-trained but practitioner-oriented. His public corpus is books, blog, podcast, and congregational case study — not peer-reviewed missiology journals or academic monographs.

Published Academic Work

Type	Count	Notes
Peer-reviewed journal articles	0 confirmed	Operates as pastor-practitioner, not academic missiologist
Academic monographs	0	Trade and practitioner books only (Spent Matches, Hybrid Church)
Seminary teaching appointments	0 confirmed	Guest speaking at conferences; not a faculty role

Practitioner Credentials (non-academic but formative)

Board member	New Generations International	2017	Global movement ecosystem
Board member	Institute of International Medicine (INMED)	2008	Medical missions intersection
Board member	ReEngage Staffing Services	2014	—

Founder & Executive Director	Mercy Alliance International	2020s	Training and resource hub

Instructional Design Training

Credential	Year	Notes
Gnowbe instructional design certificates	2020	Digital course design training; no flagship course product released yet

Assessment

Roy's authority rests on 25 years of congregational practice, two trade books, weekly podcast production, and leadership in the New Generations / Beyond / Mercy Alliance ecosystem — not on academic publishing. His Dallas Theological Seminary ThM is a credibility marker for senior-pastor audiences, especially those skeptical of missional theory without pastoral tenure.

For Author Profile purposes: academic section documents credentials and board/service roles; the substantive intellectual contribution lives in books, frameworks, and the Shoal Creek case study.

Current Training Offerings

Roy Moran teaches and trains primarily through in-person events, organizational channels, and informal Mercy Alliance programming — not through a owned, productized online course platform.

Mercy Alliance International Training

Field	Value
Organization	Mercy Alliance International (mercyalliance.org)
Roy's role	Founder & Executive Director
Format	In-person and regional training events
Topics	DMM practice, Hybrid Church transition, obedience-based discipleship, mercy/spiritual integration
Productization	Informal — resources on site; no confirmed flagship cohort SKU

Mercy Alliance is the operational home for Roy's training content. Events are likely captured internally but not published as a searchable public course catalog.

Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation

Field	Value
Location	Pine River, Minnesota
Format	Recurring consultation/training event
Focus	Hybrid Church framework for established churches
Status	Ongoing event format referenced in Roy's published work

This is Roy's named consultative training brand for senior leaders exploring the hybrid model.

Organizational Training Surfaces

Venue	Role	Format
New Generations	Global Team Leader, Platform	Network training, global practitioner convening
Beyond / CityTeam lineage	Board member	DMM ecosystem training adjacency
Shoal Creek Community Church	Directional leader	Congregational formation (not a public course)

Instructional Design Background

Credential	Year	Notes
Gnowbe instructional design certificates	2020	Suggests intent toward digital course design; no flagship self-paced or cohort product confirmed

Assessment

Roy's teaching authority is live and relational — conferences, consultations, Mercy Alliance events, and podcast interviews — rather than packaged as a recurring cohort or LMS course. For senior pastors, the implied next product shape would be a structured multi-week Hybrid Church cohort; that does not yet exist as a confirmed offering.

Closest existing training assets:

1. Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation (event)
2. Mercy Alliance regional training
3. Hybrid Church book as curriculum backbone
4. Movement Conversations as ongoing practitioner education (podcast, not course)

See digital-presence/websites.md for Mercy Alliance; content/books.md for published curriculum sources.

Organizations & Affiliations

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/roy-moran/network/organizations.md

Organizations

Roy Moran's organizational life spans a local congregation, a movement-training hub he founded, and a global Disciple-Making Movement network — the three together hold his attractional, training, and movement-data work.

Shoal Creek Community Church

Moran co-founded Shoal Creek Community Church in the Kansas City metropolitan area in 1992 with his wife Candy and four others, planting it on the Willow Creek attractional template. It grew to more than 1,000 attendees and became the longest-running U.S. case study of a hybrid attractional-plus-multiplicative congregation. He served as senior pastor for roughly twenty-five years and now holds the role of directional leader and "spiritual literacy advocate."

Mercy Alliance International

Moran is the founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International, a Kansas City-based hub for Disciple-Making Movement training, hybrid coaching, and regional coordination. Its tagline is "Catalyzing Disciple-Making Movements," and it emphasizes the hybrid "come and go" transition for established Western churches. It is where his informal training cohorts and digital resources currently live.

New Generations

Moran serves as Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations, the network led by Jerry Trousdale that documents disciples and churches across Africa, Asia, and Latin America. He joined its leadership around 2017. The role gives him weekly access to global DMM data and connects him to the broader Beyond / New Generations / 24:14 Coalition constellation.

Board memberships and lineage

Moran has served on the boards of Beyond (formerly CityTeam International), the David Watson organization from which his DMM practice descends; New Generations International; the Institute of International Medicine (INMED); and ReEngage Staffing Services. His DMM lineage runs through David Watson (mentor) and connects him to peers and co-laborers including Jerry Trousdale, Curtis Sergeant, Doug Cobb, Stan Parks, and Mike Moran.

Audience & Reach

Audience Analysis: Roy Moran

Status: Complete

Last updated: 2026-06-03

Overview

Roy Moran's audience sits across a line that is usually hard to cross: U.S. seminary-trained senior pastors and global obedience-based disciple-making movement (DMM) practitioners. His credibility in both worlds comes from 25 years leading Shoal Creek Community Church in Kansas City while building a parallel multiplicative track inside the same congregation, then publishing that journey in Spent Matches (2015) and Hybrid Church (2017).

Most missional voices reach pastors or practitioners, not both. Moran can address attractional megachurch leaders and interview a Nepali DMM catalyst in the same week — and both audiences tend to receive him as one of their own.

Primary Audience Segments

Segment 1: Convicted Senior Pastors of Established Churches

Who they are

- Typically 40–65 years old, predominantly male, seminary-trained
- Pastoring congregations of roughly 250–2,500 attendees; often founder or tenured 10+ years
- Theologically evangelical; not anti-institutional but increasingly aware the attractional model is fragile
- May have read Frost, Hirsch, or Stetzer but find purely missional theology too theoretical
- Often describe a "spent matches" feeling — best ideas burned through without disciples reproducing disciples

What they need

- An on-ramp from attractional to multiplicative ministry without abandoning the existing congregation
- Story-driven, first-person guidance with "Monday morning" specificity
- A sequenced multi-year transition pattern (language → structures → metrics)

- Peer testimony from other pastors who made a similar shift

How Roy serves them

He writes as the slightly-ahead colleague who walked the same path inside the same kind of church. Spent Matches is the narrative entry; the Hybrid Church framework is the operating manual.

Preferred channels

Books → podcast → conference stages → cohort-style learning (when available)

Segment 2: North American DMM Practitioners and Catalysts

Who they are

- Typically 30–60 years old, mixed denominational background (Baptist, nondenominational, charismatic)
- Often bivocational; many connected to Mercy Alliance, Beyond, New Generations, or CityTeam-legacy networks
- Already convinced of DMM; seeking sustained peer ecosystem and Western-context wisdom
- Heavy podcast consumers; lighter book buyers than the pastor segment

What they need

- Field intelligence and peer connection
- Contextualization help for suburban and urban North American settings
- Practitioner interviews, case studies, and obedience-based pedagogy
- Failure narratives — what did not work and why

How Roy serves them

He is among the most consistent North America-located DMM media voices: weekly Movement Conversations podcast, blog cadence, and conference presence.

Preferred channels

Podcast, retreats, in-person training, practitioner networks

Segment 3: Global DMM Practitioners

Who they are

- DMM catalysts across Indonesia, India, Sub-Saharan Africa, Latin America, and Europe
- Affiliated with New Generations, 24:14 Coalition, Beyond, and related networks
- Their movements often document multi-generation reproduction

- Roy functions as a U.S. pastoral voice advocating for the model in Western church contexts

How Roy serves them

As podcast host, board member, and convening figure — amplifying Global South practice and translating lessons for U.S. pastoral language.

Preferred channels

New Generations organizational channels, donor-network meetings, WhatsApp groups, in-person gatherings

Segment 4: Lay Disciple-Makers

Who they are

- Everyday Christians seeking a simple, reproducible way to disciple a neighbor or coworker without seminary training
- Often arrive through friend recommendation or a church handoff

What they need

- Short, visual, immediately usable tools (Discovery Bible Study starters, simple obedience frameworks)

Gap

Much of Roy's published content is pastor-pitched rather than lay-pitched. The "Read Spent Matches in 20 Minutes" lead asset on roymoran.com is one bridge toward this segment.

Preferred channels

Friend recommendation, church handoff, simple book or PDF tools

Content Consumption Patterns

Format	Senior pastors	DMM practitioners	Lay disciple-makers
Books	High	Moderate	Low
Podcasts	High	High	Moderate
Long-form articles	Moderate	Moderate	Low
Short video	Moderate	Moderate	Moderate
Cohorts / courses	High	Moderate	Low
Peer community	High	High	Low
Email newsletter	Moderate	Moderate	Low

Audience Bridge

Roy's unusual strength is holding pastoral and practitioner audiences together. They want different language, formats, and proof points — but he is a rare leader through whom either segment can be invited into the other's frame.

For content planning: treat the segments as distinct channels and tones, not one collapsed funnel. Senior pastors respond to first-person congregational narrative; practitioners respond to field interviews and Western contextualization; global partners respond to convening and amplification rather than product sales.

Platform Assessment

Roy produces consistently across books, blog, and weekly podcast — but distribution is dispersed: podcast on third-party directories, video on others' channels, books on retailer pages. The owned surfaces (roymoran.com, mercyalliance.org) anchor the corpus but do not yet centralize audio/video archives or email capture.

Assessment

Roy Moran does not operate a confirmed email newsletter or owned mailing list, despite:

- 100+ blog posts on roymoran.com since ~2013
- A weekly Movement Conversations podcast (100+ episodes)
- Two published books with ongoing citation and interview demand
- A "Read Spent Matches in 20 Minutes" lead page that could function as a list-building asset

Audience connection currently flows through third-party podcast directories, social platforms (LinkedIn, Facebook), retailer pages (Amazon, Goodreads), and organizational channels (New Generations, Mercy Alliance) — none of which give Roy a direct, portable audience list.

For senior pastors and DMM practitioners who consume his content, email is a natural complement to books and podcast — but it remains the largest unbuilt owned channel in his digital estate.

Related (not Roy-owned lists)

These institutional audiences may overlap with Roy's reach but are not confirmed to feed a personal list:

- New Generations donor and partner networks
- Mercy Alliance training participants
- Shoal Creek Community Church congregation
- Beyond / CityTeam-legacy organizational communications

No newsletter as of 2026-06-03. Re-audit if roymoran.com adds email capture.

Social Media: Roy Moran

Status: Complete

Last updated: 2026-06-03

Active Profiles

Platform	Handle / URL	Followers (approx.)	Activity	Owned list?
LinkedIn	linkedin.com/in/roy-moran-5b28003	~2,000	Active — thought-leadership posts	No
Facebook	facebook.com/royemoran	Not quantified	Active personal page; community-style posts	No

LinkedIn is the strongest social surface for professional pastoral and DMM-network visibility. Facebook functions as a supplementary community channel rather than a primary content funnel.

Video (Social Adjacent)

Platform	Status	Notes
YouTube (personal channel)	None confirmed	Content exists only as third-party uploads (iDisciple, event hosts, Shoal Creek)
Facebook video	Occasional	Via personal page

There is no owned YouTube channel aggregating 25 years of teaching and conference content.

Indirect Social Reach

Roy's podcast and organizational roles extend reach through platforms he does not personally own:

- Movement Conversations on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, and other directories
- New Generations organizational channels
- Mercy Alliance training and event promotion

Engagement Patterns

- LinkedIn: suited to repurposing blog and podcast insights; currently a thin engagement layer relative to content production volume
 - Facebook: personal/community tone; not optimized as a structured content archive
 - Podcast directories: highest sustained engagement channel for the DMM practitioner segment

Summary

Social presence is active but platform-dependent. Roy publishes regularly through podcast and blog, with LinkedIn and Facebook as secondary surfaces. The main limitation is weak owned-audience capture — no newsletter, no centralized video channel, and no social funnel tying followers back to an email list or searchable content archive on roymoran.com.

The Fragmentation Story

Roy Moran: The Fragmentation Story

Generated 2026-05-20 by inline synthesis from existing dossier files (no upstream fragmentation-story skill run).

The Story

Roy Moran has spent thirty-plus years building one of the most unusual ministries in the North American church — a 1,000-attendee attractional congregation in Kansas City that also runs an obedience-based Disciple-Making Movement (DMM) track inside the same body. He co-founded Shoal Creek Community Church in 1992 with his wife Candy Moran and four others, originally on the Willow Creek attractional template, and served as senior pastor for twenty-five years before transitioning to the title "directional leader and spiritual literacy advocate." Somewhere in the mid-2000s he hit the existential crisis that organizes the rest of his work — the disciples we are making are not making disciples — and the long mentorship under David Watson (CityTeam International, now Beyond) that followed pulled him into the global obedience-based DMM lineage. He now serves as Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations — the Jerry Trousedale-led network that has documented millions of disciples and hundreds of thousands of churches across Africa, Asia, and Latin America — and as Founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International, a Kansas City hub for DMM training and hybrid coaching. Across the Movement Conversations — Powered by New Generations podcast (weekly since 2020), Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson / Refraction, 2015), and Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017), he has built the only widely-published Western on-ramp into DMM that doesn't require pastors to abandon their congregation.

That is an unusually coherent body of work — a published framework, a lived 25-year case study, a global ecosystem role, and a sustained weekly media property. And yet the picture that emerges from the dossier is of a high-output, low-capture leader whose actual influence sits at least an order of magnitude larger than the surface anyone can search. The 25-year Shoal Creek hybrid experiment — the single most valuable thing he owns — has never been written up as a longitudinal case study with real metrics (baptisms, DBS groups, four-generation depth, attendance vs. dispersion ratios). The weekly podcast catalog of 100+ episodes is scattered across Apple Podcasts, Spotify, Audible, iHeart, Stitcher, Deezer, and Podcast Addict with no canonical web home, no searchable archive, no topical index. The blog at roymoran.com is 100+ posts deep and active since ~2013 but under-traffics relative to its content depth. There is no newsletter. There is no flagship cohort or course. There is no human-narrated audiobook of Spent Matches — the trade-published title with the broadest reach is audio-illegible — and the 2024 Hybrid Church audiobook is AI-narrated through Audible's Virtual Voice rather than recorded.

In short: Roy Moran is the credentialed Western pastor with a globally-validated framework and a clear convictional center, whose expertise is distributed across at least eight platforms he doesn't own. The Movemental thesis — fragmentation is solved by infrastructure, not new content — describes his situation precisely. He already has the content, the network, and the conviction. What he lacks is the owned platform, the course architecture, the longitudinal data capture, and the unified video library that would let his actual influence be seen.

Informational Fragmentation

Books

Two books, both in print, with significant audiobook and anniversary-edition gaps.

1. Spent Matches: Igniting the Signal Fire for the Spiritually Dissatisfied — Thomas Nelson / Refraction imprint, 2015. ISBN 978-0-7180-3062-9, ~256 pages, paperback + eBook. The narrative on-ramp; flagship book for the senior-pastor audience. Goodreads ~4.0/5 across 50+ ratings. Audiobook: none. Anniversary / 10-year edition: none in confirmed production (the 2025 Nexus "decade revisited" cycle shows appetite but no edition is in hand).
2. Hybrid Church: How the local church can engage disciple-making movements strategy — DMM Press (self/imprint), Kindle 2017; audiobook 2024 via Audible Virtual Voice (AI-narrated). The systematic how-to companion to Spent Matches; aimed at senior leaders ready to act. Human-narrated audiobook: UNKNOWN — needs research / likely missing.

Retail footprint: Amazon, Audible (UK and US storefronts), Goodreads, ThriftBooks, Google Books confirmed. No bundled author hub cross-references the two titles into a unified product line.

Assessments & Tools

- None discovered. No personal diagnostic instrument comparable to APEST or 5Q.
- DBS as a reproducible method is functionally his "tool" but is not packaged as a self-serve assessment or onboarding instrument.

Apps / Software

- None discovered.
- "Ask Roy" AI agent trained on his two books, ~100+ blog posts, and podcast transcripts — recommended in the dossier as a strategic fit because his "obedience over information" pedagogy actually requires an interactive coach more than a content library. Not yet built.

Unpublished / Internal Material

- The Shoal Creek longitudinal case study — 25+ years of pastoral data on hybrid practice. Baptisms, DBS group counts, four-generation reproductions, attendance vs. dispersion ratios. Referenced everywhere across the dossier and written up nowhere. Almost certainly exists in church records, his personal notes, and the institutional memory of the original co-founders.
- The mentorship transcript with David Watson (~2008-2014) — formation that shaped his DMM practice. Likely exists as notes, journal, conversation memory — not externalized.
- New Generations Platform global data — weekly access to DMM data from Indonesia, India, Sub-Saharan Africa, Latin America, and Europe flowing through his role. Institutional, not personal.
- Mercy Alliance International country footprint and budget — scale, partner orgs, and country list not publicly itemized.
- Endorsements / forewords Roy has written for other DMM authors: not yet surfaced.
- 25 years of pastoral coaching conversations with other senior pastors considering the hybrid shift — likely the largest single repository of his pragmatic judgment.

- Field exposure: Indonesia, India, Africa, South America, Europe — his own statement, "five years studying the great movements."

- Successor at Shoal Creek: current day-to-day senior pastor UNKNOWN — needs research. Roy retains the "directional leader" title; the year he handed off day-to-day pastoral leadership is not pinned down.

Where Relationships Are Actually Stored

- Inside New Generations' staff systems, donor CRM, and regional team rosters — the largest institutional store, with global reach.
- Inside Mercy Alliance International's training event registrations and partner lists.
- Inside Shoal Creek Community Church's membership / DBS group rosters — 25+ years of relational continuity.

- Beyond / CityTeam International board and donor relationships.
- Conference relational networks — iDisciple, Multiply DMM Summit, Trout Lake, St Hild — held by event hosts.
- Podcast guest backchannel — 100+ episodes of relationships with global DMM practitioners, held in his personal email + scheduling.
- Personal email and phone — almost certainly the largest single store of long-standing relational continuity; no personal CRM observed.
- The David Watson legacy network — held in memory and inside Beyond's institutional records.
- No unified personal CRM observed on roymoran.com or mercyalliance.org.

Embodied / In-Their-Head Layer

This is the layer where Roy's actual influence concentrates — and where the gap is largest. Decades of DMM field experience and 25 years of senior-pastor case-work do not externalize easily.

- The pragmatic wisdom of running an attractional Sunday gathering and an obedience-based DMM track in the same congregation simultaneously — what to say in staff meetings, how to sequence the multi-year transition (his pattern: year 1 language, year 2 structures, year 3 metrics), how to handle the elders, how to talk to a long-time member who liked the old model. Almost none of this is in either book in operational detail.
- The judgment calls about pastoral identity loss during the shift — what it costs a senior pastor's family and identity to lead this kind of multi-year disorientation. The Calling profile explicitly flags this as the lower-scored mDNA dimension (Liminality & Communitas, 70%) and the most under-published part of his story.
- Conversation patterns with David Watson during the ~2008–2014 mentorship — how Watson asked questions, what he refused to systematize, the field instincts behind obedience-based discipleship. Watson is now late; these conversations exist only as Roy's memory and notes.
- Curation decisions for Movement Conversations — who to invite, which themes to foreground (indigenous incarnation, supernatural manifestations, person of peace, family-unit targeting, unconventional leadership), how to sequence a year of episodes. The accumulated editorial intelligence behind 100+ weekly interviews lives in his head.
- Global field instincts from five years studying movements across Indonesia, India, Sub-Saharan Africa, South America, and Europe — pattern recognition that exists nowhere as a public artifact.
- Coaching wisdom for the senior pastor mid-shift — 1:1 and small-group sessions through Mercy Alliance and informal pastor-to-pastor coffees; almost certainly the most pedagogically valuable thing he does, and the least captured.

- The Shoal Creek institutional memory — what worked and what failed across 30+ years; the DBS group lineage; the specific Kansas City neighborhoods, workplaces, schools, and prisons where the multiplicative track has and hasn't taken root.
- The Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation room dynamics — what kinds of questions surface from senior pastors mid-transition; the consultation curriculum exists implicitly in how he runs the event.
- The New Generations Platform briefing room — the global DMM data flowing through Roy's weekly role exposes him to patterns the public never sees; his interpretation of that data is not documented.
- The Mercy Alliance International country footprint and partner relationships — held in his head and Alyssa Sanders'.
- The Kansas City missional ecosystem — three decades of relational connective tissue across churches, planters, leaders, and donors.

Synthesis

Roy Moran's fragmentation is not a content problem — it is an infrastructure and capture problem inside a body of work that is already unusually coherent. His calling, his content, and his ecosystem all point in the same direction (Hybrid Church + obedience-based DMM in Western contexts, with global movement data flowing through New Generations); the Calling profile rates content-calling alignment at 90%. What is missing is the infrastructure that would let the body of work be seen, sequenced, and acted on: a unified owned audience (no newsletter on a 13-year content footprint), a flagship cohort (no Hybrid Church Lab despite the demand and the curriculum being mostly written across his two books, his blog, and his Mercy Alliance training), a canonical podcast archive (100+ weekly episodes scattered across at least seven distribution platforms with no searchable topical home), a video library (a single personal YouTube channel does not exist), and — most consequentially — a written longitudinal case study of the 25-year Shoal Creek hybrid experiment with the actual metrics that would convert the framework from anecdote to validated practice.

The single largest pool of trapped value is the 25-year Shoal Creek hybrid case study itself — it is the credibility anchor of every other piece of his work, it is referenced everywhere, and it has never been quantitatively documented. The second-largest is the 100+ Movement Conversations episode archive — sustained weekly DMM content for five-plus years with no canonical web home and no searchable topical index. The third is the embodied pastoral coaching wisdom that lives in 1:1 conversations through Mercy Alliance and informal pastor-to-pastor coffees. Roy is precisely the kind of practitioner Movemental's infrastructure is designed to consolidate: he is producing the content already, the framework is already published, the network is already built — what is missing is the owned platform layer that turns scattered output into a compounding, captured, ownable body of work.

A Letter — Reflected Understanding

docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/reflected-understanding/roy-moran.md

Roy Moran: Reflected Understanding

A concise reflection spoken back so the language could be endorsed — familiar, but with edges that deepen. (Leader-safe: audience-sizing and commerce analysis are kept in staff notes, not here.)

Calling

You're called to be a bridge — to carry obedience-based, reproducible disciple-making across a divide that most leaders treat as uncrossable. On one side stands the classically trained Western senior pastor: seminary-formed, responsible for a Sunday gathering, accountable to a congregation that exists. On the other stands the Disciple-Making Movement world — the obedience-focused, discovery-based, four-generations practice that has produced movements across Africa and Asia. Almost no one is trusted on both sides at once. You are, because you've lived both: twenty-five years as a senior pastor of the church you and Candy co-founded, and a long apprenticeship in DMM under David Watson after you were finally willing to say out loud that the disciples your church was making were not making disciples.

Your calling is not to plant the next great Sunday service, and not to abandon the local church for pure movement work. It's to hold the two together until the wider Western church can do the same — to keep an attractional gathering and a multiplicative track inside one body without forcing a leader to tear down what they already have. The language you already use is the right language: Hybrid Church, spiritual literacy, obedience over information, the disciples we're making aren't making disciples. It's pastoral and practitioner-grounded rather than theoretical — you're not selling a system, you're handing over a field manual you wrote because you needed it yourself. And it stays tethered to Scripture, to a reproducible practice ordinary people can carry, and to the real cost a senior pastor's identity pays to lead this shift.

Existing Content (before the platform we're building)

Where it lives. Your content lives in two books — Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015), the narrative on-ramp, and Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017), the how-to companion; in roymoran.com, where an archive of a hundred-plus posts spans Disciple-Making Movements, Hybrid Church, DBS practice, and lessons from twenty-five years at Shoal Creek; in the weekly Movement Conversations podcast you've hosted since 2020, one of only a handful of sustained DMM media properties in English; in conference and consultation teaching (iDisciple 2014, the Multiply DMM Summit alongside Jerry Trousdale and Mike Moran, the Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation, Mercy Alliance training); and in the organizations you lead — Mercy Alliance International and your Platform role at New Generations, which keeps you connected weekly to global movement data.

Credibility. It's high, and it's unusual. You hold Dallas Theological Seminary credentials and a lived twenty-five-year hybrid case study at one congregation — a combination that makes your turn toward DMM credible to the very pastors who would dismiss a foreign-mission theory. The issue was never authority. It's visibility, structure, and reuse.

How it lives online now. As scattered pieces. Your books sit on retailer and publisher pages. Your blog holds real topical depth but under-surfaces for the searches it should own — "hybrid church," "DBS in a Western setting," "DMM in America." Your podcast is distributed across Apple, Spotify, and others with no single searchable home you control. Your teaching videos are uploaded by event hosts to third-party channels, with no central library; there is no one place where "everything Roy has said and written about the Hybrid Church" is gathered, linked, and findable. So the work doesn't move the way it could — it stays where it was first put.

The NOTs this platform addresses directly. Your content is largely not structured and repurposed so it lives as findable digital content (talks → articles, book themes → a cohort); not gathered into a single owned home for the podcast archive and the video library; not optimized so searchers for hybrid church, DBS, or DMM in the West land on your material first; not connected to an AI that reflects your voice and corpus — which fits you especially well, since your "obedience over information" pedagogy wants an interactive coach more than a static library; and not owned and unified under one surface you control rather than platforms you rent. This platform is built to speak to each of these — structure and repurpose, a single owned home, discoverability, an AI that serves your voice, and ownership — so your content can move.

Constraints

The gap in your work is not output — it's capture and packaging. Almost everything you do is already aligned to your calling: you preach, you train, you record a weekly podcast, you coach pastors, you carry New Generations and Mercy Alliance. The constraint is the same one every working movement leader lives under: the hours are spent in the room — with pastors mid-transition, with catalysts, with the congregation that still looks to you as directional leader — not on content strategy, SEO, or building a unified digital home. The teaching gets done; the recording gets left with whoever hosted the event; the archive never gets organized. The desire to reach every leader God puts in front of you is there; the time to structure, translate, and amplify all of it at scale typically is not. A platform that reduces that lift — that captures, structures, connects, and surfaces what you're already producing — meets the constraint without asking you to become a different kind of leader than the practitioner-pastor you are.

Welcome Letter

`docs/movement_leader_research/_onboarded_leaders/roy-moran/welcome-letter.md`

Roy

You have built one of the most unusual hybrid bodies of work in North American church practice. Thirty-plus years of ministry, including twenty-five as senior pastor of Shoal Creek Community Church in Kansas City — co-founded in 1992 with Candy Moran on the Willow Creek template, later running an obedience-based Disciple-Making Movement track inside the same body. A ThM from Dallas Theological Seminary, biblical-language work at Baylor, and a long mentorship under David Watson at CityTeam International that pulled you into the global DMM lineage. Two books — Spent Matches: Igniting the Signal Fire for the Spiritually Dissatisfied with Thomas Nelson's Refraction imprint in 2015, and Hybrid Church: How the local church can engage disciple-making movements strategy with DMM Press in 2017. Founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International. And the role that holds the global side of the work together: Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations — the Jerry Trousdale-led network behind millions of disciples across Africa, Asia, and Latin America.

All of it is somewhere. None of it is in one place. Spent Matches sits on Amazon, Goodreads, Audible, ThriftBooks, and Google Books with no human-narrated audiobook ten years after publication. Hybrid Church sits on the same surfaces with an Audible Virtual Voice AI-narrated audiobook from 2024 in place of a recorded one. Your Movement Conversations — Powered by New Generations podcast, weekly since 2020 and a hundred-plus episodes deep, lives scattered across Apple Podcasts, Spotify, Audible, iHeart, Stitcher, and Deezer with no canonical web archive under your name. The blog at roymoran.com is more than a hundred posts deep across DMM, Hybrid Church, DBS practice, and fads-versus-fundamentals, but under-ranks on SEO for "hybrid church" and "DBS Western context." External citations from Vision Clarity, Experience Life, and More Disciples suggest topical authority is real and surfacing is broken. There is no newsletter, no flagship cohort, no Substack. The relational layer is held the same way. New Generations holds the Global South coordinator network. Beyond holds the David Watson mentorship lineage on its board records since 2015. The 24:14 Coalition holds the worldwide DMM movement-leader graph. Mercy Alliance training cohorts live inside the org. Shoal Creek congregational and DBS-group rosters live inside the church. The Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation attendee list lives at the camp in Pine River. The Dallas Seminary alumni rolodex of senior-pastor relationships lives in your phone. What is missing is the layer above all of this that lets a senior pastor walk from any one piece to every other, and that lets a Trout Lake attendee stay connected after the workshop ends.

The largest pool of value, and the one most at risk of going unwritten, sits in your head. The twenty-five-year Shoal Creek hybrid experiment — the single most valuable thing you own — has never been written up as a longitudinal case study with real metrics: baptisms by year, DBS groups, four-generation depth, attendance-versus-dispersion ratios. The judgment calls behind the mid-2000s pivot — when the disciples we are making are not making disciples hit you — exist in conversation. The curation behind the Trout Lake Hybrid Church Consultation lives in workshop memory and not on paper. The DBS-in-a-Western-context patterns live in coaching calls. The thirty-year pastoral wisdom from Shoal Creek lives in classrooms, on the back porch of the Mercy Alliance office, and in the same conversation having happened a thousand times.

This is where Movemental's AI does work that was not previously possible. The inventory just walked through — the two books, the podcast scattered across eight distribution platforms, the blog archive, the institutional homes of your work and your relationships — was compiled by AI sitting with your public corpus for the time it would have taken a human researcher weeks. The same approach now turns toward what is not yet public: AI-assisted longitudinal capture of the Shoal Creek twenty-five-year case, course-note extraction from the Trout Lake Consultation, interview capture of the David Watson mentorship, transcription of the Movement Conversations back catalog into searchable text, dictation that becomes draft and draft that becomes essay. The embodied layer can be surfaced at your pace rather than at a publisher's. The AI does not replace the voice. Every draft is yours to edit, refuse, or rewrite. The tools do the inventorying and the connective tissue. Authorship stays yours.

This is what the dashboard is built to do, and what we will do with you. First, aggregate. Both books, the Movement Conversations archive, the roymoran.com blog corpus, the Trout Lake Consultation outlines, the Mercy Alliance training material, and the embodied layer as it gets surfaced, pulled into one hub under your name. Second, interconnect. Spent Matches points at Hybrid Church points at the Shoal Creek twenty-five-year case study points at the Movement Conversations episodes that name it points back at the blog posts where the DBS framework gets unpacked. Third, repurpose. The Shoal Creek case becomes a written longitudinal study; the Trout Lake Consultation becomes a public sequenced cohort with Hybrid Church inside it as the textbook; Movement Conversations gets a searchable web archive under your name; Spent Matches gets a human-narrated audiobook and a ten-year anniversary edition. Fourth, amplify. SEO, network effects with the 24:14 Coalition and the Beyond network, the references that arrive once your work is findable from one address. The work this season is not authorship. It is translation of what you have already authored into a form practitioners can actually reach.

A year from now, roymoran.com looks different. A Hybrid Church hub gathers Spent Matches, Hybrid Church, the Shoal Creek case study, the Trout Lake cohort sign-up, and the relevant Movement Conversations episodes under one canonical address. A searchable Movement Conversations archive replaces the platform diaspora. The blog gets pillar pages on hybrid church, Western DBS, and the Shoal Creek twenty-five-year story. A newsletter exists that did not before. A senior pastor in Des Moines, Iowa, who has never heard of New Generations, finds Spent Matches on a Tuesday morning, listens to the relevant Movement Conversations episode over lunch, and starts a DBS group of three by Sunday.

This is your next season. The work ahead is making the body of work you have already built reach the practitioners it was written for. Your role at New Generations does not contradict this; it is the reason it has to happen now. The senior pastors of attractional churches across

North America quietly asking your question — the disciples we are making are not making disciples — need to find your teaching without a Beyond or 24:14 conference introducing them. Right now they cannot.

Editorial bio

Roy Moran pastored Shoal Creek Community Church in Kansas City for twenty-five years before he was willing to admit out loud that the disciples he was making were not making disciples. That recognition — and the long mentorship under David Watson that followed it — turned a Dallas Theological Seminary-trained, Willow Creek-shaped attractional pastor into the rare Western voice trusted equally by senior pastors of established congregations and by global Disciple-Making Movement practitioners. He still leads Shoal Creek as its directional leader and spiritual literacy advocate, alongside his wife Candy, who co-founded the church with him in 1992.

His books carry that double credibility. Spent Matches (Thomas Nelson, 2015) tells the story; Hybrid Church (DMM Press, 2017) systematizes it as a playbook for other senior leaders — the integrated "come and go" model that holds an attractional Sunday gathering and a multiplicative DMM track inside one congregation. He now serves as Global Team Leader, Platform at New Generations, the Jerry Trousedale-led network documenting millions of disciples and hundreds of thousands of churches across Africa, Asia, and Latin America, and as founder and Executive Director of Mercy Alliance International. His weekly Movement Conversations podcast is one of only a handful of sustained DMM media properties in the English-speaking world.
